THE COVER: In the early days of Brigham Young Academy, Karl G. Maeser often compared the school to a Banyan tree, whose branches send out numerous aerial roots that reach down to the soil and give rise to new trunks, thus covering an ever-expanding area. This comparison made a particular appeal to the 1914 Studentbody Vice-president Belle Wilson, who submitted the name Banyan as a winning entry in the yearbook contest to name the book.

On the cover of the 1965 Banyan, artist Mike Graves has attempted to depict the ever-widening influence of BYU as symbolized by the Banyan tree design. The trunk represents the body of the University; the top and horizontal branches represent the continuing growth of the school in the form of scholastic and spiritual matters; the branches that take root away from the mother trunk are indicative of the individuals that leave the University but forever retain physical, intellectual, and spiritual ties.

In the Fall of 1776 Father Francisco Escalante and his party, the first white men to visit Utah Valley, reached the shores of the 30-mile long Utah Lake on their historic quest of a shorter route from Santa Fe, New Mexico, to Monterrey, California. The explorers were fascinated by the richness of the land and they described it as "The most pleasant, beautiful, and fertile in all New Spain." Seventy-one years latter, the valley's beauty and fertility attracted another group: the Mormon pioneers, who after their hazardous trek across the Great Plains came to explore the plush basin, and soon thereafter began its colonization.

Today, like many areas of the West, Utah Valley is a land of contrasts. Clustered in the wide valleys and on the level plains are the devices of modern civilization, but the outstanding scenery has changed little. One has only to travel a few miles in any direction to reach primitive, virgin terrain, that remains much as it was when first viewed by the early explorers and settlers. The abundance of water, wild game, rich soil, and rugged terrain . . . all combine to provide a great variety of agricultural and recreational opportunities.

A CITY OF OPPORTUNITIES

Downtown Provo (above) still has the charm and peace of a small city. Cultural opportunities equal those of much larger cities.

Horticulturists around the Provo area have made Utah County the leader in the state in the production of apples, pears and peaches.

In 1825 a young French-Canadian trapper by the name of Etienne Provost came into the territory to explore the valley which one day was to become a rich agricultural center. It was this relatively unknown woodsman for whom Provo City, originally known as Fort Utah, and later simply as Provo, was named. Provo, the county seat of Utah County, is also the third largest city in the state with a population of over 40,000. Although a city of cultural and religious organizations, education and industry, perhaps Provo's biggest claim to national recognition is its distinction as the residence of Brigham Young University, the largest religious affiliated school in the United States.

Boats for rent (below) line the shore of Provo River. Famous for the abundance of trout, the river draws anglers from all states.

The old Grant library now provides space for offices, classrooms, and a museum.

The Dream That Became a Reality

With the advice to “not teach even the alphabet or the multiplication tables without the Spirit of God,” Karl G. Maeser, Brigham Young Academy’s first principal, assumed his duties in 1875 over 29 pupils. Nine years later, a fire totally destroyed the school, but classes stubbornly continued in a warehouse until the new academy building was completed. Years passed, enrollment increased, and in 1903 the Academy became a University. As further expansion became necessary, a site was selected on a hill overlooking the lake and the valley.

NEW BUILDINGS AND MORE TO COME

Honoring the visionary man who foresaw through construction delays the "many more" structures to come, the Maeser Memorial Building was the first edifice on what is now known as "upper campus." Beginning with this $110,000 building, "upper campus" has expanded to its present size of some 100 permanent structures. The University today presents a campus orderly covered with some of the finest facilities to be offered anywhere in the country. As the destiny of a great university comes closer and closer to becoming a reality, one cannot help but be awed by such buildings as the mammoth fine arts center, the all-steel football stadium, or the seven million dollar student center. The clean-cut studentbody has grown to almost 18,000 and graduates are vigorously pursued by employers who honor their reputation for hard work and integrity. Not satisfied with the complimentary rating the school now possesses, administrative officials continue to plan for improvement and growth, always seeking out faculty and students who truly exemplify the ideology of the Church.

AND TRADITIONS TO LIVE FOREVER

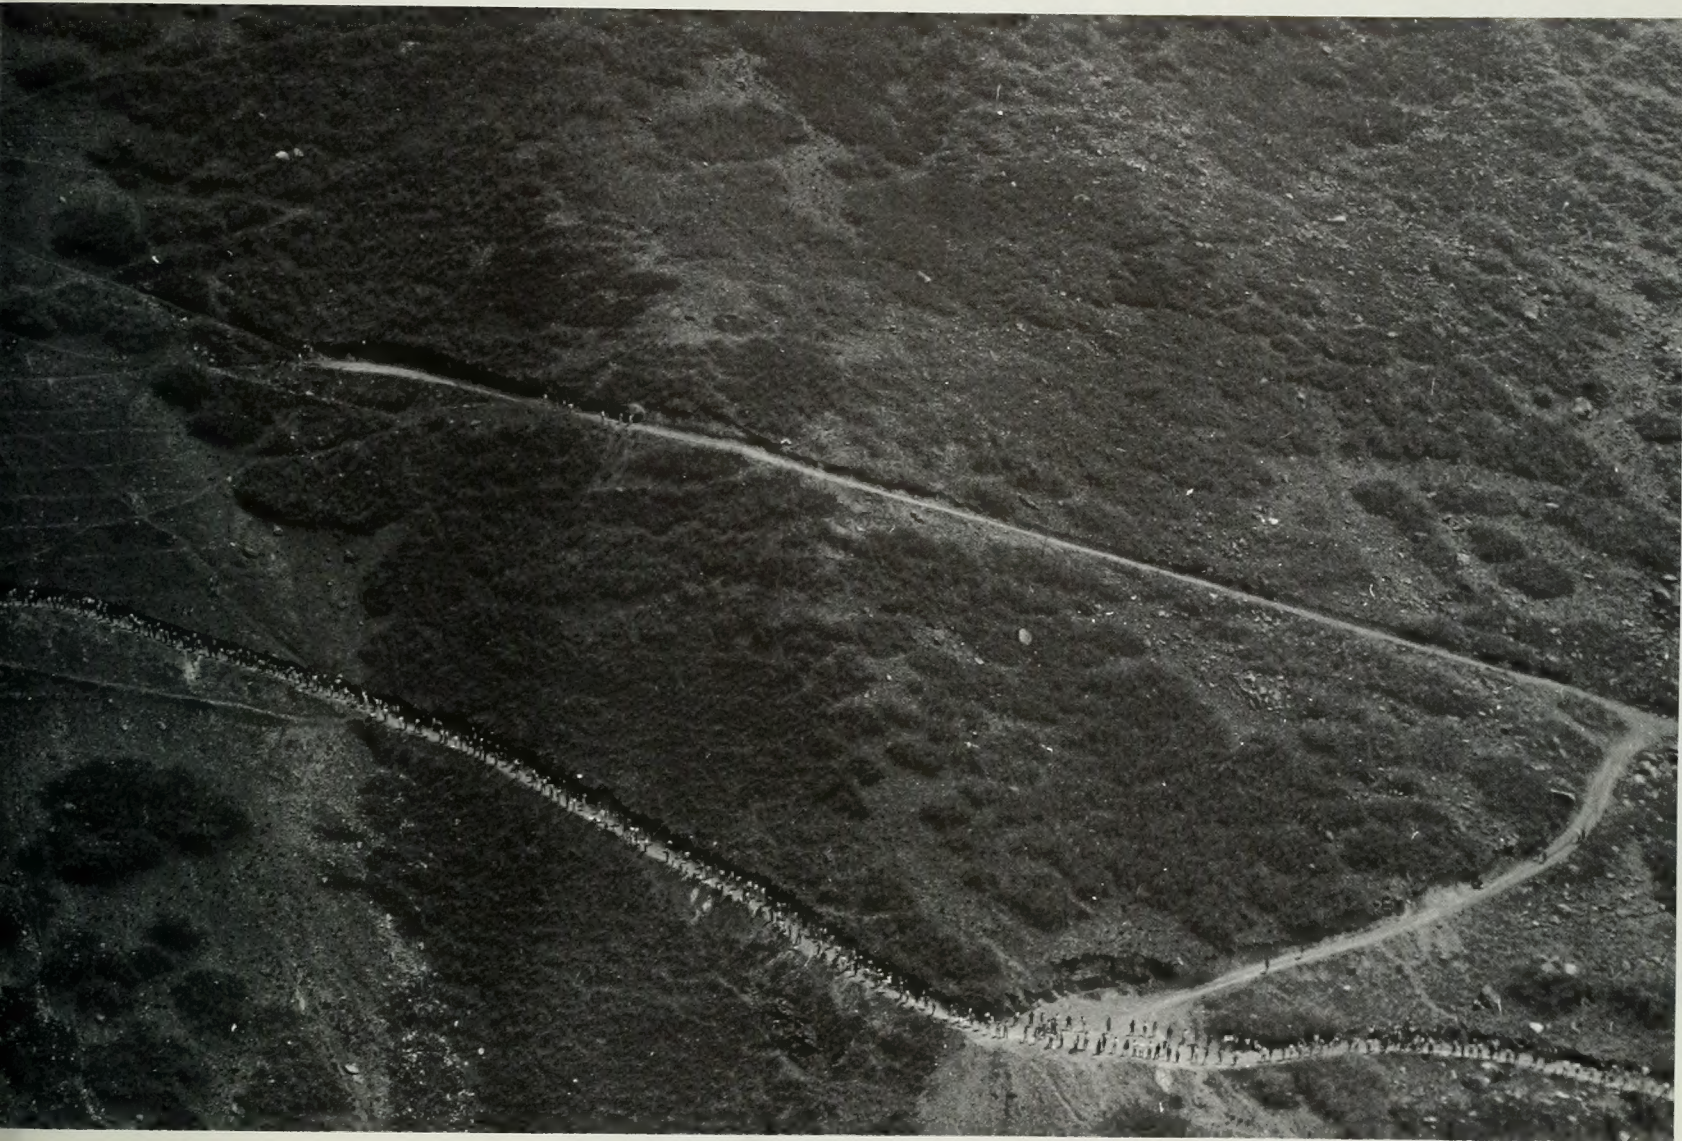

With school growth, traditions have been formed, and are being formed, to stand as much a part of the University as the concrete structures housing the vast educational facilities. High astride the mountain to the east is the huge, block Y, symbolizing the near-tangible feeling designated as "The Spirit of the Y." Anyone fortunate enough—and brave enough—to become engaged or pinned encounters the inevitable rite of being dunked into any available body of water, including Utah Lake, and the infamous Botany Pond. After an athletic victory, the aged, bronze Y-bell atop the tower overlooking the fieldhouse, clangs forth the welcome tidings of conquest. Win or lose, the teams are always accompanied by an upright, furry creature known as Cosmo.

Hundreds of students help whitewash the Y block once a year during Y Day.

The old Y-Bell, cracked and recast, still retains its clear, victorious tone.

Horror and mischief are reflected on the face of a BYU coed as her future mate is cast into the Botany Pond.

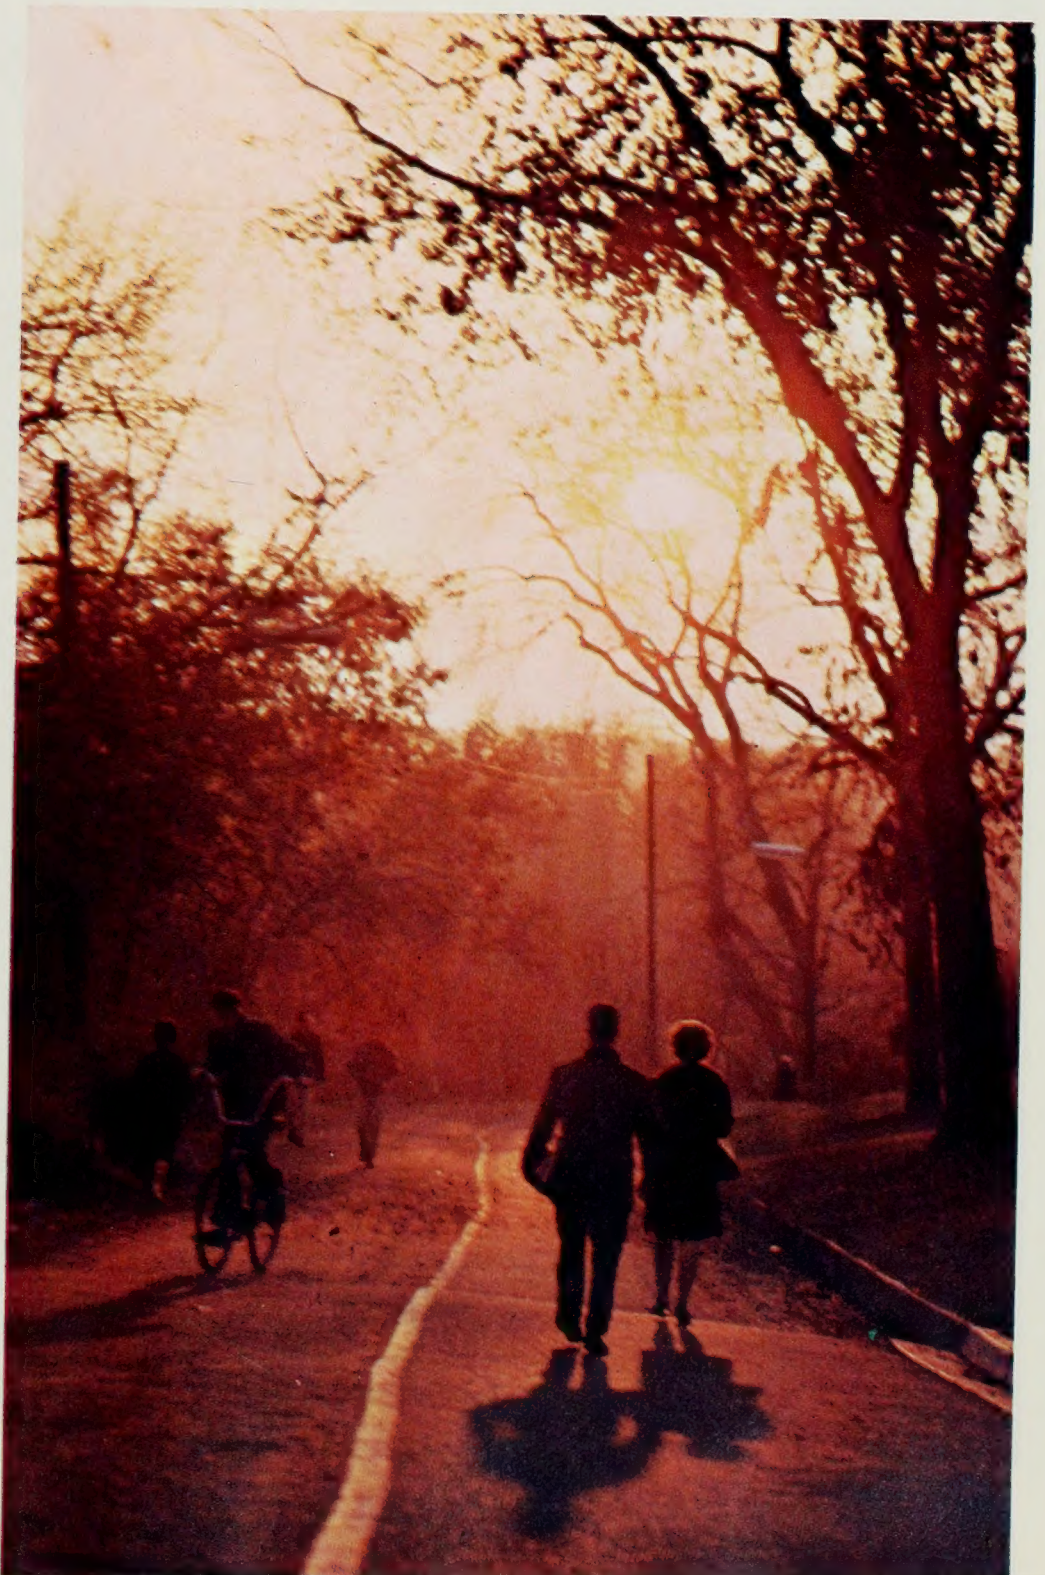

Avid interest is reflected in the faces of BYU students in all activities, whether their roles are of spectators or participants.

For the sponsorship of classes, sports, and campus organizations, there was always somewhere to go, and something to do and see.

17,800 Students Represented Sixty Countries

Behind all traditions, and giving life to a university are the students. In 1964-65 at BYU, with 95 percent of the total enrollment possessing membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, there existed a common bond among the students that could hardly be equaled by any other school. Arriving from all 50 states and 59 foreign countries, the 17,800 students registered were split into 6,258 freshmen, 3,884 sophomores, 3,224 juniors, 2,887 senior, 84 fifth year students, and 1,463 graduate students.

With one more day of classes behind them students walk in the last rays of the setting sun towards home, supper, and studies.

8,238 COEDS

One of 8,238 coeds on campus, the BYU woman played an important role in the life of the University. Whether she was wearing "grubbies" or a floor-length gown, reading David Reisman or Charles Shultz, all it took was a wrinkled-up nose and a quizzical grin to convince the opposite sex that it would be a dull, dull world without her. In the classroom, this baffling, versatile creature showed her worth academically as gray eyes covered by green tinted contact lenses fastened attentively on the instructor. Yet, a university education is but one step in the training of a woman. Outside of class, whether it was dorm life with thirty-eight sisters on the floor, or apartment living with six "roomies", there was an invaluable education taking place in the art of understanding people. It was this knowledge that assisted in preparing the coed for her future role in society as a wife and mother.

9,562 MEN

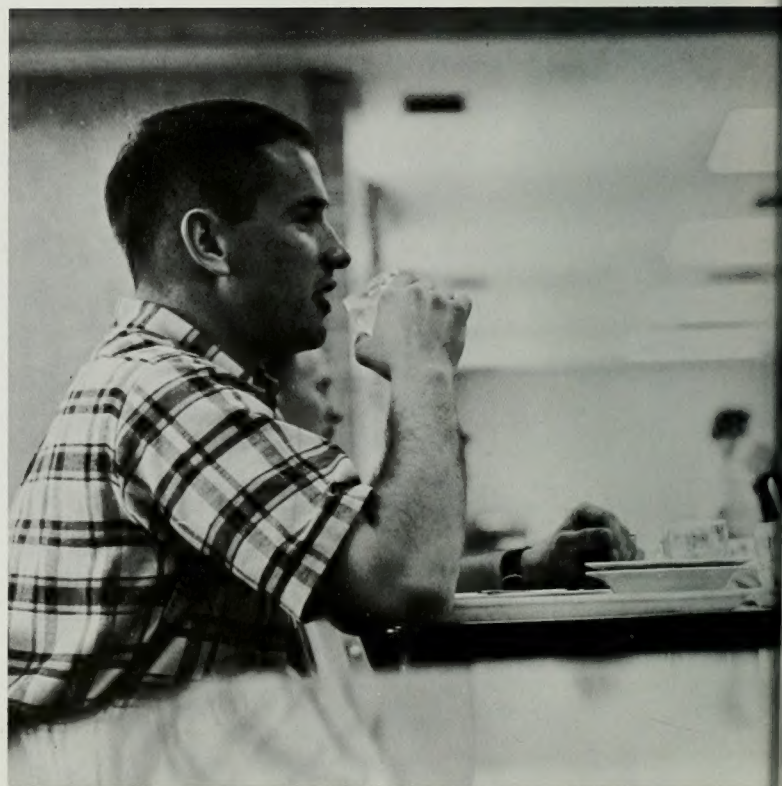

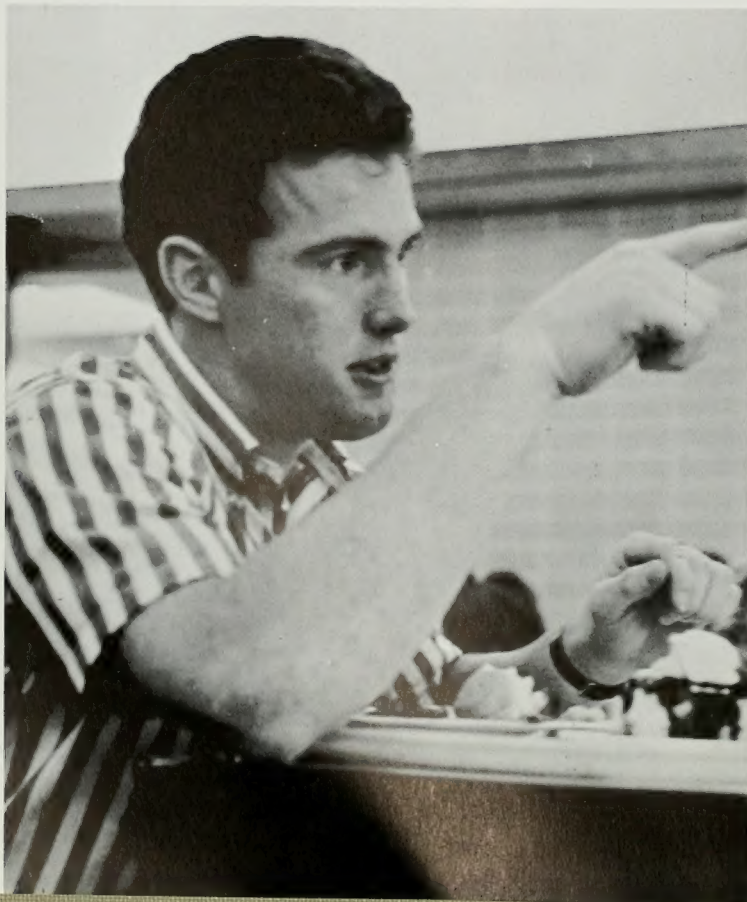

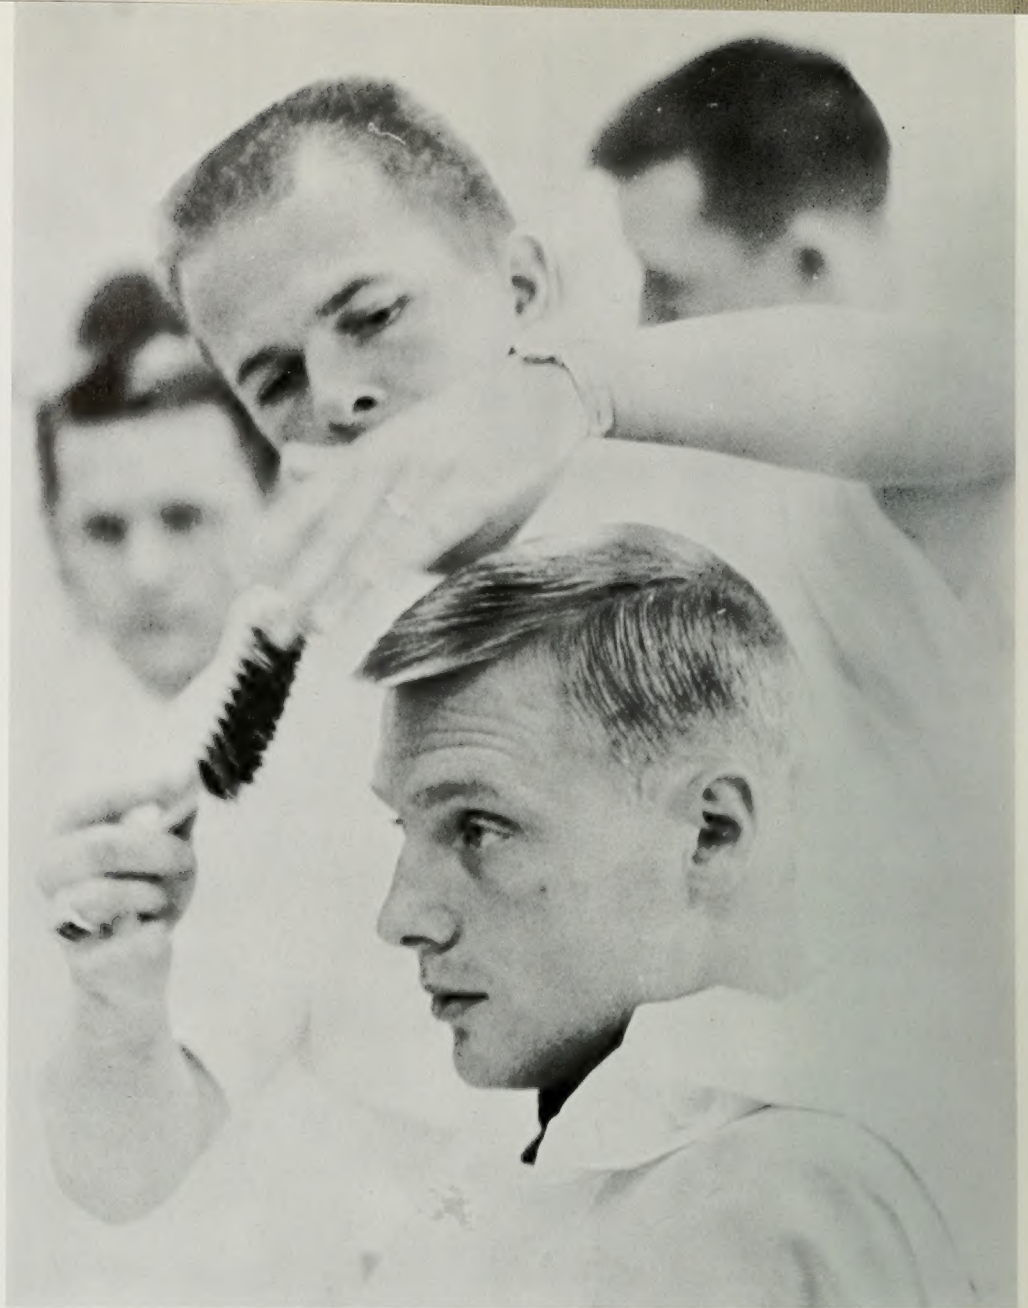

Tall, broad-shouldered athletes; studious intellectuals with furrowed brows; green freshmen; smiling, poised blazer boys; and various others—men of all types, shapes, and sizes were to be found at the Y 9,562 strong. Of this total, 2,500 indicated their marital status with an "M". Slightly half of them were returned missionaries, having taken two or two and a half years out of their busy lives to donate time for a self-imposed obligation of helping the proselytizing efforts of the Church. And so it was that upper classmen at the Y were as an average, slightly older than their counterparts in other universities and accounted for a more mature studentbody. Even those who had not been on missions were influenced by the many young men who traveled in foreign countries; meeting and talking with the common people, learning their language, and learning to love them. In all, BYU men came from 60 countries and added to the cosmopolitan air of the campus.

THE PAST YEAR

Nineteen hundred and sixty-five was the year at BYU when a large portion of the University's destinies became realities. While the school will continue to improve its facilities and gradually increase enrollment, the year marked a plateau of which many aspects have been in the planning stages for some 14 years. Newly opened for operation were the new Wilkinson Center (comparable to a student union building), five seven-story Deseret Dorms, the Harris Fine Arts Center, an extension to the George Albert Smith Fieldhouse, already the largest in the Western Athletic Conference, and the all steel 26,000 seat football stadium. Still under construction was the new Stephen L. Richards Physical Education Building, with four gyms, three swimming pools and many other useful facilities.

It was in 1950, with the appointment of a dynamic attorney-educator, Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson, as President of Brigham Young University, that much of today's reality began. It has been under President Wilkinson that the BYU campus, faculty, studentbody, curriculum, and academic organization were integrated into one of the world's important universities. Eighty of the present 100 buildings of the spacious campus were built during his administration. Because of the great emphasis he placed on scholarship, President Wilkinson was instrumental in completely revising the curriculum: the original five colleges were expanded into 12; an Air Force ROTC unit was organized; and the two year certificate and doctoral programs were inaugurated. In January of 1964, Dr. Wilkinson resigned his office at BYU to seek the Utah Senate nomination; a close defeat was followed by his reappointment as President in December, 1964.

During the first semester of 1964-65, Dr. Earl C. Crockett, with a background in various fields of education, filled the office of Acting President. With apparent ease and confidence, he showed a keen insight into the problems of a progressive university, and with the reappointment of President Wilkinson, assumed his former duties as Academic Vice-President, a post newly created for him eight years ago. The title of Acting Chancellor was held by Dr. Harvey L. Taylor until the president's return. His duties consisted of over-seeing the Unified Church School System and participating as an active member of the Church Board of Education. His second semester post was that of Administrator of all Church schools except BYU.

BYU's future has an even rosier tint. While the studentbody growth is intentionally being slowed down, there are tentative plans for a Life Science Building and an addition to the Jesse Knight Building. The principle of seeking out the best of faculty and students for the University will endure as future destinies become realities.

VICE PRESIDENTS

Ben E. Lewis

A former Junior Class President and Studentbody President of BYU, Ben E. Lewis is currently serving under the title of Vice President of Auxiliary and Communications Services. Included in this organizational structure are housing, food services, mail service, Wilkinson Center, laundry, dairy products laboratory, and the newly created Division of Communications Services which integrates the press, motion picture studio, radio and television, Educational Media Services, and the Photo Studio. He is also a member of the BYU Administrative Council and Vice-Chairman and Secretary of the Campus Planning Committee. Besides his numerous duties involving the University, he still finds the time to serve the Church as President of the East Sharon Stake.

Clyde D. Sandgren

Joseph T. Bentley

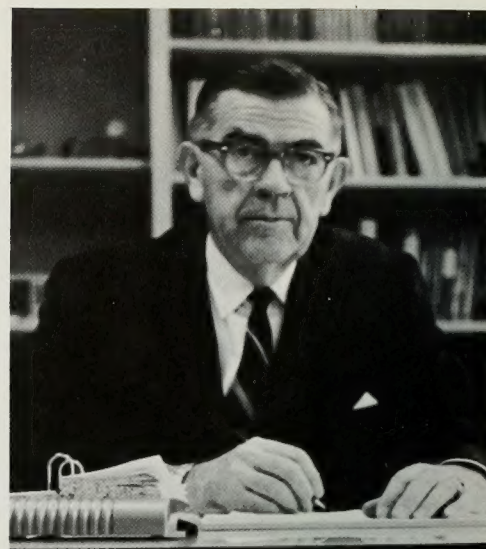

Living in Chihuahua, Mexico, the son of a merchant who was once held captive by Pancho Villa, Joseph T. Bentley attended grade school in Mexico during the country's revolution. In 1924 he came to Provo and was graduated by BYU in accounting four years later, having worked his way through college. After working in New York and attending Columbia University part-time, he returned to Mexico and taught at the Juarez Academy. Employment with Mexican and American Smelting Companies and later with his own accounting offices, as well as the position of Principal of Roosevelt High School, helped to form Brother Bentley's background for the post of head of BYU's accounting department in 1955. At the present time he is serving the University and Unified Church School System as Comptroller.

Receiving his early education in the Provo Public Schools, Clyde D. Sandgren afterwards earned his B.S. from BYU. Following advanced work at New York University and Julliard School of Music, he received his LL.B. from the law school at St. John's University. As Vice-President and General Counsel of the University, Brother Sandgren's responsibilities include all legal and insurance matters for BYU, Ricks College, and the Juarez Academy. He serves as Vice-Chairman of the BYU Athletic Council, handling contracts and legal matters pertaining to the University and the Unified Church School System. Vice-President Sandgren is also Secretary of the Church Board of Education and the BYU Board of Trustees with their respective Executive Committees, and oversees all relationships with radio and television stations.

MORE STUDENTS AND MORE BUILDINGS

Nuclear explosion studies, building construction, and an increase of 19% in enrollment were some of the highlights of the year in the College of Biological and Agricultural Sciences.

The studies of the effects of radiation on animal life and their seasonal movements were conducted at the Nevada test site on contract between the Atomic Energy Commission and the Department of Zoology and Entomology of the college. Dr. Dorald Allred, director of the studies stated that, among other things, these showed that certain animals are more susceptible to disease when exposed to radiation. The completion of the studies, which began in 1959 has resulted in the publication of about 60 reports on everything from grasshoppers to mule deer.

New lab building (below) expanded facilities of the College.

Seven departments — many areas

The largest of the construction projects was a new laboratory building located at 800 North and 500 East. The 6,624-square foot building includes five laboratory rooms and two offices. Beginning classes in zoology and botany did their lab work in the new structure at the rate of 2500 students per week. The new laboratories were not enough to cope with the increase in enrollment, and classrooms in the old Brimhall Building were remodeled to be used in lab work. In spite of this, all available facilities were being used to a maximum in order to accommodate the large number of students enrolled in both day and night classes.

Another project was the construction of new greenhouses adjacent to the Cluff Plant Science Building. These were divided into separate rooms with summer and winter controls to provide precise regulation of environmental conditions in growing plants, and were used for student laboratory work and research projects.

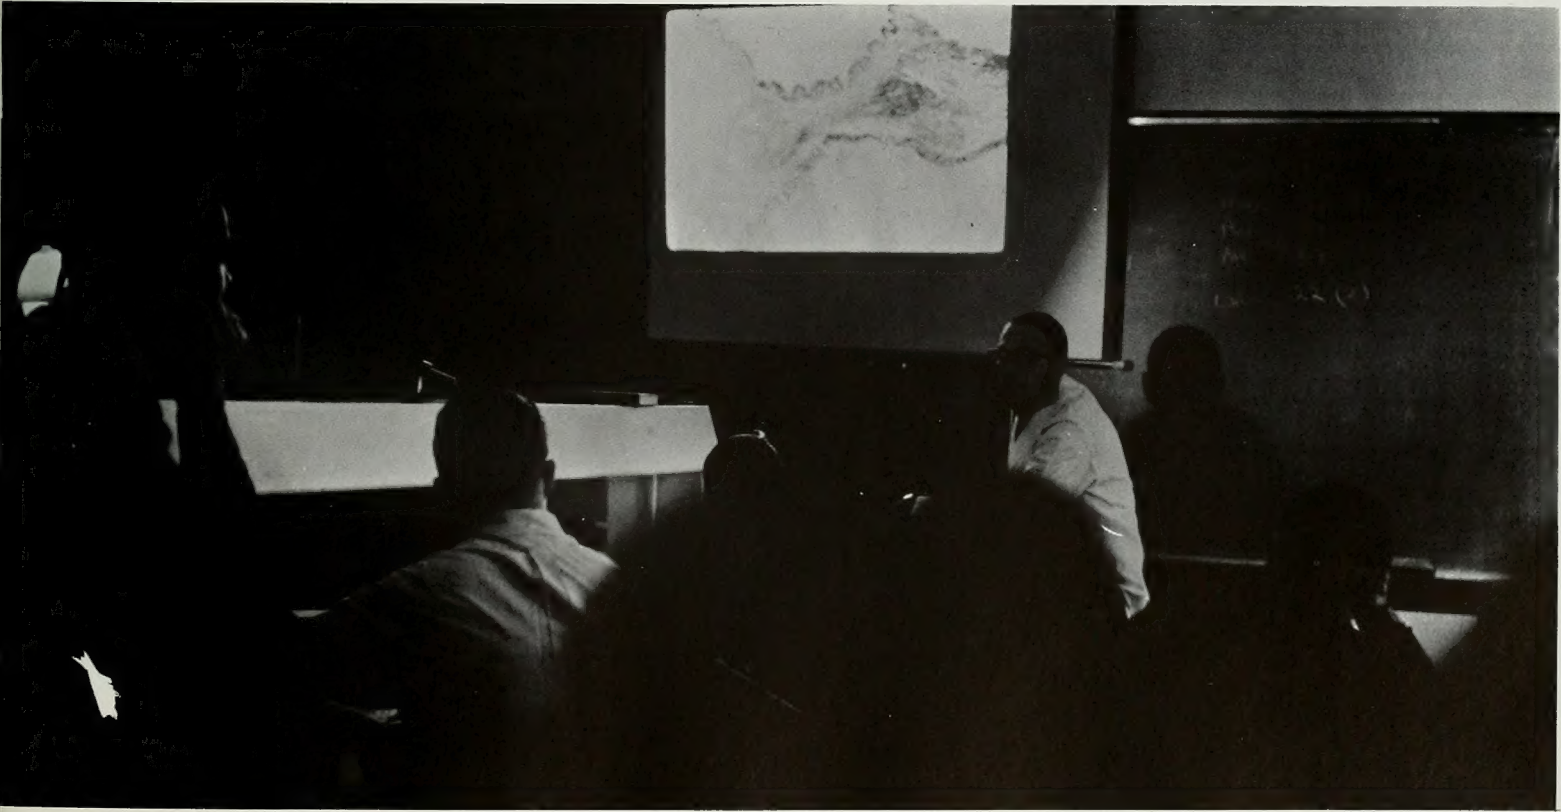

Dr. Rudger H. Walker, dean of the college, has played a prominent role in the development of colleges and universities in several foreign countries. Included among these were the American University of Beirut, Lebanon; Tehran University in Iran; Kasetsart University in Thailand; and the Arab Development Society School for Boys in Jericho, Jordan. For the past ten years Dean Walker has served as a member of the Board of Trustees of the American University of Beirut.

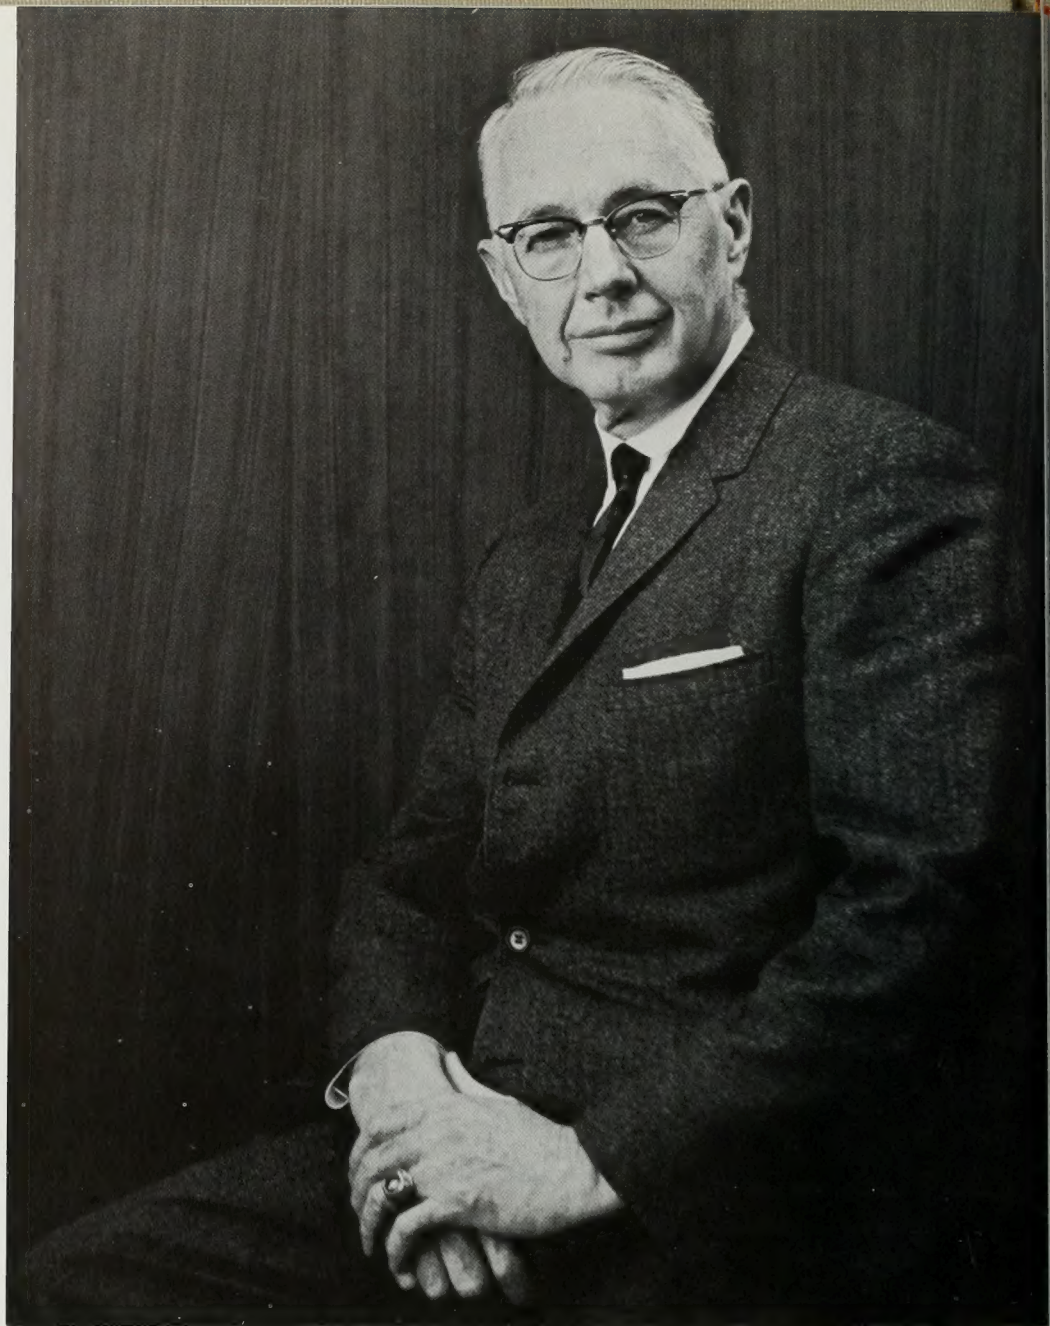

The college is divided into seven departments: Bacteriology, Botany, Zoology and Entomology, Agricultural Economics, Agronomy, Animal Science, and Horticulture. Among the projects within these departments was the construction of a boat house at the mouth of Provo River on Utah Lake to house the large boat used in marine plant and animal studies on the lake. There was also a study on the physiology of micro-organisms to determine the mechanism of certain enzyme reactions in living cells, and new discoveries were made concerning human blood constituents responsible for immunity reactions following an attack of micro-organisms or treatment with a vaccine.

Dean of the College of Business, Dr. Weldon J. Taylor continued to keep abreast of the newest concepts in education.

DEMAND FOR BUSINESS GRADS HIGHER THAN SUPPLY

Brigham Young University's College of Business continued to attract the attention of employers throughout the country during 1965. As the demand for young men and women with the skills and knowledge to fill positions of responsibility in the field of business increased, employers came to B.Y.U. to offer graduates of the college enticing jobs with higher-than-average salaries. This was not only a measure of the quality of the graduates, but also a compliment to the college considered one of the best in the country.

Organized in 1921, the College of Business has grown both academically, and physically to a present estimated enrollment of 1500. Largely responsible for the progress and fame of the college is the fact that it has always kept abreast of the newest concepts in education. The college was one of the first to recognize the dangers of course proliferation and proceeded to simplify its offerings into a group of basic courses, it was also one of the first to use the case-study-method of teaching.

The courses offered by the college are included in the following departments: Business Education, Business Management, Accounting, Statistics, and Economics. All offer relevant knowledge, but also teach professional skills excellently and emphasize them. Computative skills such as accounting and statistics, are considered sound foundations for advanced training, but the arts of making decisions, and dealing with human problems in administration are also emphasized.

In October, the college sponsored its second annual "College Careers Day," featuring speakers who discussed career opportunities and problems in the business field. Scheduled for June of 1965 was the "Management Conference," when business men will come to campus, not to lecture, but as students.

Avant-garde methods responsible

The departments of the college are affiliated with several national fraternities and organizations designed to further student interest and participation, among them are: Business Education, Phi Chi Theta, National Society for Business Management, Beta Alpha Phi, Economics, and Omicron Delta Epsilon.

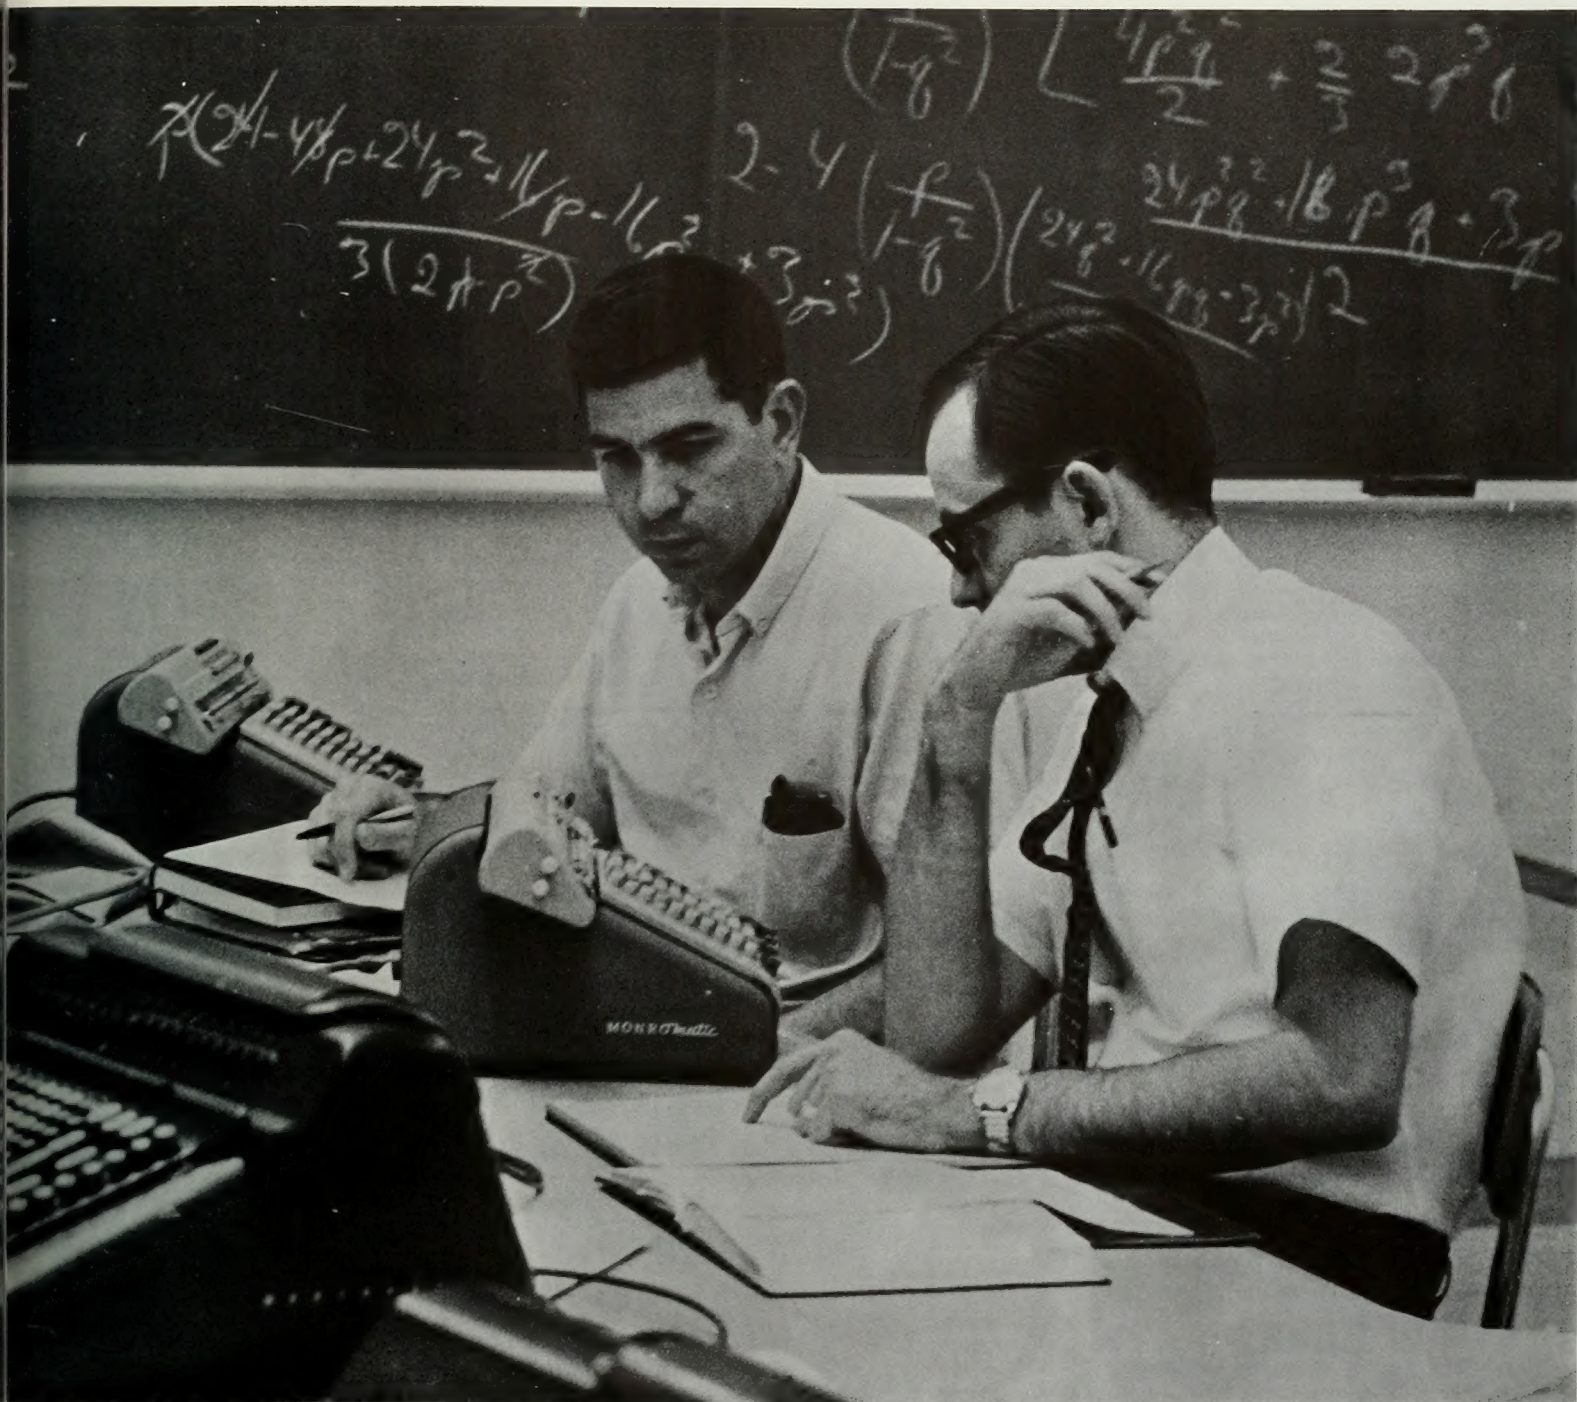

Much of the progress of the college during the last seven years, has been due to the efforts of Dean Weldon J. Taylor, a nationally recognized authority on marketing and market research. Dean Taylor earned his BS. at BYU, MBA from Harvard, and Ph.D. from New York University. He was appointed to his present position in 1957 and since then the college has benefited from his experience and avant-garde administration. During the year of 1963-64 Dr. Taylor served as Ford Foundation Consultant with the National Institute of Management Development of the United Arab Republic at Cairo.

LEARNING TO TEACH

Dean Antone K. Romney has made comparative studies in the field of education in Europe, Russia, Japan, Korea, United Arab Republic, and ten African countries.

Under the deanship of Antone K. Romney, the College of Education sought to improve the quality of service for prospective teachers by reorganizing the college into four effective departments: The Laboratory School coordinated by Lowell Thomson; the Department of Teacher Education, whose chairman was Dr. Stephen Alley; the Experimental Educational Programs, headed by Dr. Glen Ovard; and the Graduate Department of Education, chairmanned by Dr. Robert L. Egbert. The Graduate and Teacher Education Departments supervised all sequence courses leading to teaching certification as well as to graduate degrees.

Courses of study leading to the various degrees and certificates in professional education are accredited by the outstanding accreditation associations in the nation and are designed to assist educational personnel to carry out training programs which prepare teachers to aid students in each age level to develop and build their skills. With a total enrollment of 2,081, approximately 900 graduate students, and a faculty of 115 for the year, the College of Education renders through Brigham Young University one of the greatest services which the university may provide.

Dean of the college, Antone K. Romney, who was born in Chihuahua, Mexico, received his B.S. and M.S. degrees in education from B.Y.U., did graduate work at the University of Chicago and Columbia University, and received his doctorate from Stanford. He has served during his career as a teacher, principal, counselor, professor, Dean of Students, and presently Dean of the College of Education.

New Programs Initiated

Two projects particularly worthy of note instituted by the Department of Teacher Education during the year were the Indian Program which trains students to teach Indians all over the nation, and a fourth-year student teaching internship, which allows students to earn a salary during their student-teaching experience. Also during the school year, a revisitation was made by Dr. Nathaniel H. Evers, a representative for the National Council for Accreditation, who was reportedly well pleased with the new organization and operation of the college. Many other special events and projects such as workshops, discussion groups, and special conferences were brought to the campus by the college in performance of its function of leadership in education in the intermountain area.

World traveler, educator, and international leader, Dr. Virginia Cutler guided the College of Family Living.

EARLY CONCEPTS TAUGHT TODAY

In the early days of the Church, Mormon mothers brought New England concepts of thrift, industry, cleanliness, and management into their homes. The influence of their idealism about home and family life persists to this day. August, 1879 marked the beginning of organized homemaking education in the Church schools when Dr. Karl G. Maeser, Principal of Brigham Young Academy, employed a daughter of Brigham Young, Zina Young Williams, to teach the classes. In 1880, a new building was constructed and the Ladies Work Department was allotted space in the basement. By 1895, six courses were listed in the catalog.

Today, the College of Family Living under the direction of Dean Virginia F. Cutler offers ninety courses in the four major departments of Clothing and Textiles, Margaret P. Childs, chairman; Food and Nutrition, Marion Bennion, chairman; Family Life Education, Blaine R. Porter, chairman; and Housing and Home Management, Jeniev Poulson, chairman. The Joseph F. Smith Family Living Center houses the facilities for the training where about eleven hundred students are registered as majors, and another 4300 students take service courses to supplement other majors.

Events and Goals

The College of Family Living is associated with the student professional organization Sigma Delta Omicron and the national honorary Omicron Nu. Several events which these organizations sponsored during the course of the year were the annual Career Days Program for high school students, the "Christmas Around the World" festival, the annual College of Family Living Lecture, and Honors Night. The college itself sponsored several projects throughout the summer to extend family living concepts into the community. These projects included the annual Family Life Conference attended in 1964 by eight hundred men and women, the annual Homemakers Roundup attended by 350 women leaders, and the annual College of Family Living Advisory Council meeting of church and community agencies.

Goals set for this year included improving research facilities with laboratories for nutrition and advanced textile study, equipping Child Development laboratories with hearing devices, up-grading the facility as the percentage of faculty members with Ph.D. degrees increased, and preparing for the centennial of the college in 1978 by developing the college into one of the finest centers in the nation for academic training in family living.

NEW BUILDING

Under the capable direction of Dean Conan E. Mathews, the College of Fine Arts and Communications finally attained its long-awaited goal, a Fine Arts Center on BYU campus. This magnificent structure for the arts was dedicated on April 3, 1965 and named in honor of the late Franklin S. Harris, President of BYU from 1921-1945. The coming of the largest academic building on campus has meant increased interest and activity in areas previously unknown to many students, and 35 per cent of all enrolled took classes in the beautiful new building.

The Art Department, under the chairmanship of Dr. Richard Gunn witnessed an enrollment increase from 935 to 1,119 for the 1965 school year. This department displays such outstanding exhibits as the $1,000,000 art

Heading the Music Department was Dr. Crawford Gates. Along with 79 professors, instructors and part-time graduate, and special instructors. Dr. Gates directed the studies of 296 music majors. Students of music not only studied theory and history, but applied their knowledge in 140 scheduled programs. The attendance at the programs increased to about 12,000 persons per month with the completion of the arts center.

Opening its season with "Lamp at Midnight," the Dramatic Arts Department, headed by Dr. Harold Hansen, concluded by performing such works as "Camelot," "Teahouse of the August Moon," and "The Miracle Worker." The new facilities in the theatre at BYU can be matched by no other university in the nation. Every kind of production including open staging, arena, revolving stage, hydraulic lift and full grid housing are now possible.

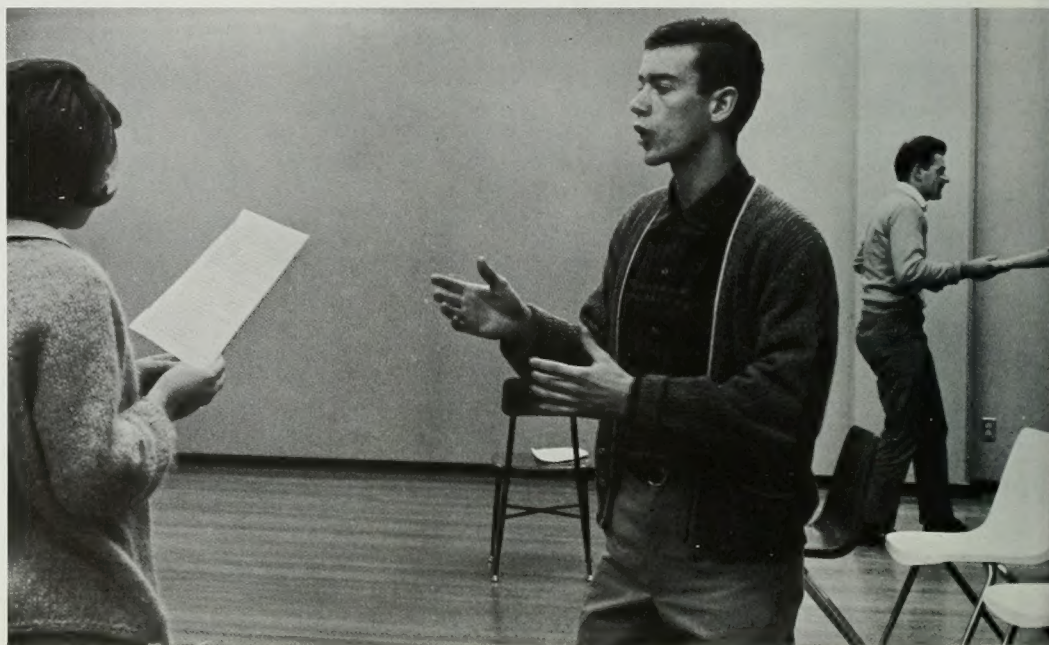

The new Department of Communications consolidates work in the fields of advertising and public relations, journalism, radio and television, and photocommunications under the leadership of Dr. Oliver Smith. Educational TV programs and courses broadcasted over channel 11 were prepared by this department. The radio division supplied BYU music recordings to over 225 radio stations throughout the United States and Canada.

Winning top speech honors in national competition for the past two years has given Dean Morris Clinger's Speech Department one of the most outstanding records of American colleges. Not only are courses in public address, speech education, and speech and hearing rehabilitation offered, but the areas of audiology and pathology are being developed to more expanded and professional levels.

COLLEGE TO DIVIDE

Dean Ernest C. Jeppsen was named to serve as Dean of the College of Industrial and Technical Education.

Late in the Spring semester came the announcement of the division of the present General College into a new General College with former Director of University Relations Lester B. Whetten as Dean and the College of Industrial and Technical Education with former head of the General College Ernest C. Jeppsen as Dean. This separation was to allow for greater efficiency and operation in the area of administration.

Coming under the new General College were the department of Provisional Registration, the American Indian Program, and the Skills Improvement Service. Dean Whetten of this college came to the Y in 1956 after serving as director of Snow College. Currently a member of the executive committee of the ACPRA, Dean Whetten has also been a director of the Rocky Mountain District American College Public Relations Association.

Included in the College of Industrial and Technical Education were the Industrial Education Department with Dr. Edwin C. Hinckley as chairman, the Industrial Technology Department with Dr. Ross J. McArthur as chairman, and the Technical Institute, under the direction of Dean Jeppsen. Receiving his BS from Utah State and his MS from Colorado State, Dean Jeppsen went on to teach in Utah and Nevada high schools. Before coming to the Y in 1959, he taught at the Branch Agricultural College in Cedar City, at Utah State University, and at the Church College of Hawaii with the Department of Public Instruction in Honolulu.

Ralph A. Britsch served as Acting Dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences until the return of Dean John T. Bernhard.

LARGEST COLLEGE TO DIVIDE

Observing its tenth anniversary in 1965, the College of Humanities and Social Sciences was also observing its last year under that name.

In April, it was announced that the college, the largest in the University with an enrollment of nearly 2600 students, was to be divided into the College of Humanities and the College of Social Sciences. The new College of Humanities will include the departments of English and Languages, and the areas of Latin American Studies and Humanities. In the curriculum of the Social Sciences College will be the departments of Archaeology, History, Geography, Sociology and Anthropology, Political Science, Psychology, and the areas of Asian Studies, International Relations and Russian Studies.

Effective June 1, the new College of Humanities will be directed by Dr. Bruce Clark, previously Chairman of the English Department, and the Dean of the College of Social Sciences will be Dr. John T. Bernhard who throughout the year was Dean of the parent College. In 1943 Dr. Clark received his B.A. in English at the University of Utah, his M.A. at BYU in 1948, and his Ph.D. at the University of Utah in 1951. His literary achievements include several books, literature lessons, and articles. Dr. Bernhard served as administrative assistant to the BYU president and has taught political science. He received his B.S. degree at Utah State in 1941, his M.A. in 1949 and his Ph.D. in 1951 at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. Bruce Clark, who acted as Chairman of the English Department was to become the Dean of the new College of Humanities.

Classes in 13 different areas were offered by the college.

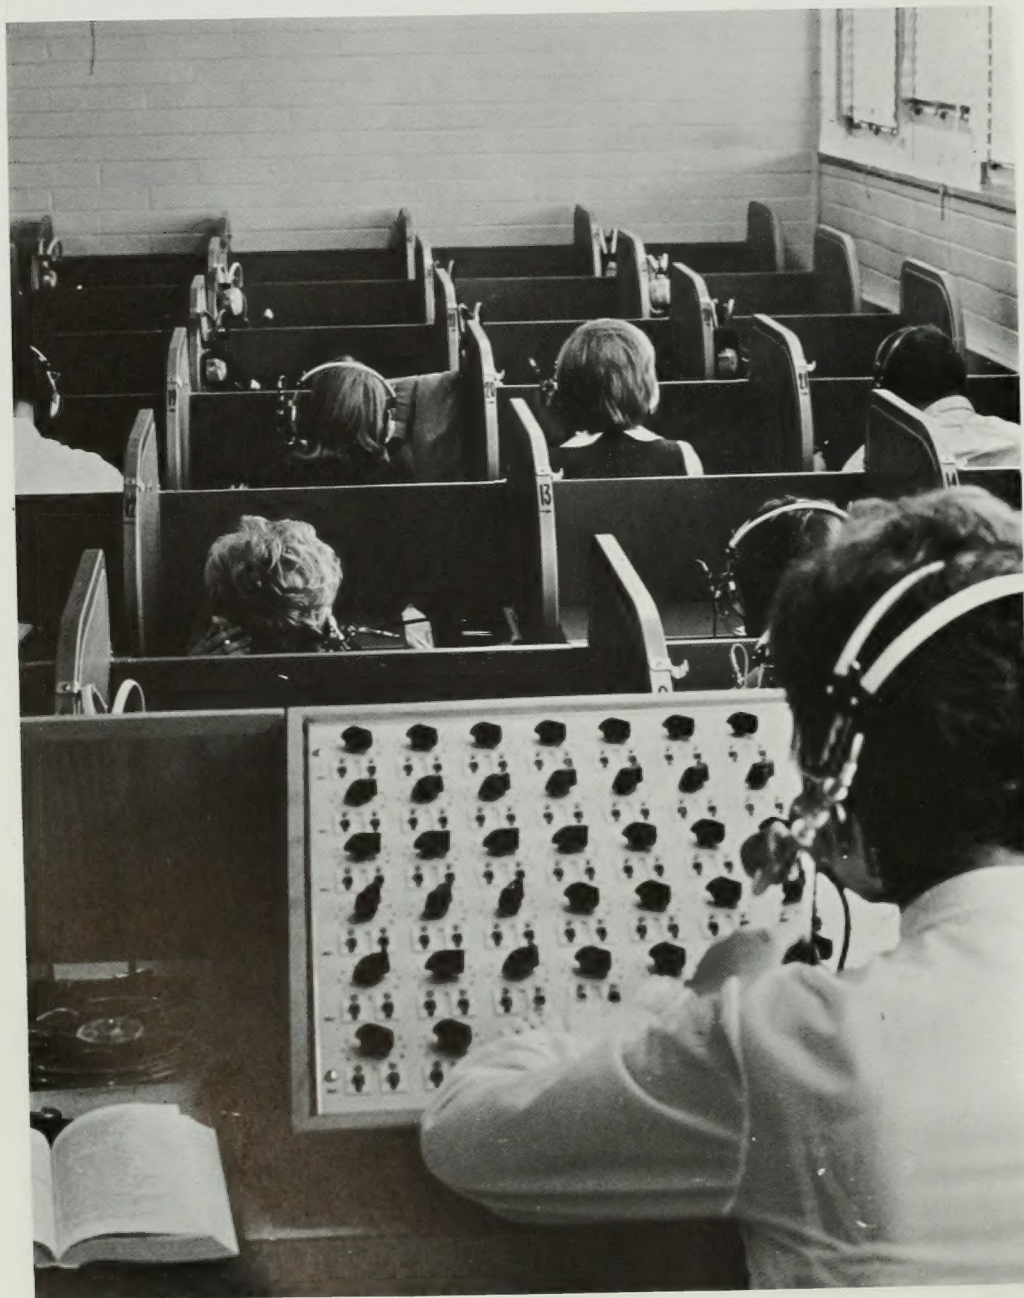

Dr. John T. Bernhard, Dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences returned from leave in the middle of March. He was to become the Dean of the new College of Social Sciences.

Important Events

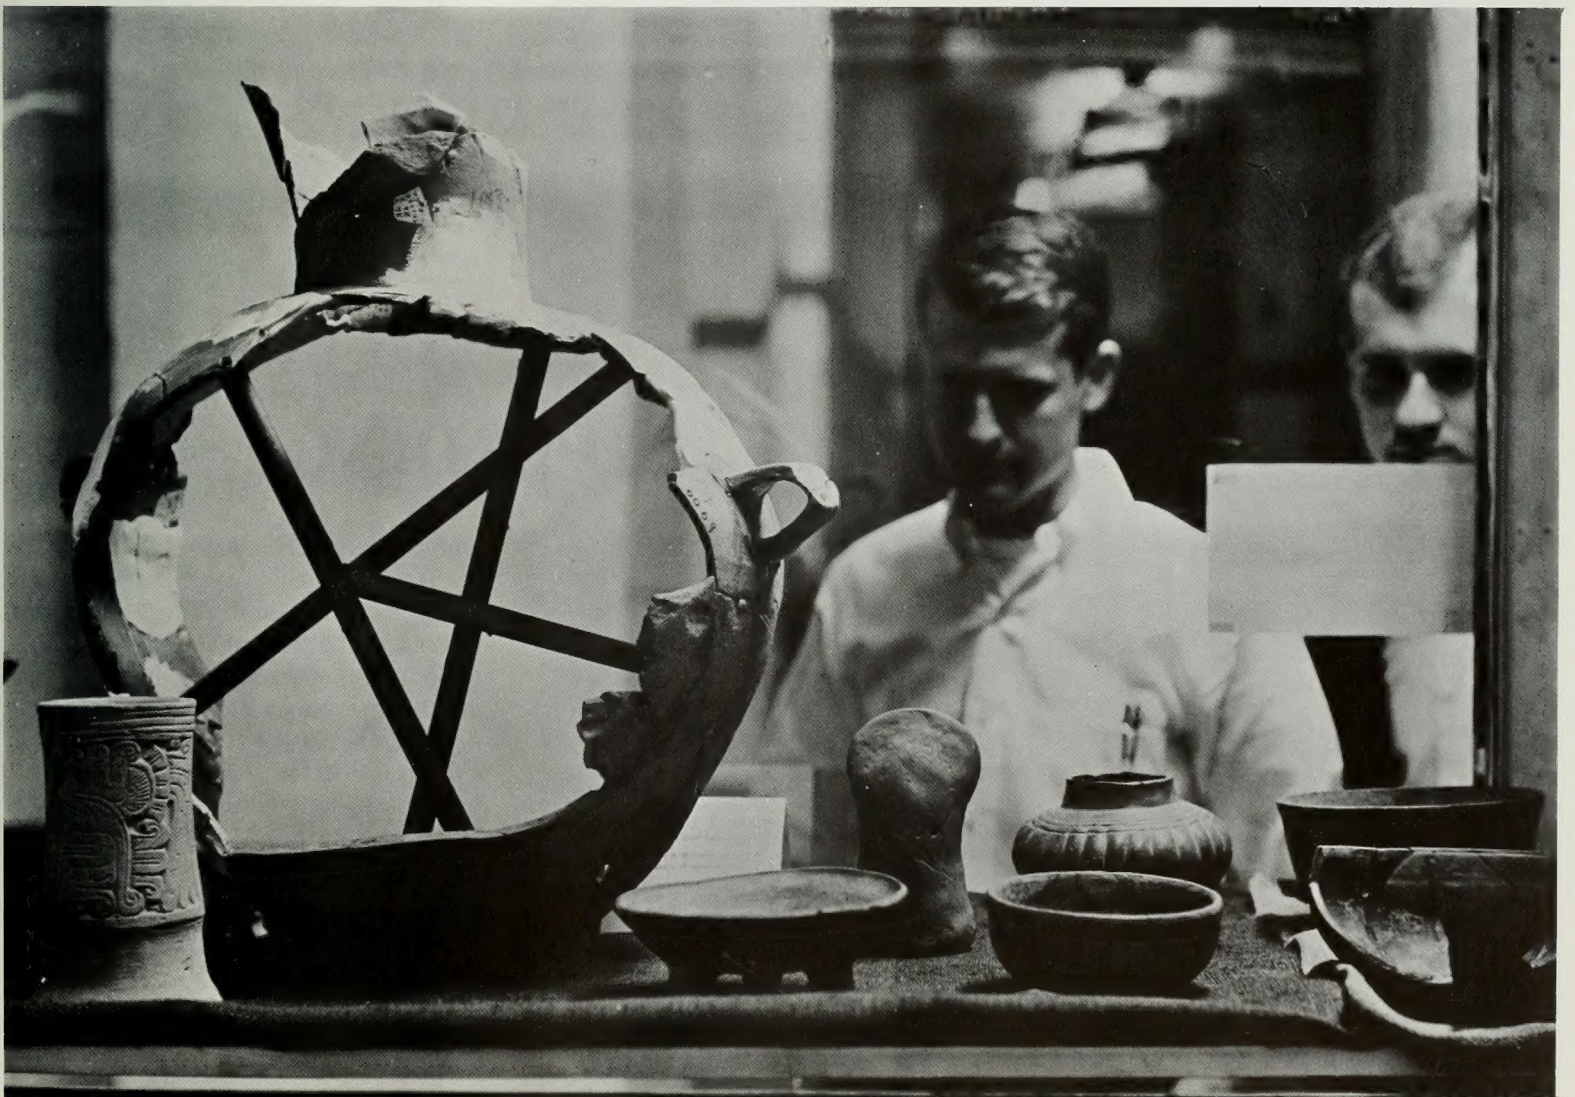

Before the split in the college, several important events were the announcement of a $25,000 grant for the exclusive use of the college from the Charles C. Merrill Trust, and the introduction of a closed circuit television course for the classes in History 170. The TV program was developed within the college by a committee consisting of Dr. Robert J. Howell, psychology; Dr. R. Max Rogers, languages; and Dr. Lee Farnsworth, political science. Dr. Richard Poll was the first instructor to utilize the TV circuit course shown in the Fine Arts Center. The College of Humanities and Social Sciences also saw the second year of its lecture series, the Faculty Forum, featuring Dr. Richard B. Wirthlin, Dr. John L. Sorenson, and Professor Karl Young.

During the first six months of the 1964-65 school year the activities of the college were directed by Acting Dean Ralph A. Britsch, who served until the return of Dr. John T. Bernhard.

The Geography Department of the College offered some forty different classes.

In her fifth year as Dean of the college Dr. Beulah Allen continued to seek further accreditation.

LEARNING THROUGH EXPERIENCE

Due in great part to the efforts of Dean B. Ream Allen, the College of Nursing was expanded to include the Associate Degree in Nursing. Offered to select students interested in nursing, the two-year program represented the first major change in patterns of nursing education in the past twenty-five years, and consisted of intensive study and clinical practice in the Salt Lake City Latter-day Saint Hospital. In 1965, the first group of forty students in the Associate program completed their preparation for the state examination, qualifying them as registered nurses. Working toward their baccalaureate degrees were 189 other students, thirty of whom graduated in May.

Beginning this year, a new program called "Senior Teamleading" stimulated interest in the student training program. Sophomores worked directly under senior supervision in the hospital. Also, a pilot study entitled "Student Nurses: College-Educated for Nursing Service", was completed within the college and from it, significant papers were published. Another feature of the college, newly accredited by the State Board of Nursing, was the integrated program of clinical and theory work which started immediately in the student's freshman year. This type of program gave the students practical experience necessary in their careers.

With a thirty-four member faculty, Marise Geddes served as co-ordinator for the four-year program, and Lottie Felkner was the Director of the Associate Program. Besides being Dean of the College of Nursing, Dr. B. Ream Allen was an R.N., received her B.A. from the University of Utah, and obtained her M.D. from the University of California. Included among her special experiences were being a Medical officer, a Japanese war prisoner at Baguio and Manila, and recipient of a "Medal of Freedom" in 1945. Dean Allen has appeared in "Who's Who of American Women" and in "Who's Who in America."

The nurses enjoyed participating together throughout the year not only academically, but also in their extra-curricular activities. Their homecoming float won the humor division.

NEW BUILDING

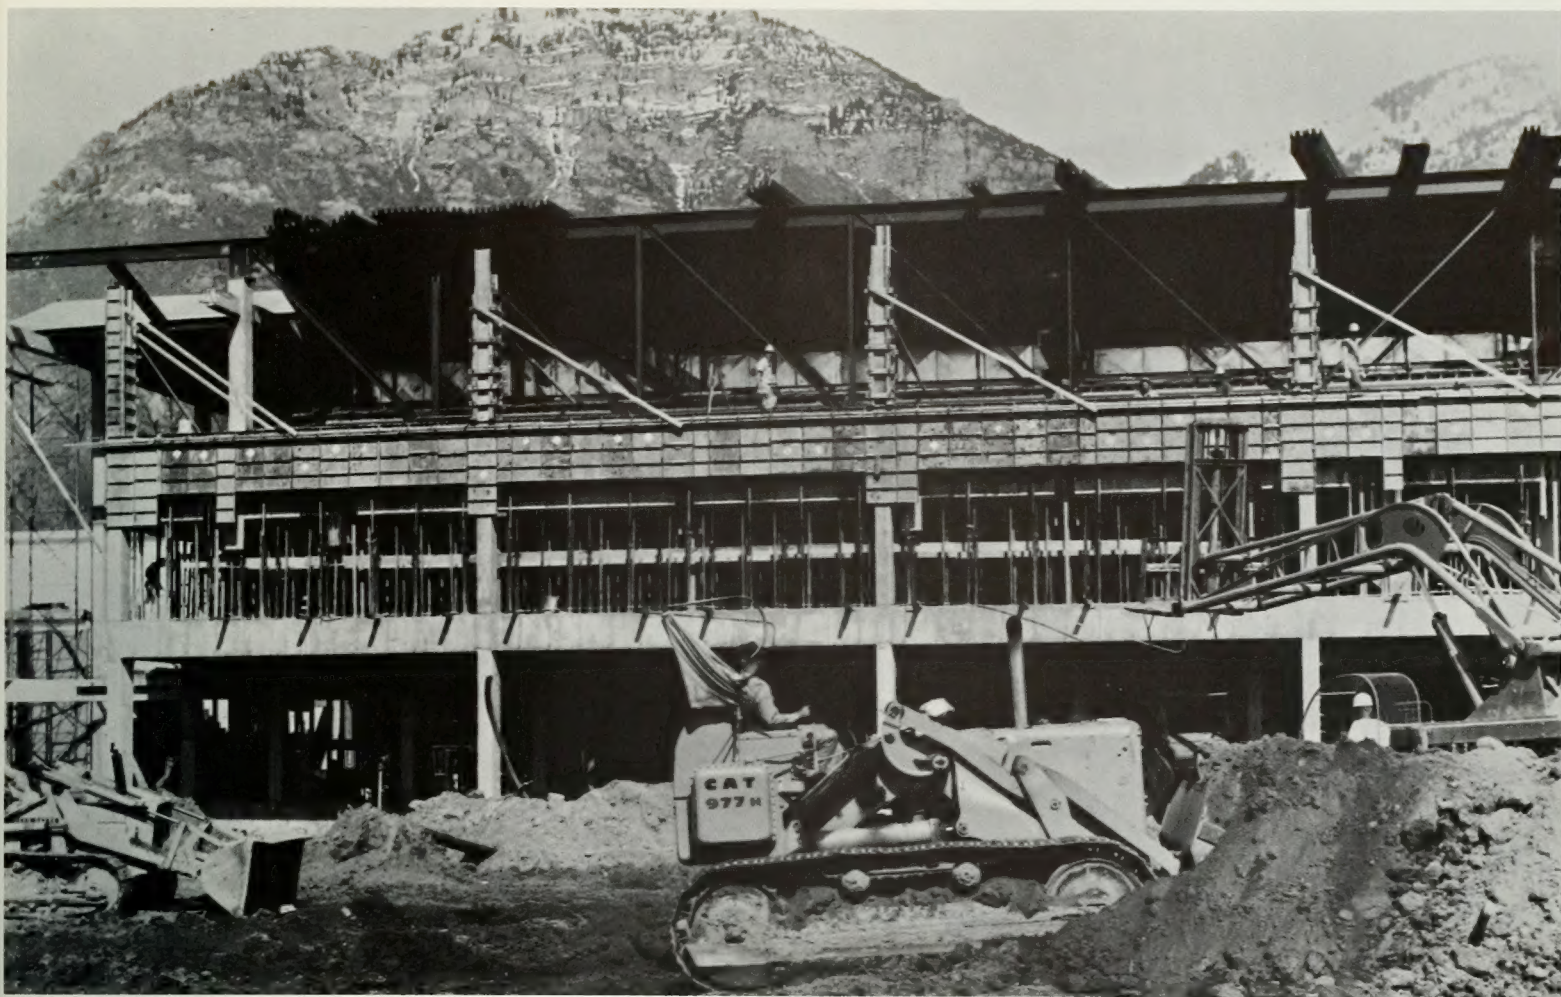

ON THE WAY

Dean Milton F. Hartvigsen poses in front of the Physical Education Building which was under construction the past year.

Headed by Dean Milton F. Hartvigsen, the six departments of the College of Physical Education were housed in the Fieldhouse and, perhaps for the last year, in the old Women's Gym. In November, space was increased when the east extension to the fieldhouse was completed and turned over to the college for its use. This extension included modern facilities for athletic training, hydro-therapy, a steam bath, physical therapy rooms, a waiting room, a medical doctor's office, medical treatment room, and other areas for team training. Also included were new shower and dressing rooms for all competitive athletic teams, with rooms for coaches and physical education faculty members.

Under construction during the school year 1964-65 was the new Physical Education Building on the site of the old football field. While the building's facilities were mostly for women, areas to be used by male students were included also. Among the awaited facilities were three dance studios, two multi-purpose rooms, two large swimming pools, one diving pool, a research lab for physiological and human performance study, areas for course instruction in physical education, youth leadership, and health education, and offices for the Dean and faculty members.

Physical Education Building is expected to be completed during the late summer of this year.

ANSWERS SOUGHT

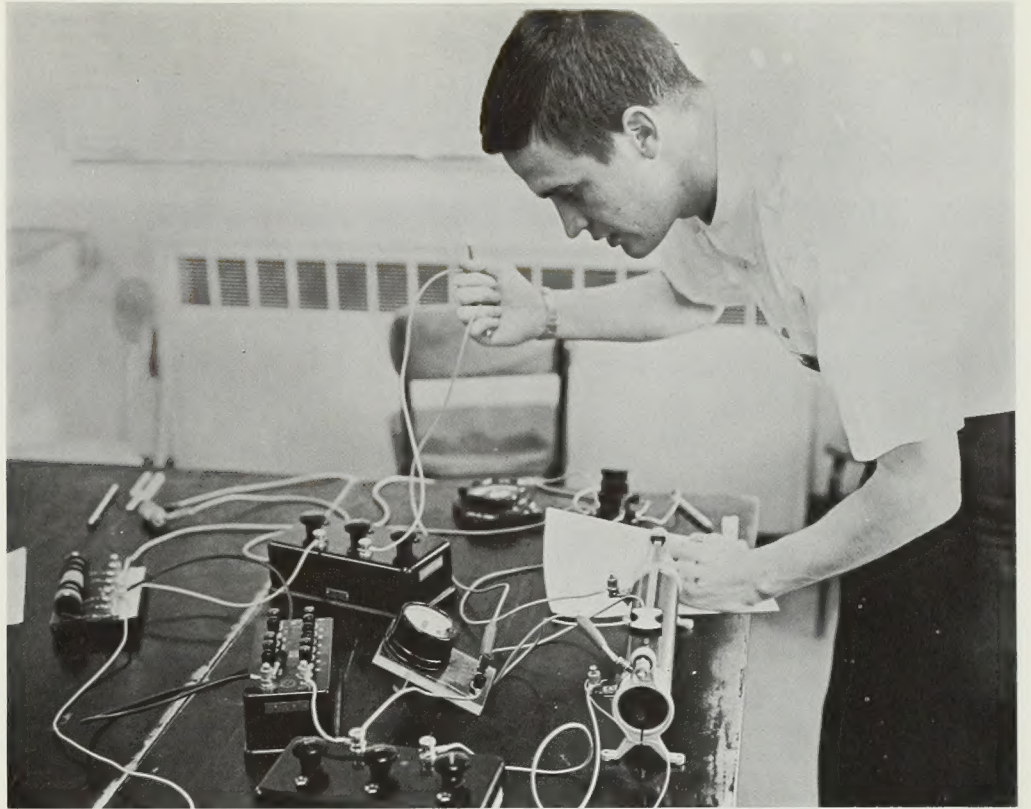

WITHIN CONTEXT OF GOSPEL

With a B.S. in electrical engineering, a Master's in electrical engineering and physics, and a Ph.D. from the California Institute of Technology, Dean Armin J. Hill piloted the affairs of the College of Physical and Engineering Sciences. The college's goal was to train its enrollees to tackle the serious problems facing the world and to find solutions within the context of the Gospel. The ten departments and their chairmen were: Aerospace Studies, Colonel Paul Sharp; Chemical Engineering, Dee H. Barker; Chemistry, Lorren C. Bryner; Civil Engineering, Cliff S. Barton; Electrical Engineering, Paul O. Berrett; Geology, Lehi F. Hintze; Mathematics, Kenneth Hillam; Mechanical Engineering, John N. Cannon; Physics, John H. Gardner, and Statistics, Melvin W. Carter.

Within the College, the four engineering departments were fully accredited by the National Engineering Council for Professional Development, and doctoral programs were offered in chemistry, geology, and physics. Six of the other departments offered programs for the Master's Degree. No degree was available on any level in Aerospace Studies, but students completing its program were commissioned as second Lieutenants upon graduation. However, Aerospace Studies did offer an academic minor.

Remodeled Buildings

The college was housed in the Eyring Science Center, the Fletcher Engineering Laboratories, T-15, T-16, and several other temporary buildings. During the year areas within these buildings were remodeled or adjusted to give better utilization of space. The second floor of the Chemical Engineering wing of the Fletcher Engineering Laboratories was completed, adding materially to the office and laboratory area. Also, the former Photo Studio in the Eyring Science Center was remodeled to provide a suite of rooms for the Physics Department offices.

Each of the departments of the college was affiliated with a student chapter of a national professional organization. Within the year the college received a charter for the local chapter of Tau Beta Pi, a national honorary Engineering fraternity.

Two regular and outstanding Physical and Engineering Sciences Colleges events were Engineering Week and the Annual Symposium on Modern Engineering Developments in April.

A former Dean of Students, B. West Belnap, finished his fourth year as Dean of the College of Religious Instruction in the spring of this year.

GOSPEL TAUGHT AS A WAY OF LIFE

Providing academic classes in religious training for all students, the College of Religious Instruction held a unique place in the University. Ample opportunities were available for the study of the Book of Mormon, Old and New Testaments, Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price, in addition to studies of ancient as well as Latter-Day Saint Church History. Missionary preparation courses in several languages were also taught for those who wished to become familiar with the missionary approach and for those who were preparing for full-time missions. Although there were no undergraduate majors in the college during the 1965 school year, each student was required to take two hours of religion per semester.

The College of Religious Instruction was reorganized from five departments to two, with Roy W. Doxey as Chairman of the Department of Undergraduate Studies and Chauncey C. Riddle as Chairman of Graduate Studies. The Master's degree and Doctorate of Religious Education were added to the degrees previously given, making a total of six offered by the department. Seminary and Institute teachers were also trained in the Graduate School.

Early in the second semester, the remodeling of the Joseph Smith Building was completed, providing a headquarters for the college and much needed office space for the thirty-three full-time faculty members and the thirteen part-time instructors. Authorities in their respective fields, many of the faculty published works for both the school and the church at large. Because of the advanced tutorage found in the College of Religious Instruction, students returning to home wards and stakes carried with them better understandings of their religion and their own feeling about life.

Unique among American universities was the BYU tradition to begin all religion classes with a prayer.

Some religion classes opened with a hymn.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

During the year the Division of Continuing Education made its contribution to the knowledge explosion taking place in America by delivering courses, classes and lectures to some 90,000 people. By mail, plane, travel, and formal lectures, classes were given morning, midday and evening by more than 400 professors to adults all over western America and the far corners of the world.

In conferences, institutes, and short courses, BYU ranked fourth in participants among 100 universities. Reported enrollments in credit correspondence courses gave the Y a ranking of eighth among universities belonging to the National University Extension Association.

Besides home study courses, learners also came to evening classes 3,000 strong each semester. With modern transportation facilities the entire world became a university laboratory for adventures in learning. "Semester in Salzburg" was an exciting experience for 140 BYU students who lived and learned together in Salzburg, Austria for 16 weeks in the Spring of 1965. In addition, study tours around the world attracted nearly 1000 people.

Dean Harold Glen Clark (above) headed the Division of Continuing Education which included the departments of Home Study, Community Education, Off-Campus Centers, On-Campus Centers, Extension Publications, and Travel Study.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

Ending his fifth year as Dean of the College of Graduate School, Dr. Wesley P. Lloyd has done much to expand the school's program.

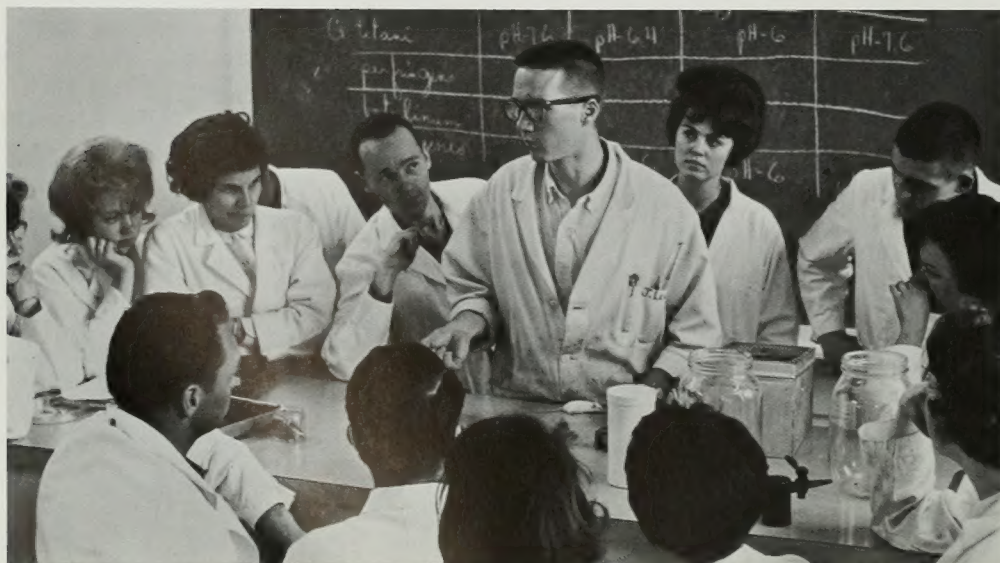

Along with rapidly expanding enrollments and carefully considered new doctoral degrees, the Graduate School, during the school year 1964-1965, offered programs leading to the master's degree in 70 fields and the Doctor of Education and Doctor of Philosophy degrees in 29 fields, distributed through 14 graduate departments. Faculty advisory committees were especially attentive as they worked with prospective candidates for each degree.

Each department within the school established its own graduate program of educational excellence under the general supervision of the graduate faculty, the Graduate Council, and the Dean of the Graduate School, Wesley P. Lloyd. The major goal was effective study; whether or not students receive their degrees, their graduate studies should help to qualify them for objective thinking in their various professions.

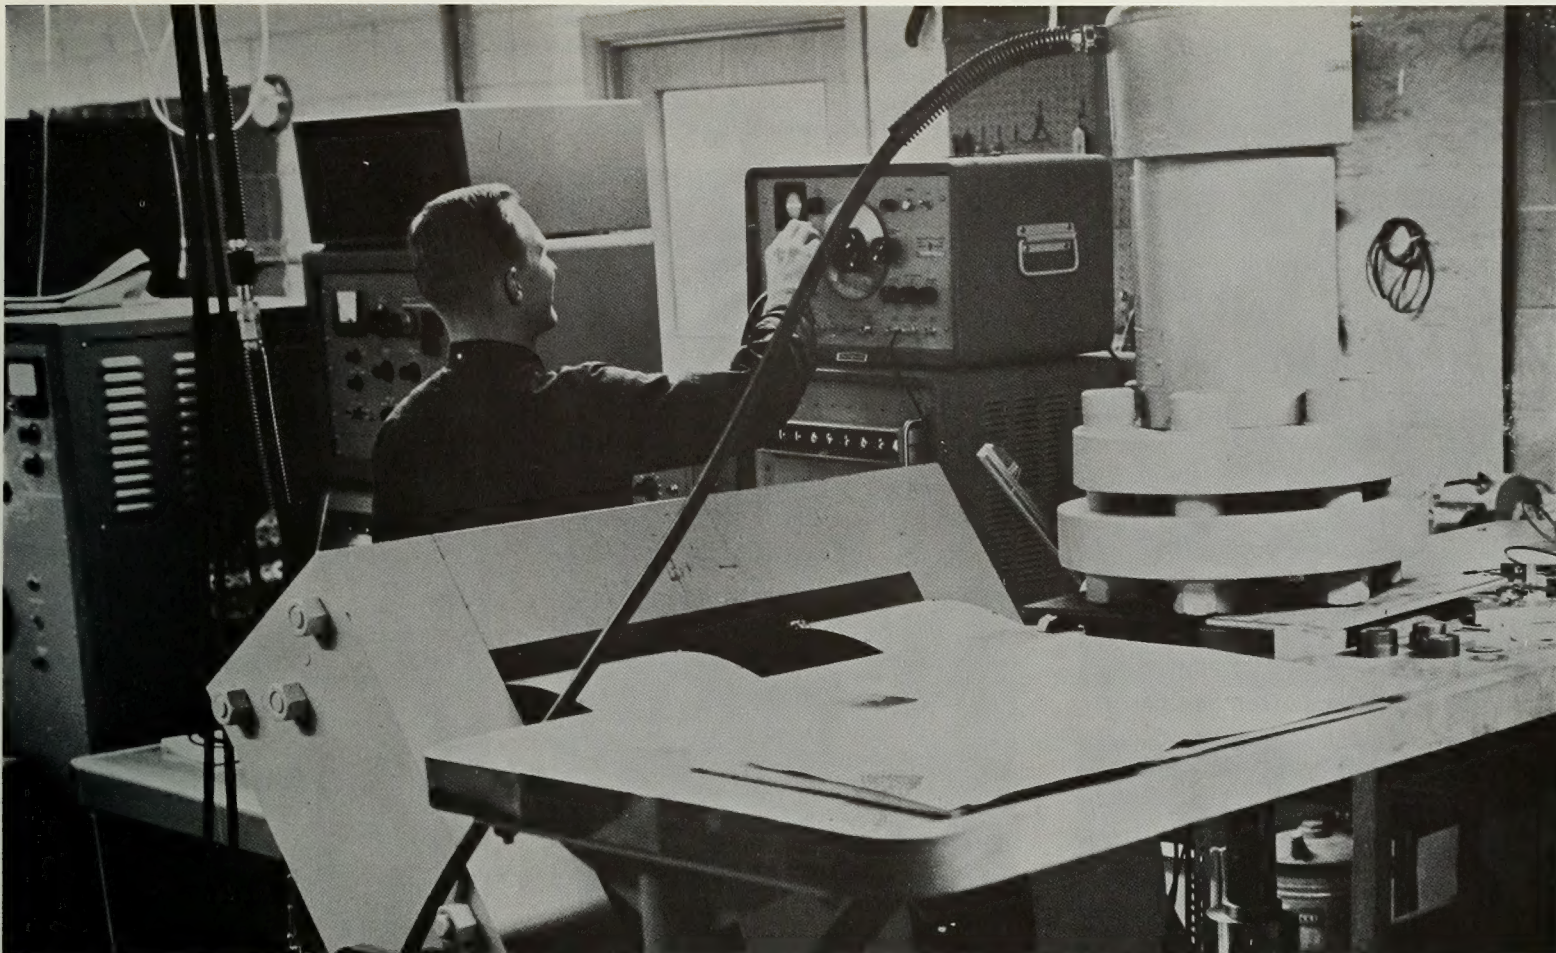

Aside from the regular academic events of the Graduate School, an item of special interest during the two semesters was the round table discussions for graduate students, involving departments of somewhat related fields. One such instance was the meeting between social science students and physical and engineering science students. Other changes included approval by the Board of Trustees for the Master of Library Science Degree, effective in the Fall of 1965.

OBJECTIVE THINKING PROMOTED

Established this year by the Academic Emphasis Committee and the university administration, the James E. Talmage Award is granted to the outstanding student from each college every year. Academic record, character, and participation in curricular and extracurricular activities are the basis for the selection. Recipients of the award this year were the students on these pages.

Services provided this year involved the mailing of the Alumnus Magazine without cost to all former students, providing caps and gowns to graduating students as a non-profit service, and sponsoring the Grand Prix Bike Race on Y Day, class reunions, homecoming activities, and the Alumni-Varsity Football Game in the Spring.

In supporting the University, the Alumni was active in the Utah County Telefund Drive, raising over $14,000 to purchase new books for the library. An interesting sideline was the BYU Family Camp at Aspen Grove where adequate facilities for hiking, swimming, and cook-outs were provided.

STAKES

President Joseph Fielding Smith chats with youth after speaking on the "green fungus" at the combined six-stake quarterly conference.

Elder Marion D. Hanks of the First Council of Seventies counsels youth during a six-stake fireside.

Unique in the Church was the organization of the BYU wards and stakes. Unlike home wards where many people are holding down several positions, here at BYU, jobs have to be created and spread apart in order to satisfy the desires of those who want to serve. Except for the positions of the stake presidencies, their executive leaders, and the ward bishops who are all called from among the faculty and community, every other job in the wards and stakes including auxiliary heads, is held by the students. Thus, the monthly ward correlation meeting has a tendency to look more like an M-Men and Gleaner Council than it does a ward sounding board.

From a one-stake organization in 1956, the campus today has grown to include six stakes with fifty-five wards, each ward assigned a certain academic building and classrooms in which to meet. As for the auxiliaries, the BYU stakes have Relief Society with the girls meeting at the same time the boys attend priesthood, Mutual Improvement Associations, and stake missions as well as Primary Associations. Supervised temple work and library research is also encouraged. Included in ward activities this year were the Gold and Green Balls, roadshows, speech competition, ward dinners, athletic events for both the men and the women, firesides, and Y Day activities.

DEVOTIONALS

"To convince is to overwhelm with reason; to convert is to change the character and attitude of the person." This was the idea presented by Elder Theodore M. Burton.

Elder Marion G. Romney emphasized the importance of studying the scriptures.

Elder Boyd K. Packer stresses the importance of "following the brethren."

Each Tuesday morning in the George Albert Smith Fieldhouse more than 9,000 students assembled for an hour to listen to the inspirational messages brought by BYU devotional speaker. The speaker's words were broadcast over the University P.A. system to approximately 1,000 additional students and faculty on other parts of the campus. Most of them were General Authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, included assistants to the Council of the Twelve, Apostles, and members of the First Council of Seventies. These assemblies were especially meaningful to BYU students because it was one of the few times when the majority of the student body could gather together and share the mutual faith of their Church.

FORUMS

From columnist Art Buchwald to statesman Charles Taft to poet John Ciardi, the world outside came to BYU once a week at the Thursday forum series. Students received a half credit per semester for their attendance and at the same time broadened their understanding and knowledge of varied people and professions. HOMEcoming

FOUR GREAT

As fans begin to fill the stadium to watch the Homecoming game, air fills Cosmo's parachute as he "drops in" to cheer for his team. Cosmo's stunt was a surprise that added color to the pre-game activities.

The Wasatch Mountains frame the packed stadium, and in the perfect Fall weather the students and the band salute the royalty during the half-time activities of the Homecoming game.

DAYS IN COUGARVILLE

White mums on lovely coeds, chicken wire scrapped with sawdust, and an old wagon wheel in the Y Center all spelled out Homecoming 1964 as mammoth crowds participated in BYU's four-day annual celebration "Destiny Meets Reality."

Chairmanned by Gary Lawrence, kick-off activities began Thursday morning with the Homecoming assembly where some 8,000 students and alumni witnessed the coronation of Judy Green and her attendants Julie Paull and Dana Rosado.

Despite the cold and rain Thursday evening, 1,500 students gathered on the main ballroom in the Y Center for the Sophomore Class sponsored hootenanny, in which over twenty groups participated. Following the hootenanny, students snakedanced through the Heritage and Deseret dormitories across campus to Helaman Halls where a giant bonfire-pep rally heightened the already soaring flames of enthusiasm.

Friday night, a sell-out crowd of over 10,000 fans attended the Kingston Trio Concert in the Smith Fieldhouse to hear such favorites as Tom Dooley, Tijuana Jail, and The MTA. After the concert, 6,000 students moved to the Y Center ballroom for the semi-formal dance, while the world's largest hillside letter, BYU's block "Y", blazed in the distance.

Saturday morning came too early for some sleepy float builders as hammering, painting, and napkin stuffing were still in progress when the televised Homecoming parade started to move from downtown Provo, to the BYU campus. Led by Acting President Earl

The girls were judged on beauty, poise, and personality. From the finalists, the Queen and her attendants were elected by studentbody vote.

Judy has been head songleader for 2 years and played a leading part in the BYU production, "Thurber the Custodian." She enjoys outdoor sports, art, and dancing, her future plans are to graduate, travel, and later marry.

JULIE PAULL, a sophisticated senior majoring in Bacteriology was First Attendant to Queen Judy. Julie, sponsored by Circle K, is a member of the Program Bureau, Dance Committee, and Assembly Committee. She plans to travel in Europe if she doesn't come back for a master's degree. She enjoys art, jazz, dancing, skiing, and fishing.

DANA ROSADO, a lively and busy junior from La Jolla, Calif. was Second Attendant to Queen Judy. Dana is a dance major and plans to teach dance after graduation. Sponsored by Shipp Hall, Dana has been active in Orchesis, drama and motion picture production, and student government. Besides dancing she enjoys good music, drama, and singing—especially operas.

Float winners were Delta Phi Kappa and Del Vesta, first place; Junior Class, second place; CAA and Chi Triellas, third place. Student Nurses received the prize for Most Humorous entry.

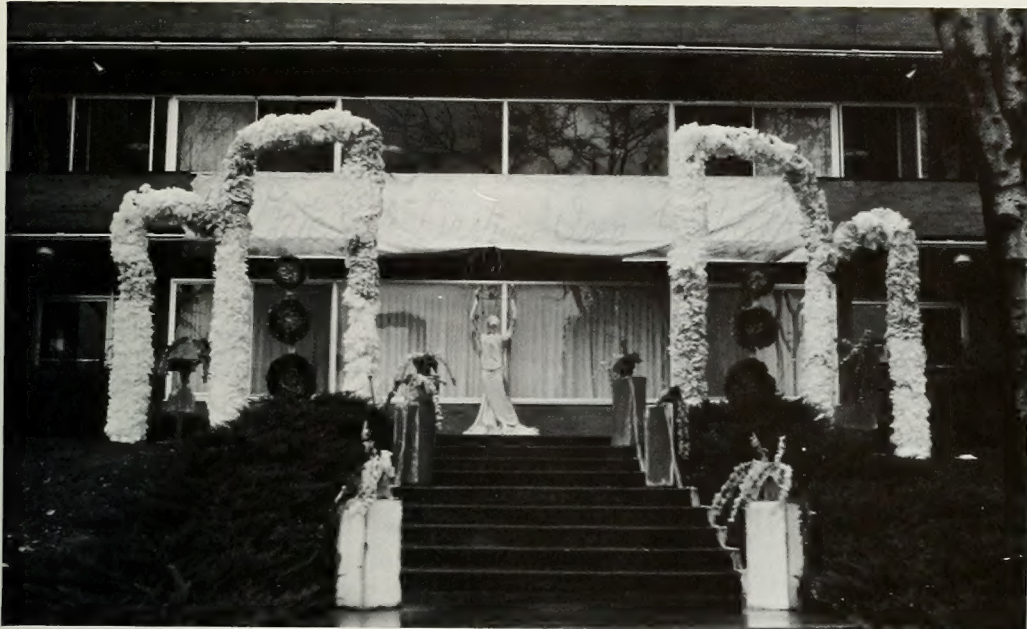

Homecoming excitement and tension culminated Saturday afternoon in the BYU-USU football game. Fans from both schools, 29,000 strong, packed into the new 26,000 seat stadium to see the Cougars play their best game of the season. “I can’t believe it,” the fans repeated over, and over as the Cougars plowed the Aggies in a surprising 28-12 upset. Exhausted spectators lingered on to cheer as the wagon wheel, a symbol of football supremacy between BYU and USU, was carried across the trodden field to its new home in Cougar territory. Following the game, openhouses were held for dorms and clubs, and the alumni attended the traditional alumni reception.

Message: live in the present

"Lights out, spots on!" echoed through the fieldhouse Saturday night as the Program Bureau presented Fieldhouse Frolics 1964. Under the direction of Janie Thompson, and student director Blaine N. Lee, the history of BYU from Karl G. Maeser to President Wilkinson was traced in song and dance through ballet and Indian dances, opera, Shakespeare, the Symphony Orchestra and Oratorio Choir, and the Folk, and Ballroom dancers.

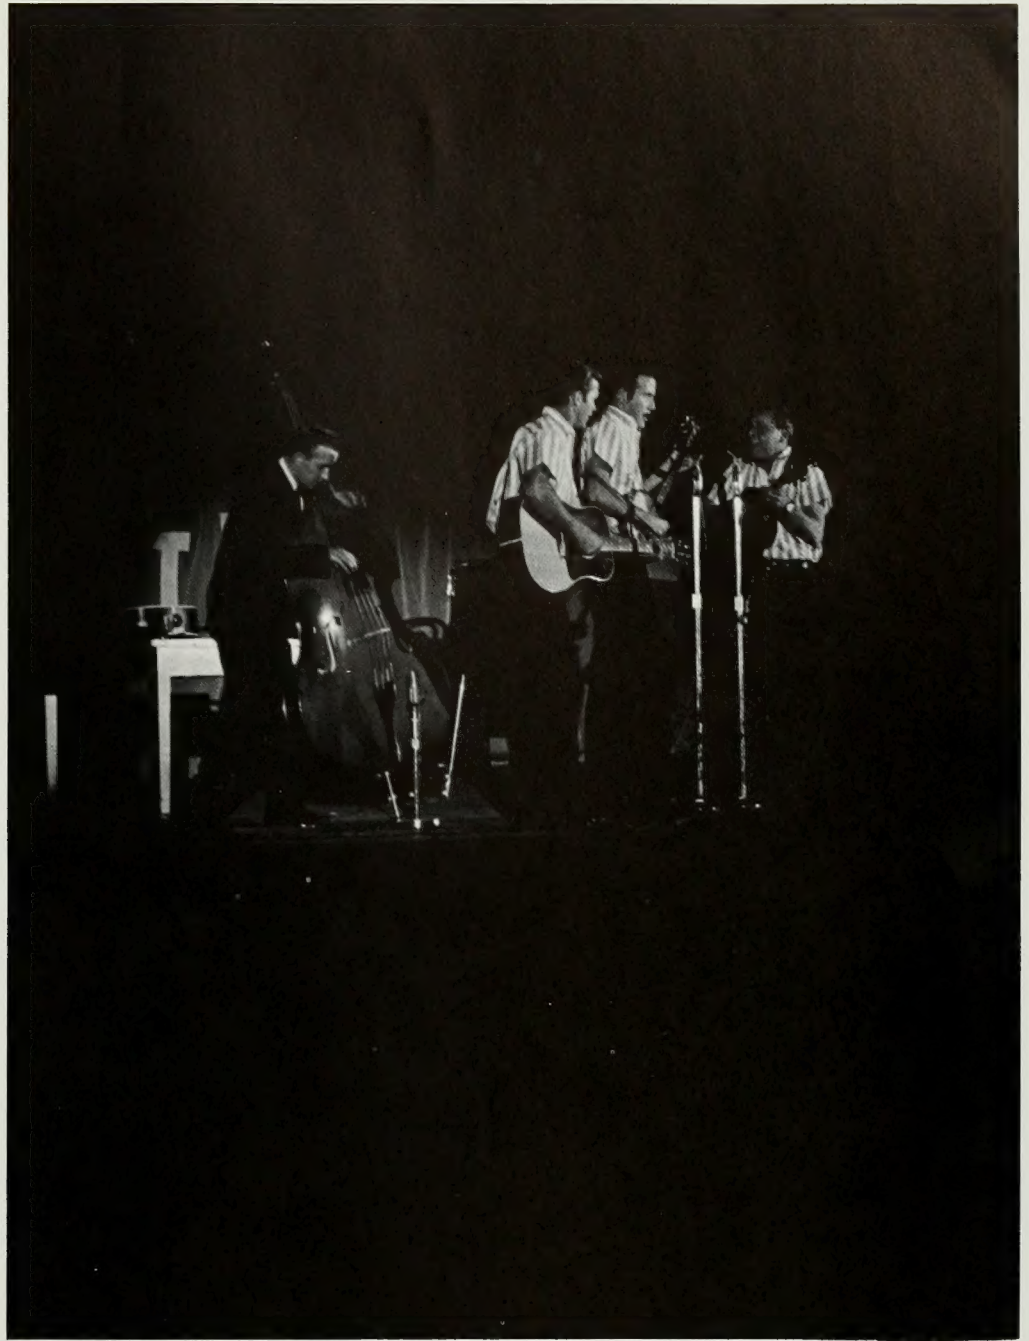

Sunday evening, Homecoming week drew to a close as Dean of Students J. Elliot Cameron pointed our to his Six-Stake-Fireside audience that college is not only a preparation for life, but that college is life, not only should we prepare for the future, but we should live in the present.

HAIL BLUE

There were booths for throwing pies, darts, baseballs, or basketballs. The ferris wheel, in the background, was the most popular feature of the carnival.

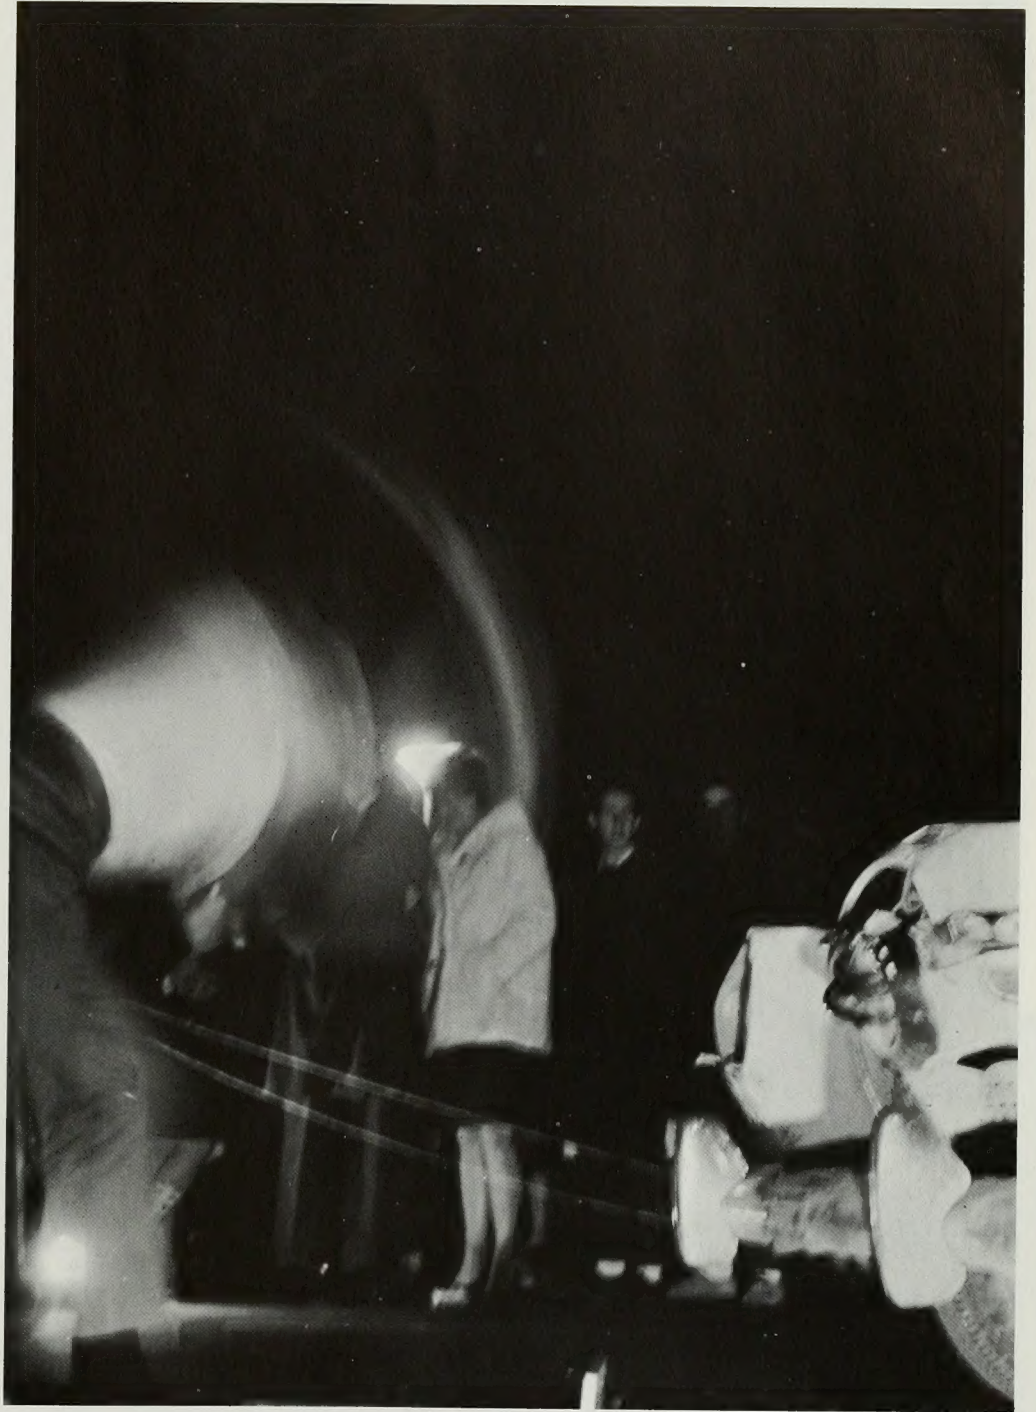

Designed to rocket school spirit and enthusiasm for the U of U-BYU football game sky high, the annual celebration Cougar Days was officially launched on Wednesday November 4.

The festivities, coordinated by the Young Men, included carnivals, games, and other activities. There was a record hop and a sweat shirt decoration contest in the Y-Center on Wednesday. That same day was declared Anti-red Day, not because of communism, but because red is the color of the University of Utah. Students who dared to wear the hated color were thrown in a mock jail set up in the South Quad. The offenders were sentenced to ten minutes in jail and were reminded of the attributes of royal blue, the BYU color.

On Friday, the ladies of Merrill Hall, and Budge Hall donned football hardware when they met in the traditional Petticoat Playoff. Budge Hall emerged victorious and Merrill Hall players attributed their defeat to the size of their opponents.

At the bonfire that night, the Song Leaders, Flag Twirlers, Cheerleaders, and Cosmo the Cougar directed the cheering and chanting students while football coach Tom Hudspeth sparked more enthusiasm with a pep talk. Afterward the students snake-danced their way to the carnival in the Y-Center parking lot where a ferris wheel, pie throwing contests, cotton candy, and other booths and rides awaited the keyed-up crowd.

Enthusiasm was flying very high indeed that night. It's too bad that the next day both the enthusiasm and the activities were shot down to an end in Salt Lake, where the Redskins scored a 47-13 bull's eye against the Cats.

For only a quarter you could let out a lot of steam at the car smash during the carnival. The slow exposure in this photograph registers the movement of the sledge hammer falling on the car.

-RED BOO

The jail is a mockery, but the ten minutes students wearing red had to spend in it were very real. It was all in fun to promote school spirit Anti-Red Day.

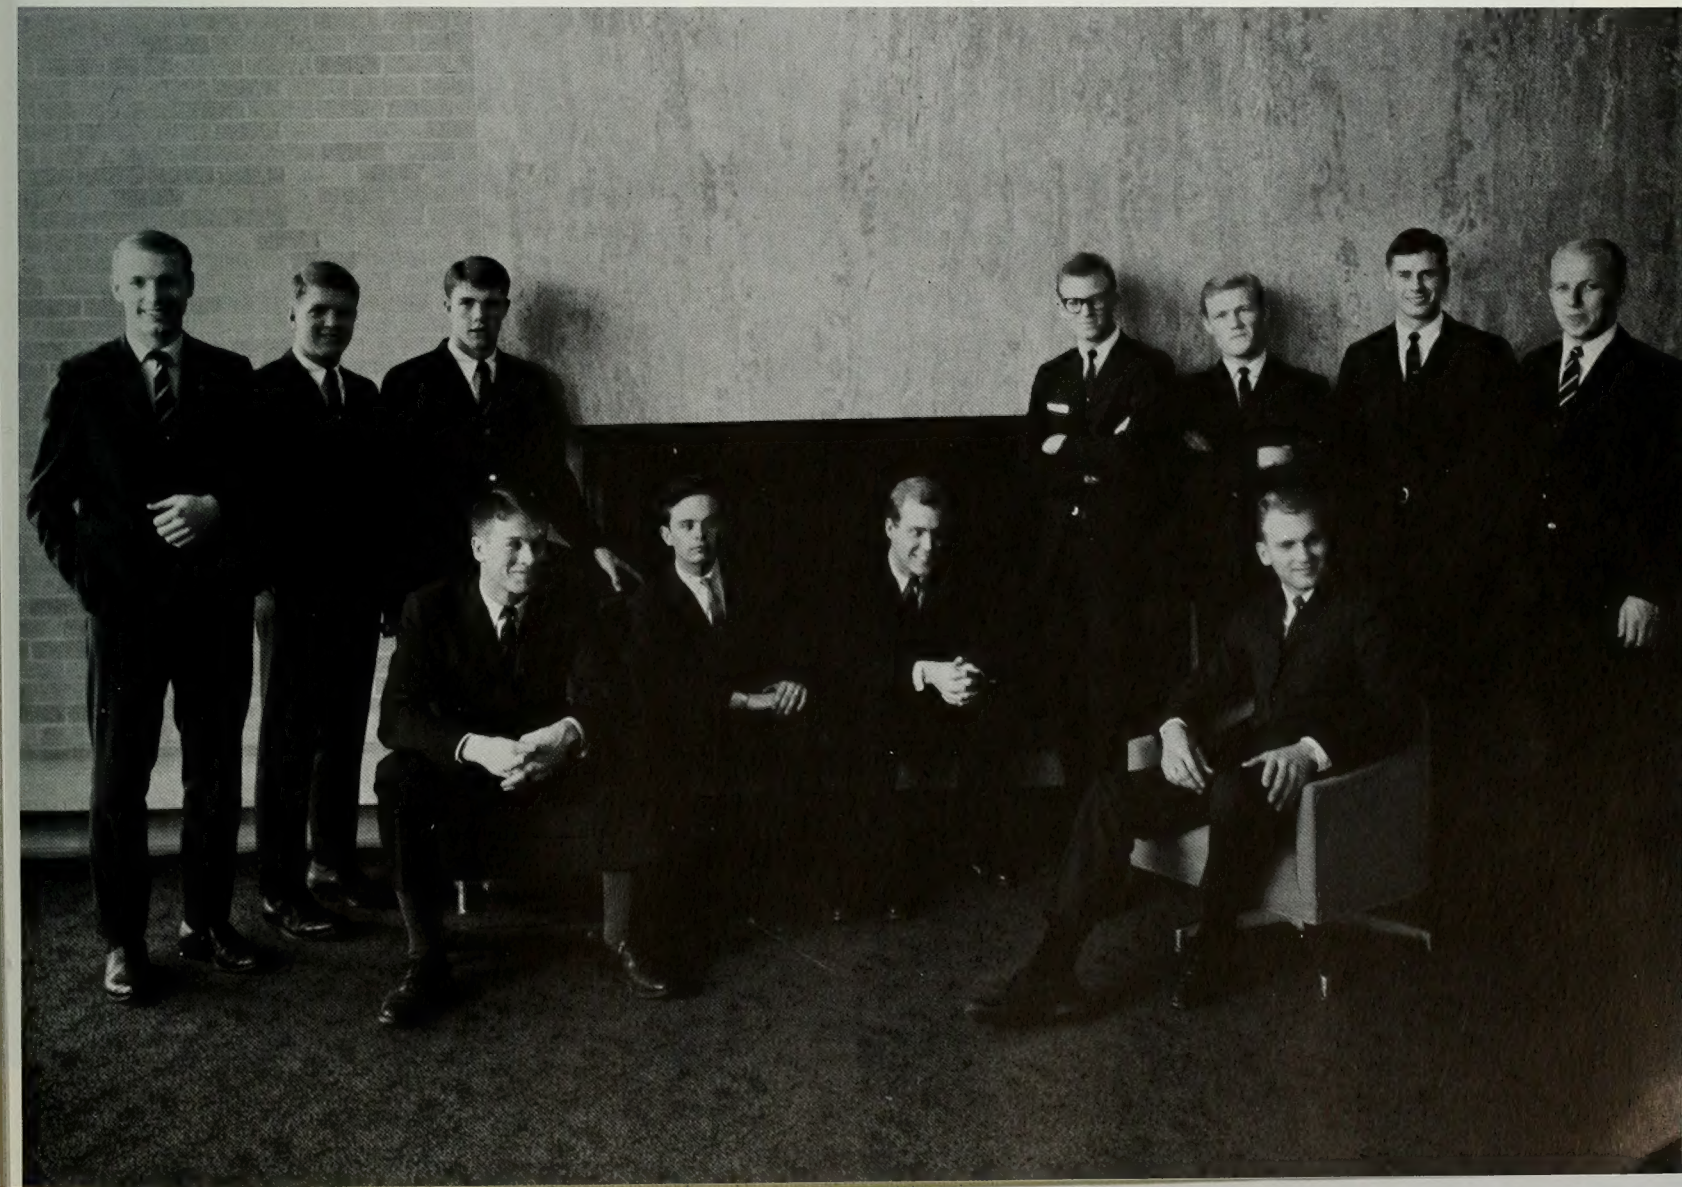

From the original 41 nominees by housing units, campus units, and city coeds for the title of Preferred Man of 8,000 BYU coeds, eleven contestants survived. As opposed to previous years, a final vote was not taken, and the man with the most votes from the balloting was announced the day of the Preference Ball. Winning one of the most effortless "beauty" contests on campus, DOUG CHAMBERLAIN, a pre-dental major from Salt Lake City, was sponsored by Fugal Hall. Doug, a returned missionary from Central America, and an Aaronic Priesthood advisor in the 36th Ward was admittedly a bit shakey, but came through with characteristic calmness.

COOL SHOW, LATE SNOW

Thrilling the BYU audience was Peter Yarrow, a Cornell psychology graduate who switched to folk singing in New York; Paul Stookey, one-time manager for a chemical company who found profound statements in the Village; and Mary, a tall willowy blonde with a tall willowy voice singing folk songs since kindergarten.

With snow sculpturing, skiing, skating, snowball stacking, and other seasonal games, BYU celebrated Winter Carnival February 8-12 under the theme "Legends in Snow Motion."

Snow sculpturing, scheduled for February 8, was delayed until the following week due to a lack of the necessary white powder. February 10-12 at Timp Haven saw the Alpine Club win over second-place Sportswomen in the finals for the Broken-Ski award in the women's division. The Sportsmen won over the Alpine club in the downhill slalom race finals for the men.

February 11 at Winter Gardens was the scene of the ice-skating competition including races, relays, speed skating, and figure skating. Competition was won by the Alpine Club for the girls and the Canadian Club for the boys. The broomball hockey held at Winter Gardens also, was won by CAA for the men, and the Reenies for the women. Teams wore tennis shoes and had to furnish their own brooms.

Highlight of the Winter Carnival activities was the Peter, Paul, and Mary concert followed by the semi-formal dance. Over 8,000 fans witnessed the famous trio's performance.

The Royalty

Reigning over the week as Snow King and Queen were Doug Calder and Melodie Matheny, chosen by personal interviews, performance in the sports competition, and student vote. Sponsored by the Alpine club, Doug Calder was a senior majoring in advertising and public relations. A member of the BYU Mountain Rescue Team, the 1965 Snow King hails from Thompson, Manitoba, Canada, where skiing and hockey are his favorite winter sports. Snow Queen Melodie Matheny, sponsored by the Hawaiian Club, hails from Torrence, California. An Elementary Education major, she enjoys skiing, singing, swimming, and dancing. Melodie was active in Vahknom Culture Unit, the Program Bureau, and in the Senior House of Representatives. She has also attended the Church College of Hawaii.

Grand winner of the week was the Alpine club receiving the Snowbel prize of $100 for accumulating the greatest number of total points for all events.

Delta Phi Kappa triumphed in the Snow Sculpturing division of the Winter Carnival with their creation titled "Tortesi and the Hare" which took a first place.

COMMON GOAL: UNDERSTANDING

The Iranian exhibit received the trophy for setting up the best Wilkinson Center international display.

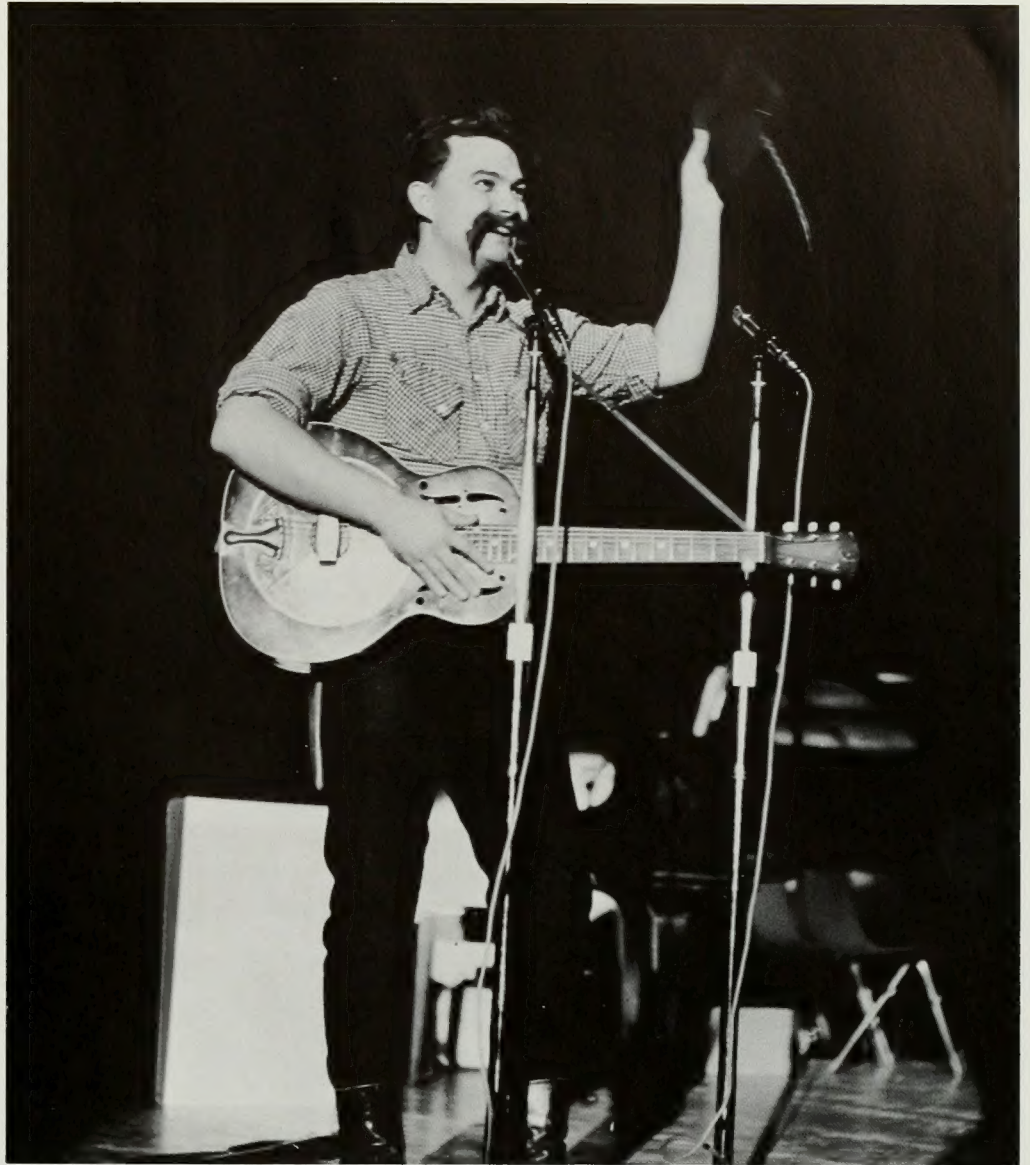

Shedding light on the culture of our northernly citizens are the colorful Alaskan totem poles.

Various clubs and organizations on campus combined forces during International Week, February 15-20, to promote an awareness of the world-wide student representation at BYU. These groups also brought about a greater understanding of the more than 50 foreign countries and their cultures represented at the University.

Cosmopolitan display booths, Wilkinson Center films, free Persian lessons given at the Iranian Club's first-prize booth, and a mock United Nations were but a few of the many opportunities available for instruction in the ways of foreign lands. To add to the international flavor, exotic music was presented in concert form each midday by Lloyd Miller and his wife. Throughout the week, American students were selected at random and invited to the apartments of foreign students for dinner. There was also a banquet with food from 60 different countries.

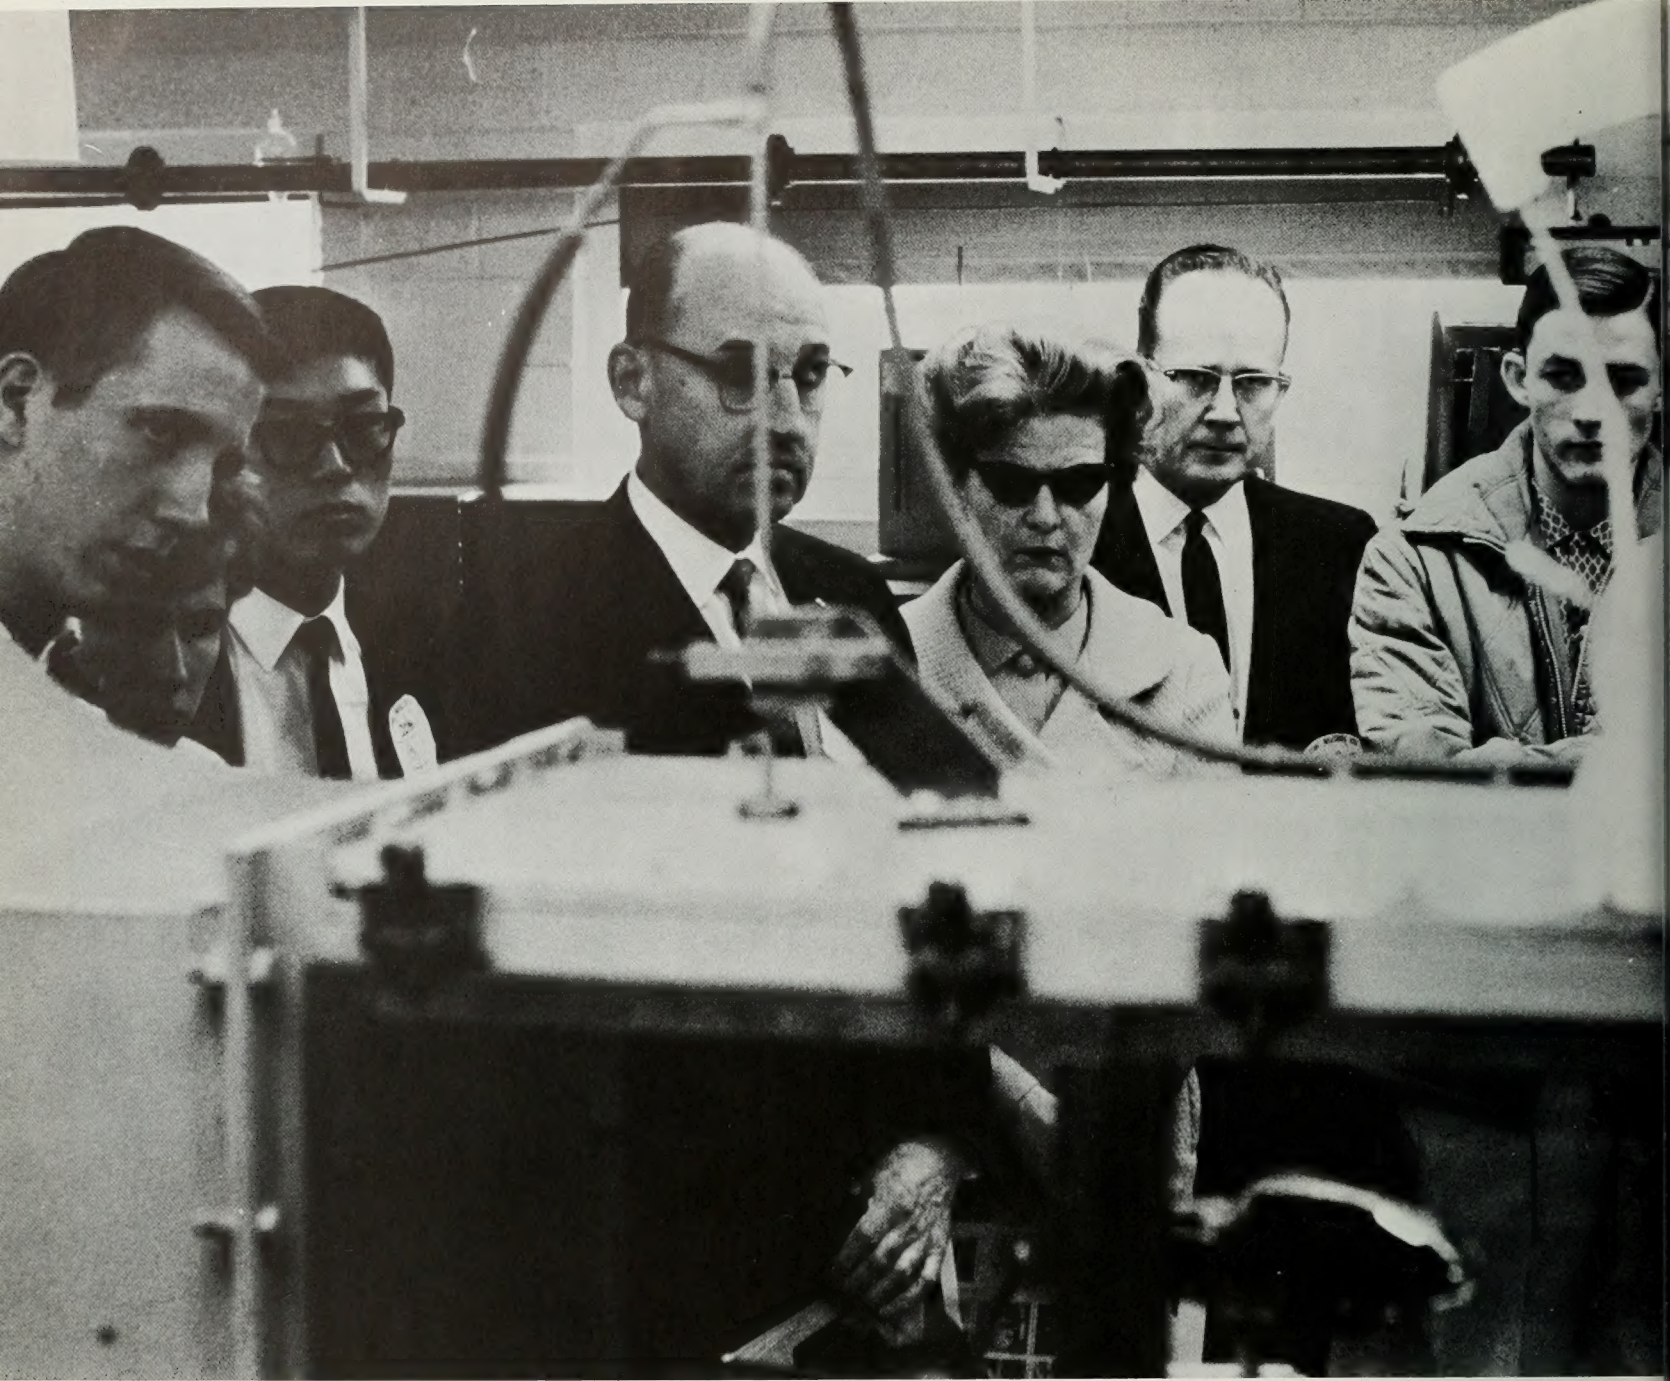

Climaxing the week's activities was a Mardi Gras Costume Ball, for anyone who "claimed the world as his home." European flavored music was played by Paul Benjiman's eight-piece band; floor-show numbers included a Samoan dancer, a Navajo magician and comedian, and a cowboy vocalist.

American entertainment is performed as one of the floor show numbers during the Mardi Gras, the final activity of International week.

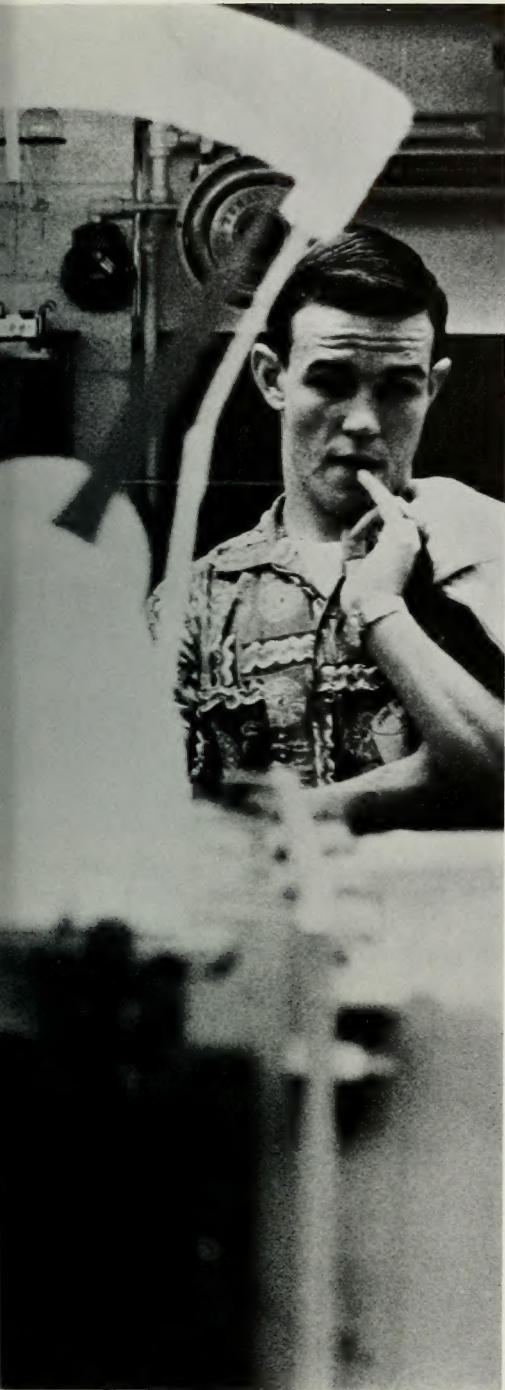

Performing exotic music from all over the world, the Lloyd Millers entertain passing students in the Wilkinson Center lounge.

APPLICATIONS OF SCIENTIFIC

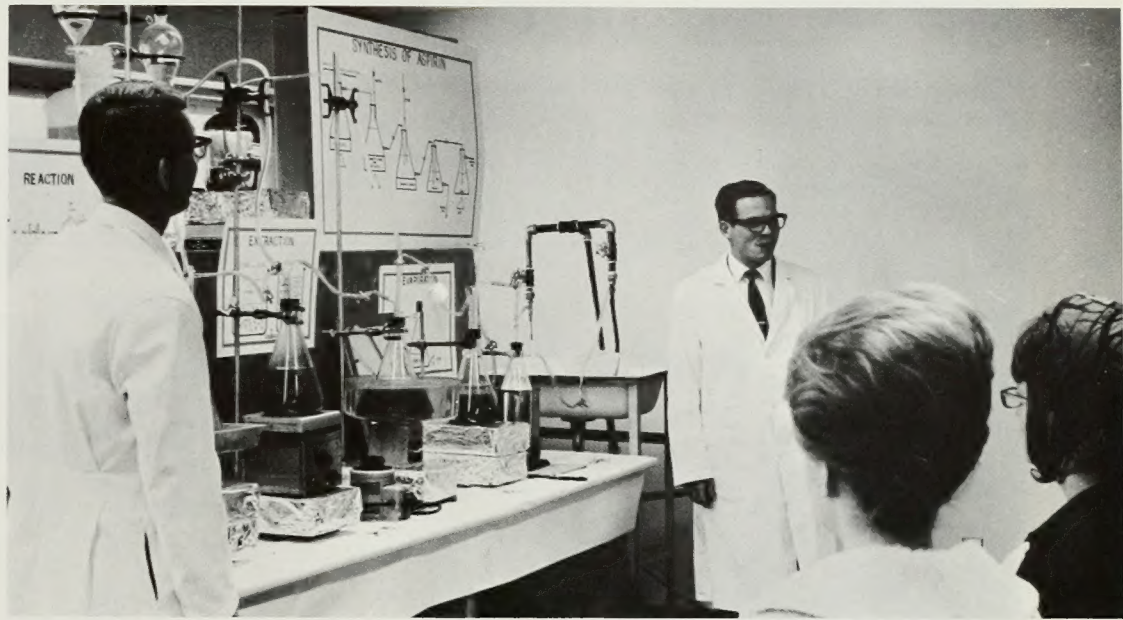

A civil engineering student explains the mechanics of the model water treatment plant. The model won first place in the individual display class.

A model of a sports car is tested in a wind tunnel as visitors view the demonstration. The exhibit was part of the mechanical engineers' displays.

KNOWLEDGE FEATURED

Visitors of the electrical engineers' displays provided the power—through a generator mounted on a bicycle frame—to light one, or several light bulbs.

"All this for a head ache?" asked a coed visiting the chemical engineers' model plant of the synthesis of aspirin.

Car collisions to illustrate the value of the use of seat belts, a water purification plant, synthesis of aspirin, and uses of electronic equipment in the home, industry, medicine, and communications, were all part of the displays presented by the BYU chapter of the National Engineers Joint Council during Engineering Week, the last week in February.

More than 3000 people saw the displays prepared by students of the four engineering departments on campus: Civil, Chemical, Mechanical, and Electrical. Included were also demonstrations of traffic patterns, sugar refining from sugar beets, automobile styling and design, and a concept for using the excess water of the northwestern part of the North American Continent and distributing it to the deficient areas of Canada, United States, and Mexico.

Chairman of the event, Kirk Galbraith explained that there were awards presented to the best displays. In the individual display classification the civil engineers took first place with their water purification plant. Winners of the best departmental display were the mechanical engineers who featured automobile production, design, and mechanics, as well as the seat belt demonstration.

On Monday March 1, the engineers held their Annual Awards Banquet in the Wilkinson Center. George B. Hill, noted engineer and inventor was the guest speaker.

Climaxing Election Week was the studentbody talent show preceding the announcement of new officers and the Inagural Ball.

Some said the contests were more dignified, others called lack of imagination, but whatever it was, it made this year's studentbody and classes election proceedings a far cry from those of previous years. Of course, the carnival atmosphere prevailed, but there were few barkers, no dancing girls, no sky divers, and no spectacular "ingenuity" projects.

As in previous years the race most closely watched by campus citizens was that for studentbody president. The finals dawned with Dave Hoopes and Bob Christiansen as the last round adversaries. The race was on: signs of all sizes, on cars, on sticks, and on people could be seen all over the campus while word-of-mouth helped to spread the information about the candidates and their platforms. Friday, April 10 brought an end to the turmoil and labor, with Christiansen squeaking by Hoopes with a mere 215-vote lead.

BELLE OF THE Y

Out of ninety-two girls, and after two weeks of contests in poise and personality, cake-baking, crafts, dance, culture, talent, and popularity vote, MELANIE McEWEN, a sophomore from Panguitch, Utah, came forth to reign as the 1965 Belle of the Y. A medical technology major sponsored by the International Folk Dancers, Melanie likes to dance, decorate cakes, and enjoys music and reading plays.

ANITA JOHNSON, a freshman in homemaking education from Huntington, West Virginia, attended Melanie as first runner-up. Sponsored by the freshman class, Anita was a winner in the talent, popularity, and dancing contests. She enjoyed modeling, singing, and acting, in addition to swimming, crocheting, and sewing.

DIANNE CLYDE, a tall blonde from Springville, Utah, was sponsored by Horne Hall. The second attendant, a junior winning in the cake-baking, culture, talent, and popularity divisions, was dorm president, and affiliated with Sigma Delta Omicron, Omicron Nu, Alpha Lambda Delta, and Thea Alexis.

SUGAR AND SPICE AND ALL THAT JAZZ

Winners of both the Group Division and Sweepstakes awards, Sophomore coeds and their dates (above) re-enact the car-parking routine in song and dance.

Nervously waiting backstage for the cue "You're on!" Maeser Hall participants adjust their costumes and receive last minute instructions from director.

Girls in white dresses with blue satin sashes, and boys in short pants with long kneesocks greeted music enthusiasts to the 1965 Songfest "Sugar 'n Spice," where, after many chilly walks to 6:00 a.m. rehearsals, directors yelling "Take it from the third measure again," and participants pinning unfinished costumes at the last minute, twelve groups out of an initial forty-three qualified to perform for the final production held March 26th in the Smith Fieldhouse.

Whitney Hall bedecked in U and I sugar sacks copped the Women's Division trophy with their "Pre-Sweetened", while the 47th Ward, clad in tunics of blue, brown and green, took the Most Musical award with their "Wending." Q Deseret Towers won the Most Original trophy and placed second in audience appeal with their "Elevator." Written and directed by Linda Marx, the winning song typified how if life in the seven-story building ever fell short of the sugar and spice it was cut out to be, the coeds could always "ride, ride, ride, the elevators." High winner of the event, capturing first place in the Group Division and also winning the Audience Sweepstakes was the Sophomore class with Marie Peterson's "Home Is Where the Heart Is." Other semi-finalist entries included the Senior Class, Hawaiian Club, Sportsmen and Sportswomen, Chi Triellas, Vahknom, Maeser Hall, Smith Hall, and Merrill.

In colorful Hillbilly fashion, the Sportsmen and Sportswomen twang out "You Were Mine," to the accompaniment of piano, guitar, and gut-bucket.

Lively Mike, Bob, John, (above) and Dick, better known as The Brothers Four, strum and sing during the pre-prom concert. The audience applause brought them back three times.

SOON ON THE EVE

Couples arrive (right) at the west entrance of the Wilkinson Center and proceed to the stairway toward the main ballroom.

April 16th marked the most memorable and gala evening of the year, the 1965 Junior Prom and concert where lovely coeds attired in elegant creations of lace, delustered satin, and chiffon were attended by handsome college men in dark suits, tuxedos, and dinner jackets.

As the fieldhouse lights dimmed, the Brothers Four entered the spotlight to entertain BYU fans for two hours and three encores with such favorites as their million copy "Greenfields." After the concert, the scene shifted to the Junior Prom in the Wilkinson Center Ballroom where the decorations committee had barely finished hanging coverings of modernistic trees in hues of blue, green and gray from the wall, and long strips of shimmering foil along the balcony. A fountain graced the center of the ballroom and the aroma of roses, carnations, and orchids filled the air.

Intermission entertainment was provided by the Production Guild after which couples were refreshed with sparkling black cherry floats, pineapple puffs, and entwined candy hearts. When all too soon the eve drew to a close, departing couples were presented with the Brothers Four recording of "Turn Around" as a token of the affair.

Colored lights play upon the floor as couples whirl to the Scotsmen's music.

Formally attired couples pause briefly by the ballroom to read the program.

With loud speakers, bugles, and other noise makers, the wake-up committees (right) did their job all too willingly. Picture was taken at 5 a.m.

Some started the celebrations early. Here, students stage what the Daily Universe called "Pre-Y-Day Rites."

Wednesday the 5th turned out to be the soggiest day in May and Y-Day activities: city cleaning and beautification projects, whitewashing the Y-block, and fun and games, had to be postponed until May the 12th.

The schedule called for work activities in the morning and sports and social activities in the afternoon and night. Beginning at 5 a.m., students from approximately 36 wards worked on projects throughout the area. The Provo Airport, the parks, in the surrounding area, the cemeteries, the boat harbor, the BYU campus and Provo city in general were given special attention while students from fifteen other wards gave the Y-block its annual coat of whitewash.

At noon, some 7,200 tired, sun burned, and sweaty students congregated at the football stadium to down two tons of spaghetti, 100 gallons of salad, 230 gallons of ice cream and 7,200 drinks and pieces of pie. After dinner the sports activities included a mixed relay, a pie eating contest, a greased pig contest, the alumni-sponsored Grand Prix Bike Race, tugs-of-war, a tandem bike relay, and the traditional chariot races.

Evening activities began with a Sophomore Class Vaudeville Show in the Smith Fieldhouse at 6:30. An outdoor movie followed at 8:00 and at the same time dances started in the Wilkinson Center. All activity on campus ceased at approximately 11:30 p.m.

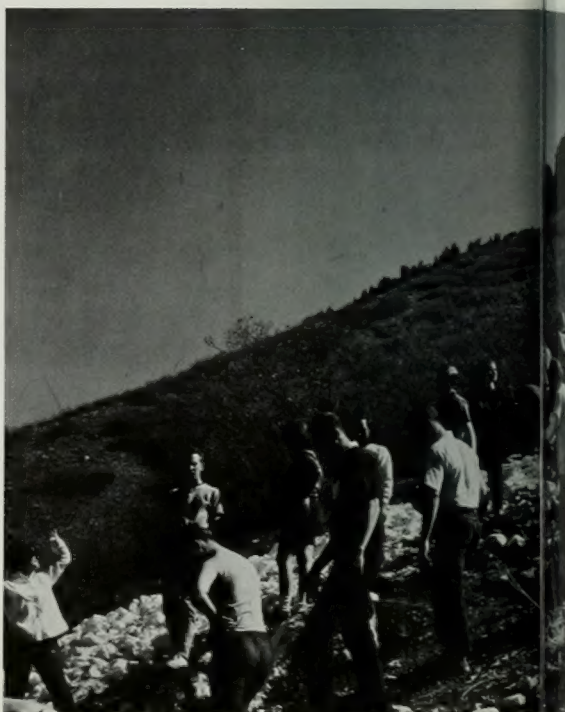

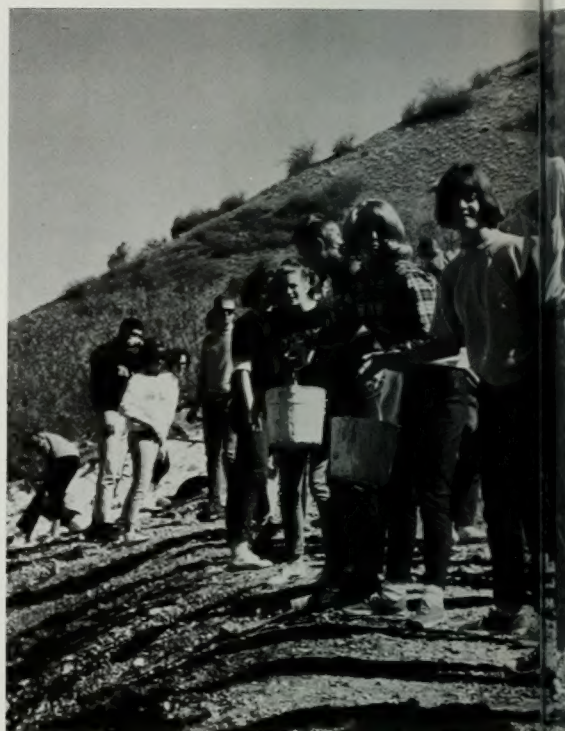

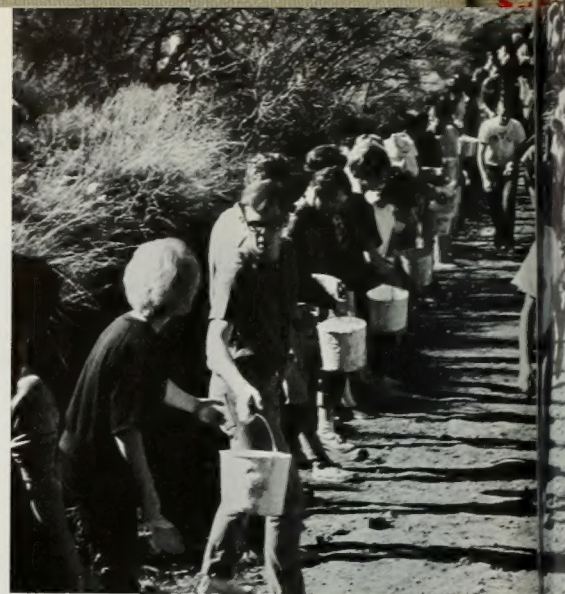

Y-Day workers (right) get their reward: a spaghetti dinner. Ingredients for the recipe included 1,300 pounds of ground beef, 1,300 pounds of spaghetti, 95 gallons of tomatoes and 180 pounds of onions.

OTHER

All the fun of "The Old West" broke loose beginning May 3 when the Rodeo Club sponsored its annual Western Week. Special activities included a Western dance and a horse show featuring demonstrations in trick roping, calf tying, and various equestrian formations. A Rodeo concluded the week with events ranging from bareback and saddle bronc riding to steer wrestling and calf roping.

Continuing a school trend, the 1964-65 fall semester saw a new enrollment record set at BYU. The total registration of 17,808 students was a fifteen per cent increase over the number of students registered for the previous year. Early in December Acting President Earl C. Crockett announced that the current enrollment exceeded the capacity of the University plant and that preparations were then underway to maintain future enrollment at the level of the 1964-65 school year.

EVENTS

Mrs. Charleston, a member of one of the Southwest Indian Tribes explains the art of rug-making in the step-down lounge of the Wilkinson Center during American Indian Week. Other activities included a demonstration of the belt, Apache, Devel, and hoop dances; a corn-grinding demonstration; and a display of native artifacts such as pottery, rugs, baskets, clothing, and jewelry. Bread was cooked in a student-constructed oven on the patio and sold to students for a nominal fee.

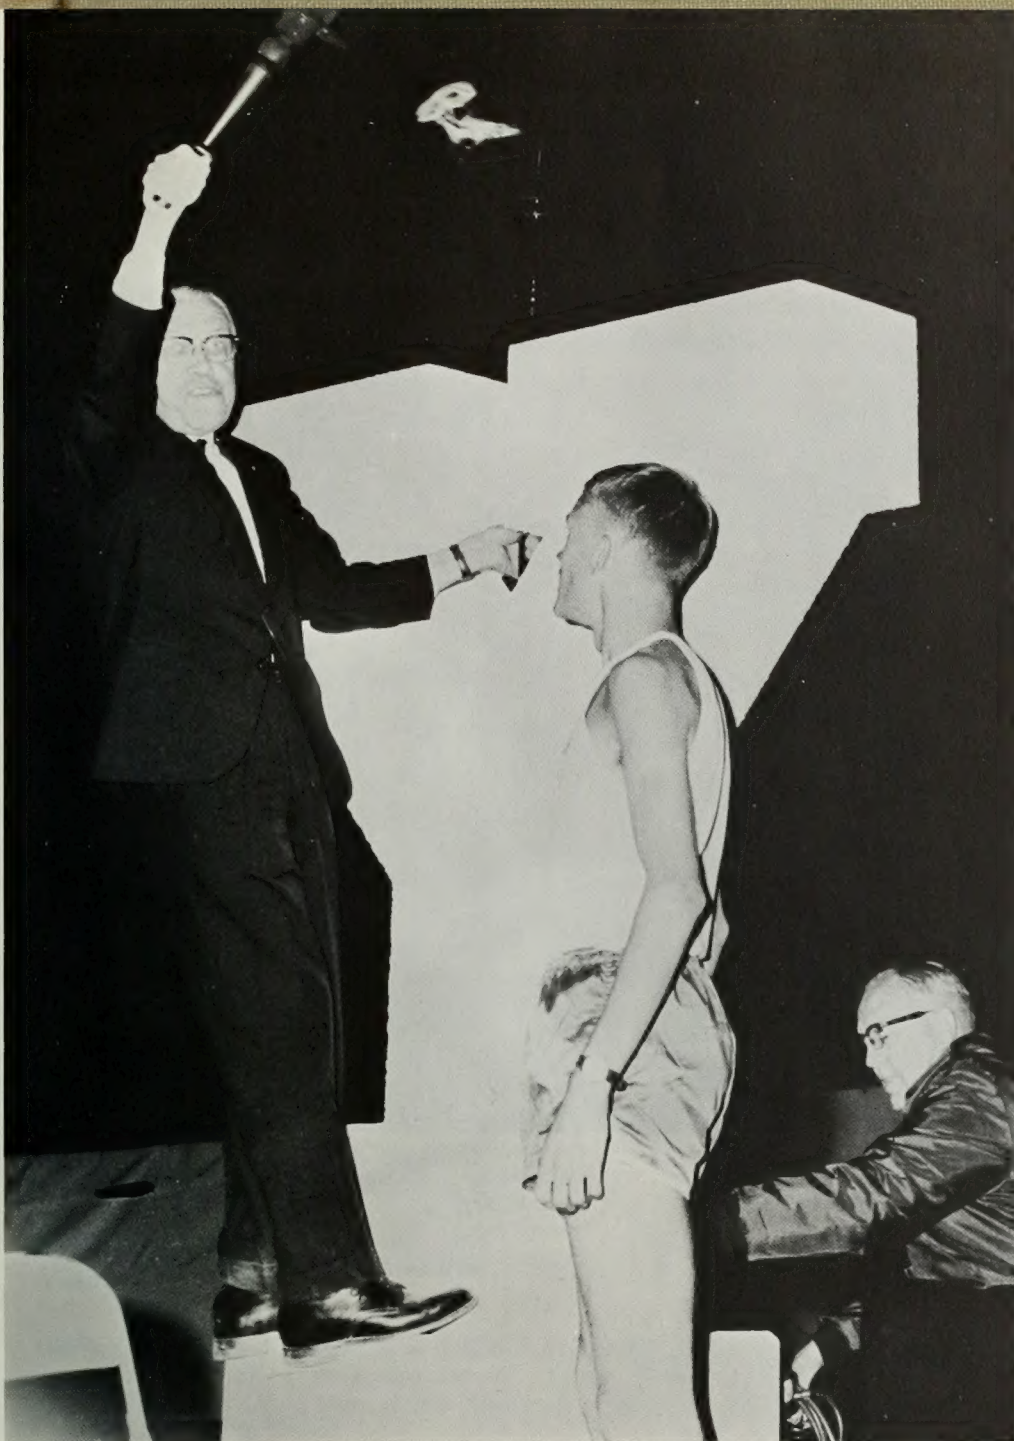

The central theme of the six day conference for studentbody leadership was "Fear not what man can do." Ninety-five student leaders attended the first BYU training session to last for more than three days. The September concave, held in the green and gold setting of Aspen Grove, was designed to stimulate the individual and his potentials for growth, and to increase his ability to work with those around him. Perhaps the most significant consequence of this year's conference was that it was the creating source, for those attending, of an undercurrent which started in September and lasted until May. That undercurrent was dramatised by the sub-surface theme which developed; "People who need people. . . ."

The largest number of students ever to receive diplomas from BYU was present for the 1965 Commencement Exercises. Receiving diplomas were a total of 1,810 students, 1,598 of which received bachelor's degrees. The largest number of graduates—400—came from the College of Humanities and Social Sciences.

With a new stadium came new traditions, one of which was the lighting of the Block Y at every home game. The lightings were done by special individuals who were selected because they stood out as people who have contributed to the Spirit of the Y. These people were chosen from the Student-body, the Administration, and the Alumni. Such people as Ernest L. Wilkinson, Herald R. Clark, and Wayne B. Hales were among this year's Spirit of the Y Representatives.

One of the activities of Married Students Week was "Tiny King and Queen." Kimberly Ann Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Richardson and Kory Gillitte, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Gillette, were the crowned royalty.

Studentbody President BRUCE OLSEN, a graduate student from Orangeville, Utah majoring in communications, was responsible for initiating student government streamlining.

MORE THAN GLORY SEEKERS

It is often heard on campus that studentbody officers are "nothing but a bunch of glory seekers." If this is true, there must have been plenty of glory to go around this past year; there were over 3,000 students directly involved in student government.

The trouble with this kind of glory is that it doesn't come easily, and many a newly-elected officer has found out with horror that his job requires hours and hours of hard work, and that the spot light seldom shines at two in the morning.

During the past year, under the direction of Studentbody President Bruce Olsen, studentbody officers accomplished a great deal for the university and the rest of the students. The officers' efforts brought many famous performers as well as great personalities to our campus. Student officers welcomed new students, helped to make the Honor Code an effective part of BYU, and acted as a go-between for the students and the administration.

One of the most important projects undertaken by student government this past year was to establish a more efficient and streamlined governing body; the constitution was revised and amended to cope with the present problems of student government. Among other things, the streamlining did away with the senate and established a assembly in its place.

Appointed to the office of Executive Secretary was JANE SCHOLES a senior from The Dalles, Oregon, majoring in elementary education. Jane handled all correspondence for the President, supervised the receptionist program for the new Student Government Office, and was a member of the Executive Council.

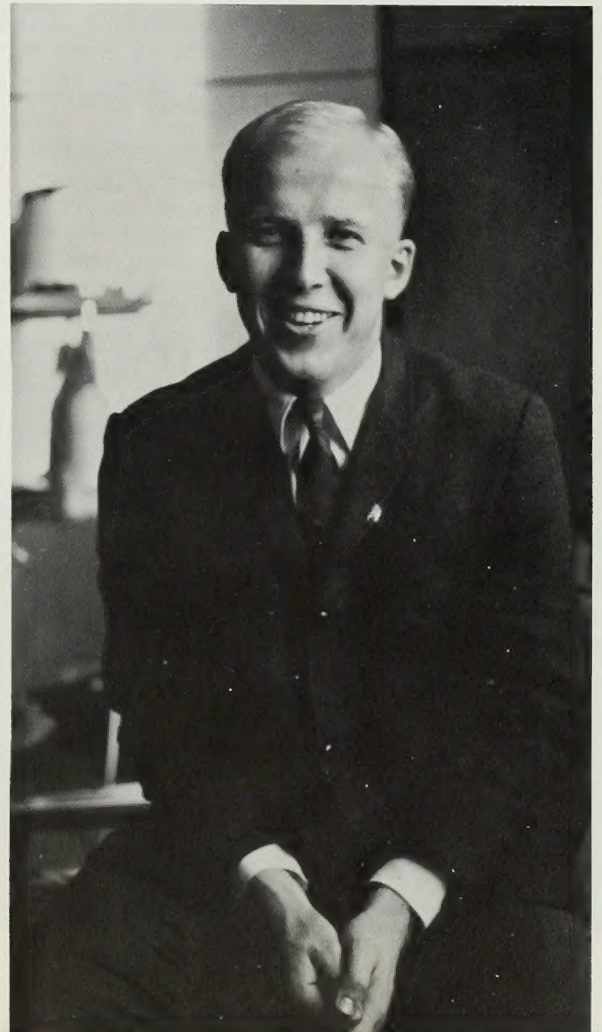

Another Executive Assistant was BRENT BIRCHER, a Salt Lake City graduate student majoring in governmental science. Brent, pictured here with his son Jess, was Chairman of the Academic Council, and a member of the Y Center Operating Board.

Filling the new post of Executive Representative was BILL THOMSON, a French major from Eugene, Oregon. Besides handling special assignments, Bill acted as a representative on behalf of the President in meetings, councils, and other functions.

EXECUTIVE ASSISTANTS

Executive Assistant BOB CHRISTIANSEN of Ely, Nevada, was in charge of all conferences, banquets, and block-seat tickets. A senior majoring in sociology, and one of the most preferred men on campus, Bob also worked with the Leadership Committee, and was a member of the Y Center Operating Board.

Vice-president of Finance JOHN WRIGHT was a senior from New York City majoring in economics. John had the tantalizing job of deciding where and how the $140,000 studentbody budget was spent. He also supervised the budgets of all student organizations and kept record of all studentbody financial affairs. Major improvements in the Office of Finance were the publication of a budget booklet and cutting some of the red tape in obtaining studentbody funds.

Vice-president of Culture RAY GOODWIN was a junior from Blackfoot, Idaho, majoring in music theory. For Ray, who dreams of writing musical productions, there were many "opening nights" as he headed studentbody assemblies, theater productions, art exhibits, Y Center music, Skits-O-Frantic, and Songfest. He was also Student Lyceum Consultant, and Film Consultant. Ray's goal was to provide more opportunities for all students who showed creative ability.

VICE-PRESIDENTS

Vice-president of Social Activities was DAVE BOYACK, a junior economics major from Salt Lake City. Working for greater student participation in social activities, Dave spent over fifteen hours per week supervising and co-ordinating his committees which covered such activities as the stadium inauguration, the grand opening of the Y Center, and Homecoming and Winter Carnival activities. Duties added this year included supervision of games, outings, and Y Day.

Vice-president of Student Relations BRENT TURLEY was a senior from El Paso, Texas, majoring in law. Often referred to as "the office of ambiguity," the Student Relations post covered Central Publicity, public relations, international students, and most time-consuming of all, BYU pep activities. This year, in an effort to improve communication between the students and the student leaders, Brent initiated a program of visits to the dorms by student leaders.

ASSOCIATED WOMEN STUDENTS

AWS is the organization that involves all women students at Brigham Young University. The Associated Women Students' Council, Presidency, and Junior Council worked to make each girl's stay at the University enjoyable and successful.

Together with the Associated Men Students organization, AWS works to orient new students to college life through the "University Sisters" program and through special activities for foreign students.

Special AWS activities during the year included the annual Preference Ball, Women's Week, Songfest, the monthly "Y" Standout, and the yearly Annals of Achievement.

President Nathan Eldon Tanner presents the AMS Exemplary Manhood Award to Art Linkletter, the first non-LDS to receive it.

ASSOCIATED MEN STUDENTS

The Associated Men Students' organization, as the BYU men's counterpart of AWS, is designed to help the men become oriented at school and to stimulate and coordinate student activities.

AMS works with its sister unit to assist foreign students in becoming acquainted with American university life and also to conduct student housing activities. A special feature of the joint activities of the two organizations is the annual awarding of "Supremacy" trophies to student groups and wards showing particular excellence in academic and athletic achievement.

Special student events sponsored by AMS were the Christmas drive, Men's Night, Winter Carnival, Fight Night, and the yearly Y Day.

Senate President Jim Mortenson

During their last year of existence the 34-member ASBYU student senate did a bang-up job as they attempted to move into different areas such as promoting student services and service projects. Two-thirds of the school year, the senate was under the leadership of Vince Breglio, a senior psychology major from Whittier, California, who was an executive assistant to last year's student body president. Salt Laker Jim Mortenson, who spends his spare time majoring in mathematics and plays a pretty fair game of shuffleboard, was appointed president of the senate for the last part of second semester. Basically, the duty of this body was to legislate all policies and programs concerning the associated students of BYU. In 1964-1965, especially, they were interested in providing help for the various organizations and groups within the studentbody.

SUPREME COURT

TRAFFIC COURT

Established to act as a balance between ASBYU executive officers and the ASBYU legislative groups, the Supreme Court was invaluable in its function as mediator. Acting as a court of last appeal on student body matters, the Supreme Court has the responsibility of handling disputes among the various student organizations and between ASBYU officials and student organizations. The ASBYU Supreme Court consisted of three justices appointed by the ASBYU President. Each justice's tenure of office equaled his time in residence at the University. Important cases handled by the Court during the 1964-65 school year concerned election rules, eligibility for offices, and the dispute over the IOC jurisdiction. Organized over five years ago, the student-conducted Student Traffic Appeals Court was established as an auxiliary of the student Supreme Court. Student appeals can be made on any traffic citation, and all cases are judged by the standards of the Utah State Traffic Code and special BYU campus rules. In deciding a claim, the court has the power either to increase or decrease the fines or points originally attached. Under Chief Judge Gar Elison, the court held one to two sessions each week.

Responsible for educating the student body in all matters pertaining to academic and non-academic standards, the Honor Council functions to assist fellow students to be aware of the honor code at BYU and to live up to its statutes. The council is separated into two bodies, the publicity division which informs the student body as to honor council purposes, and the counseling division which works directly in counseling those who have violated the honor code.

The system of being completely on one's honor to comply with the University's standards and also helping one's associates in the same respect has attracted the attention of other universities since the code was instituted in 1949 by student constitutional amendment. Many schools have requested information about the honor system and are investigating the possibility of adopting a similar one.

PROGRAM

BUREAU

With basketball halftimes, MIA shows, Hotel Utah shows, high school tours in Utah, California, and the Northwest, and Indian tours in the Southwest, not to mention all the week-night shows in the Provo vicinity, the Program Bureau offered many chances for BYU students to serve others while developing their talents. Known for the public service they render on behalf of the University and the Church in presenting wholesome entertainment, the Bureau staged 253 shows during the 1963-1964 school year. The schedule of shows this year was similar and breaks down as follows: Church-54, BYU campus-22, high school-64, civic-26, college-6, other schools-3, military-43, TV-4, people to people-23, and radio-8. The total miles traveled was 72,437; the total audience was 1,036,589; and the total number of students participating in one or more performances was 2,217.

Making sure these shows were run as powerfully and as effectively as possible was Miss Janie Thompson, Director of the Program Bureau, Blaine Lee, Student Director, and 22 MC directors, the backbone of the programs, who did everything from running spotlights and testing microphones, to splicing tapes and building huge props.

The merry-go-round scene from "Mary Poppins" was re-enacted during the southwestern tour by (rear) Brent Hansen, Cody Neville, Blaine Lee, Don Reed, Pam Rogers; (middle) Dick Circuit, Susan Ward, Michele Thayne, Arlen Housekeeper; (front) Stewart Smith, and Arlene Nichissey.

Patti Petersen, Sandi Jensen, and Sally Flynn perform as a trio for the Elections Program before the Inaugural Ball. They also participated with the Bureau on the northwest tour and represented BYU on the twelve-week tour to the Orient during the summer.

Sponsored by the State Department to improve international relations and impressions of American youth, BYU's "Curtain Time USA" variety show was presented in Ceylon, India, Nepal, Pakistan, Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Turkey, Greece, Lebanon, and Jordan, with a final presentation in Vienna at the World Music Festival. Under the direction of Norm Nielson, the twenty-five members of the Program Bureau performed numerous shows during the seventeen weeks from February to June in addition to participation in forums, roundtables, discussions, and luncheons. Making a hit in the Middle East, the "Curtain Time" cast was best loved for their willingness to mingle right in with the people in the communities.

SHE WALKS

Tension and excitement fill the air as hundreds of coeds line up to "prefer" their favorite men.

Women's Week 1964, "She Walks in Beauty," honored the BYU coeds November 16-20. The activities officially began with a Spurs-sponsored concert by mezzo-soprano Shirley Verrett on Monday night. The next day, Dr. Leona Holbrook, professor of physical education and head of the women's P. E. department, told her audience at the Devotional Assembly in the Smith Fieldhouse that their aspirations "should be higher than expected." The Womens Chorus, under the direction of Maughan McMurdie, presented a special tribute to BYU women at the assembly.

On Wednesday of Women's Week, Dileas Chalean played hostess to a bridal show in the Alumni House. Then at Thursday's Forum Assembly, Mme. Ginette Spanier, directress of the world famous Balmain House of Fashion, explained that "nothing comes easily." She also revealed that women dress for themselves, not for men or other women. Climaxing the week was a fashion show sponsored by White Key. The emphasis of the stylish fashions was on financial feasibility.

Fashions with an emphasis on economy are modeled for BYU coeds attending the White Key fashion show.

DAILY UNIVERSE

The task of meeting a daily newspaper deadline was, for the Daily Universe staff, not only time-consuming, but also rewarding and exciting. In the office located on the fifth floor of the Wilkinson Center, editors often worked long hours after the rest of the campus had hit the sack. When first-semester editor Bill Sanders left, Sheila Carter, managing editor, moved into his position at the helm, and business continued to move smoothly forward.

As the second largest daily morning newspaper in the state, the Universe is among the first on campus to receive the news, good or tragic. Freak accidents, new appointments, sporting events, the latest in fashion, candid comments from students, and club meetings comprised a portion of the news covered in the daily publication. Putting out a larger paper this year than ever before, the 50-member staff had a big job, that of informing the students of happenings on campus and in the world.

BANYAN

Stereo music piped in over the intercom, a spacious, yellow, modern and tastefully decorated office, and huge windows revealing views of campus, Y mountain, and Mount Timp, all combined to provide mood and luxury for Banyan staff members in 1965. So luxurious was everything, in fact, that it was sometimes difficult to concentrate on the tasks that needed to be finished. Several things had not changed with the move to the Wilkinson Center office, however. There were still the staff's dreams and aspirations of producing the best book ever, and there was, as always, the hectic pressure just prior to deadlines. It seemed that the increased size of the office brought with it more places for layouts and copy to be lost, but those who cared, who slaved over their brainchild, the Banyan, somehow managed to maintain, within a general location, the materials necessary for the production of "the book." Toward the end of the year, the staff had dwindled to a noble few who, although they were often tempted to commit each other to another prominent Provo institution, devoted valuable homework and socializing time to produce the 1965 Banyan.

INTERCOLLEGIATE KNIGHTS

Jan Thurston
President

While students were caught up in the excitement of NCAA regional basketball playoffs, members of Intercollegiate Knights once more made the trek up the "Y" mountain to carry on the tradition of "Y" lighting. This tradition and two others established by IK's, ringing the victory bell and co-sponsoring Belle of the Y Week, are the school's oldest traditions. These and other services such as ushering at athletic events, selling movie discount cards and programs at games, and sponsoring the Campus Chest drive, enabled IK's to accumulate twice as many service hours as any other unit for 1964-65.

Y CALCARES

Y Calcares, whose name was taken from the Spanish word for "spurs," was organized as an adaptation of a national women's service unit. Appearing at BYU in the 1941-42 school year, the group's first business meetings were conducted during lunch hours. Since 1955 Y Calcares has been exclusively for juniors, because in that year the Y C's brought to BYU, "Spurs," a national service organization for sophomore women. To become a part of Y Calcares, a coed must have a 3.0 cumulative GPA and a record of school service.

Y Calcares engaged in numerous projects and programs. They were often seen reading to blind students or ushering. Y C's marched in the Homecoming Parade and took part in other annual events such as Women's Week, Cougar Days, the Christmas Drive, and Winter Carnival. In addition members were justly proud of being co-sponsors of Belle of the Y Week. Y Calcares also sponsored socials for their own group, and among these were exchanges with other service units. As usual, the exchanges held with their "brother" unit Intercollegiate Knights were especially successful. In order to provide a complete schedule, Y Calcares rounded out the year with a summer newsletter.

DILEAS CHALEAN

One of the newest groups on campus, Dileas Chalean was organized in 1963. It is unique in being the only women's service unit drawing membership from all four classes. This group has mainly been concerned with campus public relations and works directly with the Public Relations Office. This year members conducted walking tours on campus, as well as bus tours of the campus perimeter, to acquaint visitors with BYU facilities. The group also spent a great deal of time in research on the various university buildings, and this information was published and distributed to all visitors. Other service projects included ushering at football games, selling tickets, assisting at the state mental hospital, and aiding in the Alumni Telefund library book drive.

Dileas Chalean featured many social activities for members. This year's exchanges with Alpha Phi Omega and Intercollegiate Knights, the exchange talent programs, and the guest speakers, such as Brother Workman from Public Relations, gave members opportunities for much valuable experience in social relations. A highlight of the year for members of Dileas Chalean was their end of the year Spring Banquet.

SPURS

Y Spurs is a chapter of a national service organization for sophomore women. Founded at Montana State College in 1922, Spurs was established at BYU in 1956 with the assistance of Y Calcares and the University of Utah Spurs. At present there are Spur units on forty-six campuses in the West.

The Spurs are dedicated to serving both their school and their community, so their motto is "At Your Service." Their official statement of purpose says that Spurs should serve their university and local community, be supporters of Studentbody activities, and try to "... foster among the women students a spirit of loyalty and helpfulness, and to uphold the traditions of the university." The Y Spurs strive hard to achieve these goals every year.

This year the Spurs won a plaque in the Blood Drive for being the highest percent donors of the service groups, and they were also finalists in Skits-O-Frantic. Spurs worked as ushers and were readers for blind students at BYU. They were tutors and special Big Sisters for Indian students. In addition, the Spurs were volunteer workers at Utah State Hospital and American Fork Training School. A highlight of the year was the Spur-Circle K Invitational.

ANGEL FLIGHT

Becoming acquainted with the military service was the primary purpose of Angel Flight. In 1961 this national honorary women's service unit became affiliated with the Arnold Air Society, and was organized to stimulate interest in the Air Force. Members learned more about the defense system of America by visiting Air Force bases, besides going on the annual trip to the Air Force Academy.

As a service unit, the Flight participated in most campus activities such as ushering at devotionals, at games and concerts, and working at the Alumni House. Members of this unit also spent two hours every Tuesday in Leadership Lab drilling with the cadets and promoting the spirit of the corps. In addition, the Flight co-sponsored the semi-annual Red Cross Blood drive, and for enjoyment directed the Easter Egg hunt for the children of BYU faculty and married students. The unique feature of this cosely knit organization was that every member held a position of responsibility ranging from being an editor of a newspaper to service chairman. Two outstanding social events for Angel Flight were the Christmas Ball, and the elegant Military Ball.

THEA ALEXIS

Sylvia Schaelling
President

"A helping hand" was the appropriate motto of Thea Alexis. A unit whose name means "Goddess of Service," Thea Alexis is a service organization for freshman women, serving both school and community. Every week girls volunteered to work in the mental hospital, taught MIA at the American Fork Training school, and actively participated in the Cerebral Palsy Drive. By ushering at assemblies and special programs, Thea Alexis members rendered service to the school. In addition, they made costumes for Program Bureau, worked in art sales, and helped with the Campus Chest Drive.

Noted for its activity and artistic excellence, BYU's Orchesis dance group completed another successful year of performance and activity in 1964-65. Orchesis is one of the college chapters of a national modern dance organization established by Margaret D'Houbler—a famous dance educator at the University of Wisconsin—to give students more opportunities to perfect their dance talents. Although it has no national leadership, independent chapters are found on almost all colleges and once accepted, members can be active in any chapter.

The goal of the BYU group was to not only improve the talents of its members, but also to elevate modern dance as an art form. This goal was realized in many activities and performances. Orchesis presented the Christmas assembly, "Prelude to Nativity," and performed in the musical "Camelot." Orchesis also presented and participated in several fine art symposiums and directed a workshop for dance groups from schools in the intermountain area. The highlight of the year was the annual concert, featuring original work by its members and advisors.

In preparation for the Spring Concert, these dancers strive for perfection of artistry in a number for the program.

A civil engineering student explains the problems of traffic control to visitors of the department's displays during Engineering Week.

Since October 24, 1955, when the BYU Student Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers was founded, it has been functioning by promoting professionalism among civil engineering students, as well as by developing fellowship. This year, the organization's 42 members participated in the "Engineering Week" competition by setting up displays and exhibitions for the benefit of the rest of the studentbody and to stimulate interest in engineering. They also participated again in the "Pacific Southwest Student Paper Competition" and were able to gain practical knowledge and experience by taking field trips to various companies and industries. The members worked on special projects related to their fields to further their experience and to give them a broader background in engineering. Social events for the past year included a "get acquainted" party with dancing and games, a Christmas banquet, and an awards banquet in the spring to give recognition for special achievement in the field of Civil Engineering.

THETA ALPHA PHI

A total of thirty students during 1964-65 made up the BYU chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, a national dramatic society. Membership in the organization was limited to those students who had a strong interest in the theatre and dramatic arts, had demonstrated this interest through participating in numerous acting roles, and had gained technical experience through the production of the plays of other universities that had Theta Alpha Phi chapters. Activities throughout the year included ushering at all of the major dramatic productions, and participation in the Christmas Assembly "Prelude to the Nativity." Members of Theta Alpha Phi attended firesides held each month with guest speakers in the field of drama and related areas. Social activities included an invitation Luau, a spring canyon party, and a dinner dance.

SIGMA ALPHA ETA

Affiliated with the American Speech and Hearing Association, Sigma Alpha Eta is a national professional organization for students interested in speech pathology and audiology. The BYU Gamma chapter was organized on campus in 1957 with Dr. Alonzo J. Morley as advisor.

The 1964-65 organization included 60 individuals divided into the following steps of membership: affiliate, for those who were not majoring or minoring in the field; associate, for those in their first semester of membership with a major in the field; key, for those associates who had great interest in the field and a high scholastic standing; and honorary, conferred only to persons who have made great contributions to the field.

Club activities, designed to provide members with opportunities to learn how to work with people and better understand themselves, included therapy demonstrations, guest speakers, films, and field trips. "Buzz" groups were also organized to foster closer membership-faculty ties. Social activities throughout the year included a canyon party, and a Christmas dinner where gifts were exchanged.

Members of Sigma Alpha Eta had valuable practical experience with preschoolers in articulation therapy work during the year.

DEBATE SQUAD

Junior Varsity debaters Jon Rowberry and Judi Wolff, and Senior Varsity debaters Don Black and Steve Davis, together won three First Place and six Second Place trophies.

The BYU Debate Squad, recognized by the nation's universities as one of the country's top debate schools, continued to spread an academic image of BYU during the 1964-65 season. The squad, composed of over fifty debaters, traveled more than forty-thousand miles and debated in tournaments at schools throughout the U.S.

At the twenty-six tournaments in which BYU debaters participated, 4 first place trophies, 10 second place honors, and numerous awards for participation in elimination rounds were won, including first at the University of Arizona, first at Sacramento State College, second at Iowa State, third at the University of Redlands, and third at Columbia University. In addition, the BYU contingent at the University of Arizona tournament was instrumental in claiming 1965's Arizona Trophy, an award presented to the school consistently outstanding in forensic competition.

Besides participating at various tournaments, BYU hosted the Fall Invitational, a tournament attracting Inter-mountain college debaters, and a Harvard University team which participated with BYU debaters in the student body assembly held on May 6, 1965.

SIGMA DELTA OMICRON

Sigma Delta Omicron, affiliated with the National Organization of American Home Economics Association, is a professional organization open to all students registered in the College of Family Living. With a membership of approximately 400, the organization had a program designed to give informative instructions beyond the classroom to more adequately train its members for the responsibilities in their chosen careers.

For example, the Clothing and Textile members might meet for a lecture on France and the latest French fashions; Food and Nutrition students might take a field trip to the Utah Valley Hospital to study their equipment and feeding routine.

On the second Monday of each month this year, there were events held for each one of the five sections in the college: Clothing and Textiles, Food and Nutrition, Housing and Home Management, Human Development and Family Relationships, and Home-making Education. These activities included the Freshman Reception, the Initiation Banquet, aid for the Sub-for-Santa Drive in December, a Turkey Buffet, a fashion show, and an honors night in the Spring.

"The warrior who cultivates his mind, polishes his arms." Along with cadets throughout the country, BYU cadets accept this statement as a standard governing their pursuit to gain a commission in the U.S. Air Force and take a place in the Air Force complex.

At BYU the AFROTC has taken on a new image under a new name, the Department of Aerospace Studies. The old four year program is being supplemented by a two year program designed to allow more students to get a commission in less time. Also more emphasis is being placed on academics and scientific know-how in an effort to elevate the level of the entire program.

ARNOLD AIR SOCIETY

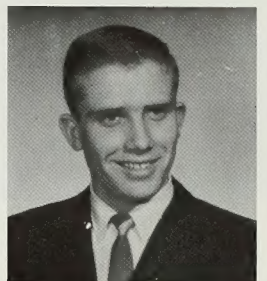

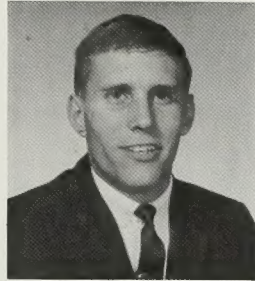

As part of the special activities offered to AFROTC cadets, Arnold Air Society offers junior and senior cadets added opportunities to develop familiarity with the Air Science program of the Air Force. The goal and special emphasis of AAS is to promote better understanding of aviation and the role of space supremacy in the world today.

The society welcomed twenty new pledges this year in two weeks of rush activities, and together, the new and old members have established a bond of fellowship and professionalism as members of the Air Force ROTC program.

Under the command of Cadet Major Lenard Carson, the BYU AFROTC Drill Team with arms stands at attention at the Sunshine City Drill Meet.

The AFROTC groups joined efforts to produce this float which represented them in the Homecoming Parade.

As an integral part of AFROTC life, extra-curricular activities are designed to give the cadet opportunity for greater personal development in many areas. Monthly activities including dancing, swimming, and picnicking, and the annual Military Ball, this year themed "Island In the Sky," enable cadets to develop the social protocol found in the Air Force. Drill team work gives the cadet chances to develop coordination, precision, and discipline. Participation in the annual Red Cross blood drive and homecoming activities gives balance and variety to the cadet's life.

MODERN DANCE CLUB

PHI CHI THETA

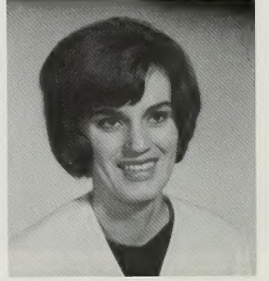

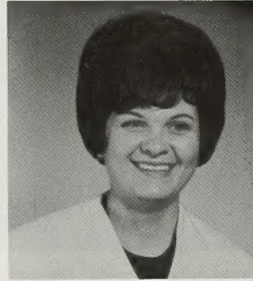

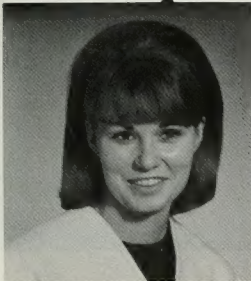

Young women majoring in business find unity through service and social activities in the BYU Psi Chapter of Phi Chi Theta. As a business women's organization for the promotion of higher goals among young college women, Phi Chi Theta was founded nationally in 1924. The unit was first established on the BYU campus in 1938.

A wide variety of activities were included in the 1964-65 year. On one occasion Dr. Weldon J. Taylor, Dean of the College of Business, provided an educational experience for the group by showing slides of his recent trip to Egypt. Service was the focus for the Poinsettia Party given for the residents of the Eldred Hospital for the chronically ill; a dinner-dance at Bridal Veil Falls and a fashion show at Clarks in Provo were social high points. Climaxing the year was the unit's national anniversary in March, celebrated on campus with a Founder's Day Program.

SCOTSMEN

President William McCracken, Second Vice-president Karla Jensen, and First Vice-president Brice Sorenson, are entertained by bagpipe player Vaughn Brockbanks at the annual Burns Supper.

A young group commemorating an old tradition is the Scotsmen. Organized in 1964 it draws its members from returned Scottish missionaries and natives of the Highland-Lowland country. Its purpose, to help continue the brotherhood of the Church and the tradition of the Prophet's land of heritage, was fulfilled by an annual Burns' Supper and Guy Fawkes Night. Headed by President William R. McCracken, first vice-president Brice Sorenson and second vice-president Karla Jensen, the group was in the process of buying a Scottish emblem to present to President McKay. It will be the replica of a plaque that kept him in Scotland on his mission instead of going to England. The discouraged President, as a young missionary, was prompted to look on the wall of a building. There he read, "Whatever ye are, act well thy part."

Patriotic Scotsmen rallied round the club on Robert Burns' birthday to partake of the Haggis, a mixture of sheep lungs, heart, etc. mixed with suet and served in a sheep's stomach. This dish is piped in, then solemnly addressed as the guest of honor with Burns' "Addressing the Haggis."

The Hawaiian Club is a special interest unit organized to promote and maintain the Hawaiian culture here at BYU. The sixty members of the organization either speak or are learning to speak the Hawaiian language, and are also learning about other cultures by attending lectures given by natives of foreign countries.

The Hawaiian Club looks back on a year full of activities including an opening social, the Polynesian Assembly, presentations to the various campus wards and stakes with fire, war, and hula dances, BYU tours to Salt Lake City, participation for the first time in Songfest, this year with "Little Feet, the Sugar and Spice of Life," Winter Carnival Snow sculping, tri-club parties with next year's members, fire-sides with other Polynesian groups, and an Aloha Ball.

The Polynesian Assembly "Vikings of the South Pacific," included the Hawaiian Club among the performing islander groups. Narrated by Lynn McKinley, the program included such special Hawaiian numbers as the Ancient Hawaiian Dance composed by King Kamehameha I, the Hawaiian Maiden Dance, the Hula using Ipi's and Uliulis, and the Green Rose Hula.

As the largest geographical organization on campus the Arizona Club adds a great deal to the social fun and relaxation of students. The group's central activities were regular western dances, but also highlighting fall semester was a Spanish supper. The Western Week studentbody dance was sponsored by the group who also participated in all the week's activities.

The club made valuable service contributions also. They raised funds to purchase three hardwood clocks for the Wilkinson Center and paid for the installation expense for room telephones placed in the McDonald Student Health Center.

JAPANESE CLUB

"A Night in Japan" was the theme of the Japanese Club's Spring Show. Here members of the club rehearse the "Cherry Blossom Dance," from the show.

Students on the BYU campus who were members of the Japanese Club found that one successful project was to take sacrament meeting programs to wards in the area. In this way, the students had an opportunity to speak and perform their talents, and members of the wards were able to become more familiar with the Japanese people and the part they play in the Church. With a membership of approximately one hundred, the club offered a chance for those of similar background to get together and to get to know each other. Its members were those interested in any way in Japan and the Japanese people, whether of American or Japanese ancestry, students from Japan, returned missionaries, or just interested students. They held such activities this year as a canyon party, a New Year's party with Japanese food, a sukiyaki party during semester break, and in the spring they had a conference for Japanese high school students to encourage them to go to college. They also helped in the Sub-for-Santa drive.

The faces of the crowd reflect the excitement of the knife dance being performed by members of Afio Mai during the Polynesian Assembly.

AFIO MAI CLUB

A well-liked and well-established group, the Samoan club was widely known throughout the campus by its official name: Afio Mai, a special Samoan phrase meaning "welcome". The club brought together Samoan students, returned missionaries, and their interested relatives and friends.

Afio Mai's activities were focused on performance; weekly meetings were usually sessions for learning and perfecting Samoan dances and songs. LDS Church groups were their chief audiences and frequent trips were taken to the Salt Lake area for shows at ward banquets and fund-raising projects.

An outstanding event for the club was their participation in the Polynesian Assembly: a program presented in the fieldhouse in connection with the Maori and Hawaiian groups on campus. These three groups also gave another round of their annual series of state-wide performances at high school assemblies. In April the Afio Mai club gave another major show: an annual program presented during the week of April Conference at the Samoan Mission reunion. The year was ended with a party and election of next year's officers.

Making the headlines is usually a happy event in the life of an organization, but to the Norsemen sports club such an event turned out to be a very unhappy one. It was early in the Fall that Norsemen were accused of violating organizational regulations, and suspended from all activity on campus by the IOC. Not until the Spring, when the Supreme Court reversed the decision, was the club permitted to continue with its program.

Although this put a big dent in the program of the club, there was still time for recovery, and activities began again. Norsemen participated in Intramurals, held an exchange with the Cougarettes, a luau, several firesides, and a rabbit hunt.

Organized during the Fall of 1962, the club promotes unity, friendship, and brotherhood through active participation in sports. In 1963 Norsemen won the All-school Intramural trophy given to the organization with the largest number of accumulated points. During the 1964-65 school year, the club was again active in intramural competition, but since it was only for a half year, it could only compete in the Spring.

Emcee Rick Putnam has the attention of all at a Norsemen new member party.

COLLEGIATE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Organized with the specific purpose of assisting the Athletic Department in its proselytizing program, and accepted as a campus organization in December of 1963, the Collegiate Athletic Association worked toward this end during the year by working with the coaches in meeting with high school prospects for scholarships and showing them a good time while trying to interest them in the school. CAA members were also seen in their red blazers at BYU ballgames, keeping the line straight and organized. With the motto, "Omnus Uno"—all for one and one for all—the seventy-five member unit has pride in the strength of its brotherhood. It exists secondarily to provide an outlet for its member's desires for social betterment and fraternity, and accomplished this purpose during the school year of 1964-65 with such functions as their annual Deer Bust, a Christmas Party, a winter formal, and participation in Homecoming. Other events included the Gangster Party, Topper, and their annual Spring dinner-dance.

Warren Yee, Karate Club member, uses a side-kick during Kumite practice.

In 1962 a group of interested students asked Ralph Morris, a native Hawaiian, to teach them Karate. This group soon swelled in size and in the spring of 1964 Karate Club became an official campus organization.

The club is affiliated with, and under the direct supervision of the Southern California Karate Association, which sends instructors periodically to evaluate and instruct the class. This year the club was privileged to receive instruction from Mr. Tsutomu Ohshima, one of Master Funakoshi's pupils, who serves as Chief Instructor.

Shotokan Karate is a Japanese martial art. It was brought to Japan from Okinawa by Master Gichen Funakoshi and has since spread to the U.S. and all parts of the world. It is a practical system of self-defense, utilizing primarily the hands, feet and elbows. Constant practice and hard work are absolute if one is to master the art. The club's ideal is best summed up in a statement made by Funakoshi: "The ultimate aim of Karate lies not in victory or defeat, but in the perfection of the character of the participants."

DELTA PHI KAPPA

Nathan E. Tanner and his wife chat with Delta Phi Kappa members during his visit to BYU as one of the club's six speakers for the Conquest Series.

Accentuating spiritual activity, Delta Phi Kappa provides interested returned missionaries with opportunities to continue missionfield brotherhood. Yearly activities are designed to create and elevate social activity and to give service to school and community. In reaching these goals, members involve themselves in all phases of campus life.

The spiritual side of the group was highlighted by six specially selected speakers during the year. Nathan Eldon Tanner of the First Presidency began the series with a talk on "Recognition and Development of Individual Potential." In addition Delta Phi presented campus ward sacrament meetings, where they took charge of everything from passing the sacrament to speaking.

The lighter side of the club's activity included their annual "Dream Girl" Formal at the Alpine Country Club and an exchange with the Cougarettes. With their theme of "Tortesi and the Hare," they won in the comic division of the Winter Carnival snow sculpturing contest. Along with Delian Vesta, they took the Homecoming Parade Sweepstakes award for their float that was called "The Destined Duckling."

SPECIAL INTEREST

The well-worn symbol of the Republican Party, the elephant, is the center of attention as the Young Republican Club float passes during Homecoming.

Affiliated with both the State and the National Young Republicans Federation, the BYU Young Republicans Club serves to educate the studentbody to the responsibilities and opportunities available in being politically active and aware. The basic Republican party philosophy was reflected this year in speeches sponsored by the club by Mitch Melyich, Utah Republican candidate for Governor; Kent Shearer, State Young Republican Chairman; and Mike Goldwater, son of Republican Presidential candidate Barry Goldwater. Members also traveled to Salt Lake City to meet and listen to Mr. Goldwater while he visited there.

YOUNG REPUBLICANS

The sign on the Young Republican booth set up during President election week serves to remind Republicans to take an active interest in their party.

Students, parents, and visitors give Presidential candidate Barry Goldwater's son Mike rapt attention as he speaks in the Wilkinson Center on a tour of college campuses.

Amid cheers and boos from placard-waving students, Mike Goldwater, son of Presidential candidate Barry Goldwater, summarizes his father's qualifications for the office of President.

SHOMRAH KIYEL

Girls who were engaged to, or seriously waiting for their sweethearts who are serving full-time missions for the Church, found a way to fill the gap through the activities of Shomrah Kiyel, a special interest organization, started in April of 1955 for the purpose of providing spiritual, social, and cultural growth. This year the thirty-five members were kept busy with such events as an annual Sweetheart's Banquet at a local restaurant where President Frank Brown and his wife, from the Mission Home in Salt Lake, spoke, and an all-night slumber party on the night of the Junior Prom. There was a Thanksgiving Banquet, a Christmas Party, where the girls opened the gifts they received from missionaries in various countries; and a weekend at the Homestead in Heber Canyon in the Spring to honor new and old officers and to horseback ride, swim, and have campfire activities. Each semester a pledge night was held to give new girls the opportunity to join. Highlights of nearly all meetings were testimonies and displays of the mission activities of each girl's missionary.

Sponsor Mrs. Martin L. Miller and her husband enjoy the Thanksgiving Banquet with Shomra Kiyel members.

Alpine Club President Allen Sampson demonstrates technical procedure as he practices rock climbing in Rock Canyon.

The Alpine Club, as the name implies, is a club interested in outdoor activities in mountain settings. One of the things for which it is better known is the rescue operations it assists in, especially on the annual July Timpanogos Hike. Often the members lent assistance to the County Sheriff's office in getting aid to those in trouble in the mountains. They were also sponsors of the rock-climbing school, where static belaying, rope preparation and special techniques were taught to insure safety in mountain-climbing and mountain sports before the students accepted the challenge of the mountains themselves. This winter, skiing, skating, and tubing, plus a barbecue party, were part of their activities, and in the Winter Carnival they were able to capture the "Women's Broken Ski" title and the "Snowbell" award.

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

Alpha Lambda Delta is a national honorary organization for Sophomore women who have accumulated a 3.5 grade point average during their previous semester at the "Y". Initiated in the spring of the Frosh year or in the fall of their Sophomore year, the girls retain membership throughout their college experience but are active during their Sophomore year only. Graduating members who have a grade point average of 3.5 or above receive special recognition through the national Alpha Lambda Delta organization.

Activities this year began with a brunch in September for the sixty-five members. Monthly meetings featured such speakers as Robert Thomas, head of the Honors Program who spoke on the Seven Deadly Virtures; Fred Markham, the architect of the Wilkinson Center who discussed the problems and plans of the new building; and Richard Cowan, instructor of religion who delivered a special Christmas message. Alpha Lambda Delta also had a square dance in conjunction with Phi Eta Sigma, a national scholastic honorary for men. Service, learning, and fun made up Alpha Lambda Delta's formula for success during the 1965-65 school year.

YOUNG MEN

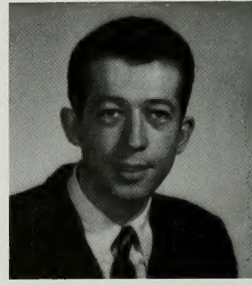

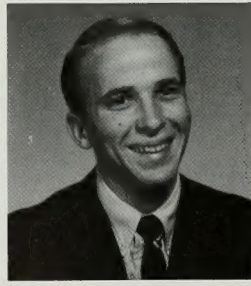

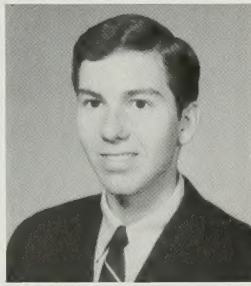

Formed during the fall semester of 1963, the Young Men was founded by the pep committee under the office of Student Relations to engender pep, loyalty, and "esprit de corps" among all those associated with BYU and its athletic teams, and to encourage students to closely identify themselves with BYU. Readily spotted at games by their navy blazers and their plunger-carrying pep leader, the group's forty-five members banded together to offer strength to the teams and to generate enthusiasm among the spectators. Projects throughout the year included patrolling the lines at basketball games to allow for fairness and speed for waiting fans, co-ordinating the annual Cougar Days Celebration held this year in the Wilkinson Center parking lot, painting welcome signs for visiting teams, and participating in the basketball pre-game activities. The Young Men also participated in the men's basketball intramurals, assisted with the production of the giant telegram for the UCLA-BYU NCAA game, and rode an old model T in the Cougar Homecoming Parade.

SAMUEL HALL SOCIETY

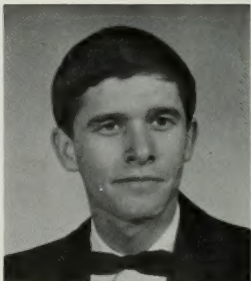

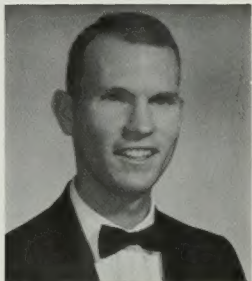

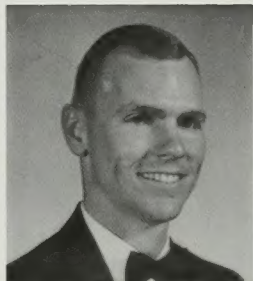

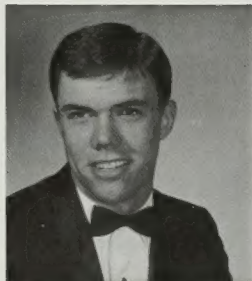

As one of the younger student units at BYU, the Samuel Hall Society noted its third anniversary this past year. Founded in 1962, its goal has been the promotion of cultural and intellectual growth among male students by way of varied experiences. All group activities are directed to this end.

The Samuel Hall Society had two types of regular meetings during the year. The dual business and cultural meetings, held weekly, featured lectures by unit members, friends, and faculty guests, including Dr. Edwin B. Morrell, Dr. Sterling D. Sessions, and Dr. Wilford S. Smith. The other meetings held were bi-weekly firesides, with dates, which aided in spiritual development.

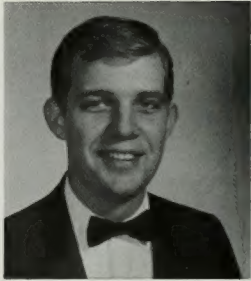

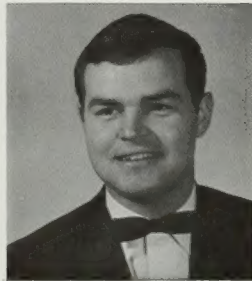

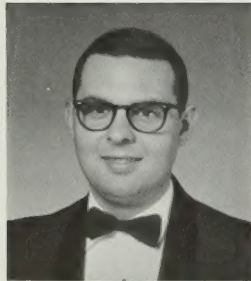

Group social gatherings made the other side of the Samuel Hall Society's schedule, and the chief event was the New England style clam bake held beside Utah Lake. The menu featured lobster with Boston baked beans, rye bread, and dessert; all of the food was flown in from Boston. Other occasions included in the year were informal after-game parties, a "brotherhood" weekend of skiing at Solitude, and a Winter Formal in the Skyroom. The Spring Formal closed the year, and that same evening the new officers for 1965-66 were announced.

CHI TRIELLAS

Members of this women's cultural unit sought to enrich their lives by gaining knowledge and appreciation of the fine arts, and strived to provide similar opportunities for those around them.

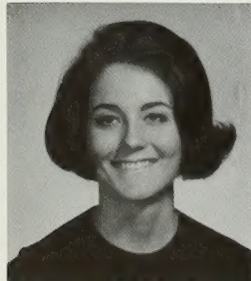

The unit's calendar of events included cultural talks presented by members who had traveled or studied abroad. Countries covered in the talks were: Spain, Russia, Germany, France, and India. Guest speakers were also featured during the regular meetings. Included among these were Sister Lynn Warner of the MIA General Board, Brother Cowan of the Religion Department, and Dr. Bradford of the Sociology Department. The unit was also very active in studentbody activities. Chi Triellas presented the Fashion Show during the Grand opening of the Y Center, they participated in Winter Carnival, Song-fest, Skits-O-Frantic, and published a booklet on concert manners for studentbody use. Within the unit, highlights of the year were the Homecoming open house, formal dances, cultural exchanges, and after-theatre parties.

DELIAN VESTA

Delian Vesta is a new group at BYU. Organized last Spring Semester by Connie Lewis, it was officially accepted Fall Semester of this year. Delian Vesta marked the first semester of its history at BYU by capturing the Sweepstakes award for its float in the 1964 Homecoming Parade.

The unit was created to provide an opportunity for coeds to learn about world cultures. The group held regular cultural evenings with special speakers. Each evening featured a different country and culture. Besides dealing with distinctive customs and manners of living, members of Delian Vesta sampled typical foods from each area as it was presented at meetings.

Delian Vesta also had a calendar of events that were designated to become annual affairs. The first of these was a Christmas party, held this year at Wildwood in Provo Canyon. Following this was a Valentine party and a Spring Formal. In addition, each semester included several firesides and parties which Delian Vesta had as exchanges with other campus units.

VAKHNOM

"Seek Beauty in All Things," was the motto of the Vakhnom culture unit, formed in March 1964 to fill a need for an organization which would promote culture and friendship among girls with similar interests. Composed of thirty members originally, Vakhnom added thirty-two more during the Spring of 1965. This year, the girls in the organization endeavored to stimulate interest in cultural activities by holding and attending regular culture events each month. Frequent firesides were held and attendance at devotional and forums was encouraged. After short evening business meetings, lyceums were attended and discussed. Vakhnoms participated in such campus events as Cougar Days, Homecoming, and Songfest. Other activities included weekly meetings, after-game parties, and a Christmas dance at Solitude Lodge "Mistletoe and Moonbeams." The highlight of the year was the Spring Invitational, an April dinner-dance held at the Cottonwood Country Club in Salt Lake City. Speakers throughout the year were Dr. Daniels, President Rogers of the East Provo Stake, and Brother Cheney of the English Department. Special rush activities included a "Little Kids" party, at talent show by the members, and a fireside with Sister Schwendiman.

COUGARETTES

The Cougarettes, long since indispensable to BYU, continued brightening their distinguished name this year. In addition to their regular appearances at football and basketball games, these forty girls had two especially notable items on their calendar: first, during the semester break the Cougarettes accompanied the basketball team to the University of Denver and the Air Force Academy, giving half-time performances at the games; second, the Cougarettes presented one of their fine precision marching routines at concluding game of the NCAA Regional Finals, which was nationally televised from the school.

The Cougarettes incorporated a great variety of other activities into their school year. They held workshops and conferences for high school pep clubs, which this year also involved training 1300 girls for a performance at the Invitational Track and Field Meet held in April. Cougarettes additionally sponsored pep rallies and a student assembly, took part in Skits-O-Frantic, and aided in Belle of the Y Week. Exchange parties and a Spring Formal dinner-dance were among the group socials. Originally created to promote enthusiasm for athletics, Cougarettes extended their spirit to all BYU.

BLUE KEY

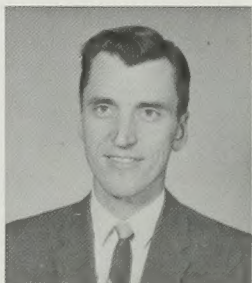

"A desire that student problems may be studied, and the best interests of the University may be stimulated and promoted" is the goal of Blue Key National Honor Fraternity. Members drawn from all classes must have a cumulative grade point of 3.2 since academic performance is a good indication of ambition, initiative and ability.

Each year this unit meets and plans several valuable service projects for the school. Placing a large geo-physical globe, costing 10,000 dollars, in the student library was the most important project this year. Biographical plaques have been placed in all buildings to promote an awareness of the great contributions made by the men for whom the buildings were named. In addition, this unit handles all the ticket distribution for football and basketball games. A future project in the planning stage is a memorial room in the student center in honor of alumni killed in the world wars.

A highlight of the year was the Annual Spring Honors Banquet, at which Harvey Fletcher and LaVar Rockwood were made honorary Blue Key members.

Archon participated in the AMS-AWS Christmas Drive, the University Tutoring Service, Songfest, and ushered at university functions. The Spring Book Drive provided books for the State Mental Hospital Library. In addition, an Archon Honor Fraternity Collection was founded in the university library. Highlight of the year was the first annual Honors Banquet which was climaxed by the presentation of the first Honorary Membership to an outstanding community leader.

SPORTSMEN

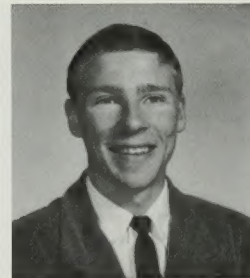

"Clinics" were an appropriate activity of the 33 sportsminded young men who comprised this year's Sportsmen Club. Clinics are not instruction in splinting and bandaging, but instruction in such varied sports as skiing, volleyball, bowling, basketball and football. When established in 1959 it was limited to 25 BYU men who would rather grub around than socialize but has since grown to its present size. Annual events are the rabbit hunt (hunters bag as many sore dogs as rabbits, they say); the Sports Feast, where dinner is the game meats brought down by Sportsmen—they say it's delicious, and still have enough pep left over to dance; a luau in spring involves the group in "eating, play, eating, games and eating." The group led by President Lloyd Nielson, vice-president Fred Wall; secretary Bob Hintile and treasurer Bob Godfrey also sponsors the Sportsmen Cup ski race in winter. The club is characterized by an intense feeling of brotherhood and a willingness to go almost anywhere and do almost anything. You'll seldom find them in coats and ties at parties, and they seldom stay still for very long—there's too much going on, they say.

A request by a Church group for folk dances to be presented at a Scandinavian dinner prompted the organization of the present BYU International Folk Dancers. From this first nucleus of fourteen couples the group has grown to a membership of 186 dancers. Each year they fulfill 90 performance obligations and in doing so appear before a total audience of over 150,000.

Besides providing an educational experience for students interested in folk dancing and developing dance skills, the group serves as a public relations unit of the university, a good will ambassador to other countries, and as a missionary tool for the Church.

This year the Folk Dancers continued a tradition of immense activity with tours to the Northwest and to California, where they performed for half an hour at Disneyland. When they were not traveling, they performed for all the major activities of the school including the opening of then new stadium, the homecoming game half-time, and the dedication of the Wilkinson Center. In addition they presented a Christmas program where they took their audience on a tour of Europe.

Their greatest attribute is that they are happy. Wherever and whenever they perform their enthusiasm and zesty spirit charms all who watch them.

BYU's Ballroom Dancers, under the direction of Ben De Hoyos, took another giant step toward their goal of popularizing ballroom dancing through performance.

On campus, the group—the only one of its kind in the nation—was seen in whirling action at basketball half-time shows, at the Fieldhouse Frolics, assemblies, and put its best performance of the year in its own annual concert.

Like most professional dancing teams, the BYU Ballroom Dancers follow two styles of dance: the internationalist, and the exhibition styles. The internationalist style conforms to features which are performed exactly the same way all over the world. Exhibition style allows more liberty such as formations with steps to Latin-American, American, and other rhythms.

The group was also very popular off campus. It traveled through the Northwestern states on tour with the Program Bureau, it performed in Salt Lake City for the General Authorities of the Church, and presented several shows for local community groups.

Ben de Hoyos leads the Ballroom Dance team in a Paso Doble during the BYU-Wyoming basketball game half-time show.

Weary but happy after tubing at Timp Haven, Interhall Council members and their dates meet at the lodge to eat a steak dinner.

Inter-Hall Council is an organization composed of women's board and room housing representatives from both Helaman Halls and Deseret Dorms. The purposes of the organization were to provide unity among the halls; to allow for an interchange of ideas and enthusiasm; to provide a disseminating body for all news pertinent to the residents of board and room halls; to guide and advise individual halls in their social, cultural and spiritual activities; and to carry suggestion from residents to the housing administration.

Some of the Inter-Hall Council events held during the year were: the establishment of a housing government in Deseret Dorms at the beginning of the year, participation in the annual Housing Conference and the all-housing resident halls scholarship banquet, representation of BYU by the housing president and vice-president at the regional and national residential hall conferences, and the provision of leadership training on a council level in order to help the dorm officers to be more effective in their officiating capacities. Social activities throughout the year included a dinner and tubing party at Timp Haven, and a Christmas Party.

FINE ARTS CENTER

LYCEUMS

Climaxing the 1964-65 BYU-Community Concert Lyceum series of outstanding concerts was the May 3 appearance of the world-famous Chicago Symphony Orchestra (above) under the direction of Jean Martinon. Jaime Laredo (below), young Bolivian virtuoso, opened the Lyceum series October 12 in the Smith Fieldhouse. Mr. Laredo is the youngest artist ever to win the coveted Brussels competition.

Shirley Verrett, (below) young mezzo-soprano, appeared in concert on the Lyceum series November 16.

Distinguished European guitar duo of Ida Presti and Alexandre Lagoya (above) appeared in concert March 25. The duo is one of the most highly-rated husband and wife teams in classical music today. The Bach Aria Group (below), comprised of soprano Eileen Farrell, tenor Jan Peerce, alto Carol Smith, baritone Norman Farrow, flutist Julius Baker, oboist Robert Bloom, cellist Bernard Greenhouse, violinist Oscar Shumsky, and pianist Paul Ulanowsky, performed on the Lyceum series March 1.

EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

Frederick Schiller's, Mary Stuart, a dramatic story of the famous conflict between Mary, Queen of Scots and Queen Elizabeth of England, unfolded upon the stage of the new experimental theatre for its grand opening February 10-11. Directed by Morris Clinger, the production starred Sondra Read as Mary Stuart and Jean Jenkins as Queen Elizabeth. Other cast members included Maxilyn Capell, Tom Jenness, Neil Clements, Merrill Frost, John Adams, Ken Young, Neldon Maxfield, Neil Davis, Richard Payne, Brent Pickering, Tom Powell, and Dick Smith.

At a confession before Lord Burleigh (Merrill Frost) and Sir Anias Paulet (Tom Jenness) Queen Mary (Sondra Read) say "I am willing to give up my throne if it means saving the life of my friends."

"But my dear Queen, you have such grace and power, you must remain Queen of England," says the Earl of Leicester (Ken Young) to Queen Elizabeth (Jean Jenkins) in an effort to flatter her and win her hand.

Lord Burleigh (Merrill Frost) steps out of his serious role and seems to say "I am less of a devil now."

READERS' THEATER

The cast in performance of "Five Finger Exercise."

February 11, 12, and 15 were the days the Reader's Theatre presented in interpretive drama, Five Finger Exercise. Written by Peter Shaffer, the play was a modern English drama of unusual psychological impact. The cast, directed by Dr. Preston R. Gledhill, included Dean Bitter, Stanley Porter, Mae Flegg, David Call and Vicki Wentz.

ARNOTT'S MARIONETTES

Professor Peter Arnott's marionette Phaedra from the French classic of the same name.

Peter Arnott's Classic Marionettes performed on the BYU campus March 12-13. Professor Arnott, an author, artist, and lecturer, presented his marionette actors in Sophocles' Oedipus the King and Marlow's Dr. Faustus. Designed to create various types of formal drama, the Marionette Theatre has operated in the United States and Canada since 1958.

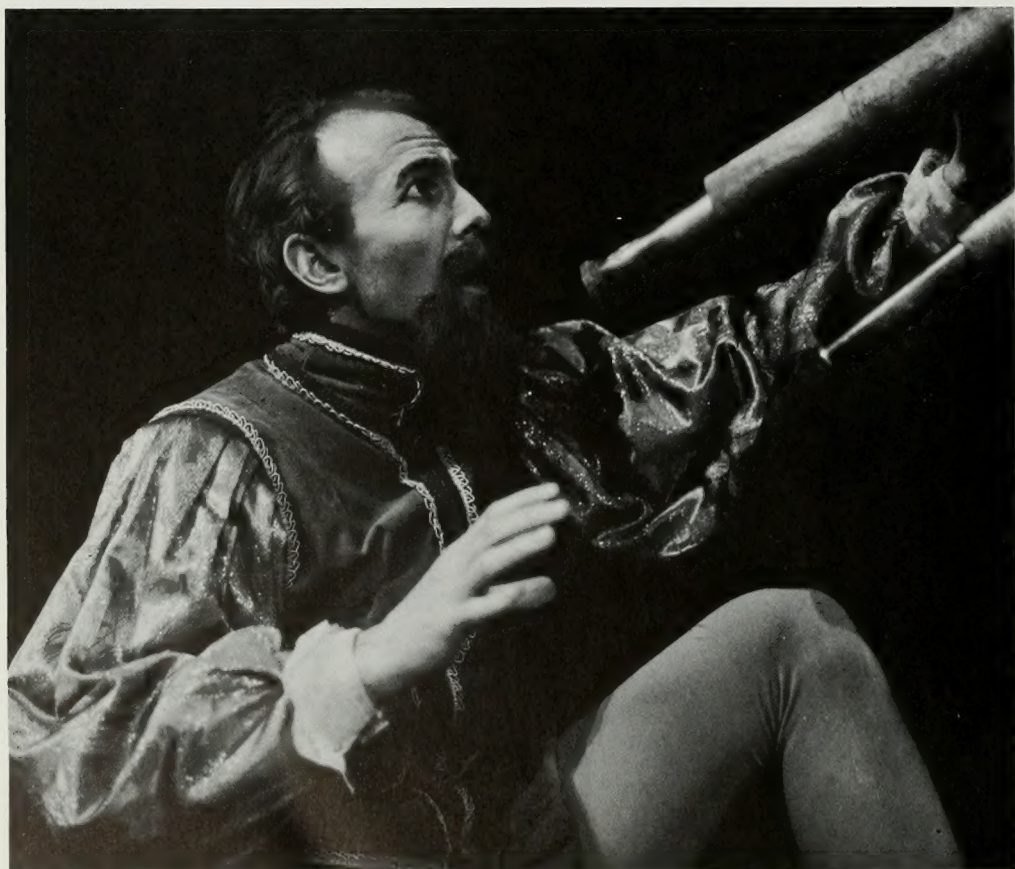

Galileo (Ivan Crosland) at the inquisition to determine if he is guilty of breaking a promise not to teach Copernican doctrine.

The world is seen by Galileo for the first time as he looks through his telescope.

LAMP AT MIDNIGHT

Dramatizing Galileo's struggles, Barrie Stavis's Lamp at Midnight was the first play to be presented in the new Drama Theatre in the Harris Fine Arts Center. Dr. Harold I. Hansen, Chairman of the Dramatic Arts Department, directed the cast of nearly fifty actors and sixty-five students. Mr. Stavis, the author, visited the campus for three days to assist in the production and to be a guest lecturer.

The sets for the play were non-representational and lent themselves to timeless, universal themes. There was a series of ramps and steps which emphasized the actor rather than the setting. The set was un-enclosed and featured warm earth colors on the steps and ramps. Lights were used to set the mood and to focus attention on the characters and action.

All costumes for the production were adaptations of authentic 17 Century clothing. The church vestiments worn by the play's monks were very close to the originals.

Leading roles in the play were convincingly portrayed by Ivan Crosland as Galileo; Michele Mitchell, Galileo's daughter; Neal Barth, Sagredo; Jack Sederholm, Prince Cesi; Charles Metten, Pope Urban VIII; and Dean Davis as Cardinal Robert Bellarmin.

Galileo shows his telescope to the academy.

Galileo returns to his daughter after his trial by the inquisitors.

SKIN OF OUR TEETH

The refugees from the town come seeking shelter at Mr. Antrobus' home from fear of destruction by the ice that is engulfing the city during the ice age and from the lack of fuel available to keep them warm.

Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, The Skin of Our Teeth, was presented at BYU in the Drama Theatre with showings from February 22 to February 27. Classified as a "cockeyed fantasy" by director Charles Metten, the play was a comic presentation of the average American at grips with his destiny.

The comedy revealed the story of the Antrobus family, representing mankind, and took the audience on a time trip that showed how man has repeatedly escaped from threatening destruction by "the skin of his teeth."

Major roles were portrayed by Carol Lynn Wright, Dan Staples, Michele Priebe, Glen Varney, Stefenee Nielsen, and Eleanor Brough. By using a circus type staging, the players were allowed to step out of their roles and speak directly to the audience, even to complain about the lines assigned to them.

"I accept the nomination" replies Mr. Antrobus (Dan Staples) at the presidential convention in Atlantic City as Mrs. Antrobus (Carol Lynn Wright) beams.

Col. Purdy (Bill Layne) calls Capt. Fisby (Gerald Pearson) for a progress report at a critical moment.

The Drama Department presented Teahouse of the August Moon in the Drama Theatre March 24 to March 31 under the direction of Albert O. Mitchell. Written by John Patrick, the play was an enchanting satire on the East meeting the West, according to Harold I. Hansen, Chairman of the Dramatic Arts Department. The plot pursued the career of an Army of Occupation officer stationed in a remote village in Okinawa. It was his duty to teach democracy to the natives, but within a few days Captain Fisby found himself the owner of a "Grade A" Geisha girl, Lotus Blossom.

Michiko Whipple (Lotus Blossom), a native of Japan, was selected for her part in the production because of her unusual training as a Geisha, as well as for her talent in drama. Other major characters were Kent E. Nelson (Sakini), Bill Layne (Col. Purdy), Gerald Pearson (Captain Fisby), Annette Maeda (Miss Higa Jiga), and Fred Stout (Captain McLean). The play included a total of fifty characters, and all of their costumes were authentic.

TEAHOUSE OF THE AUGUST MOON

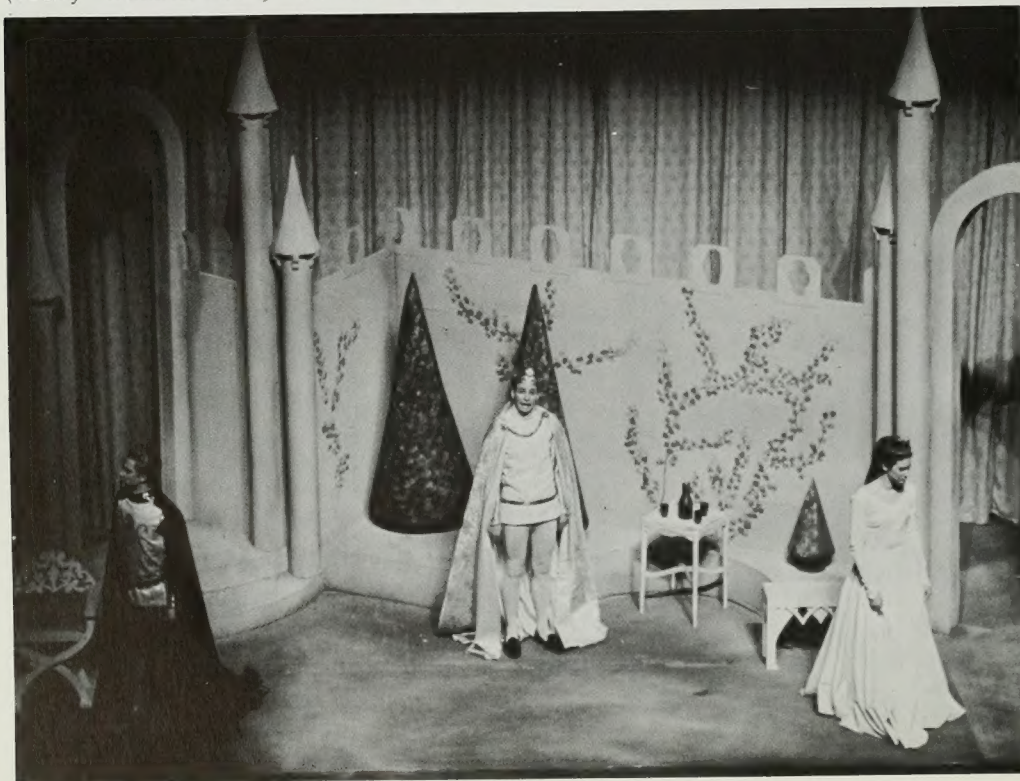

The ladies' League for Democratic Action demand, through interpreter Sakini (Kent E. Nelson) that Capt. Fisby arrange for them to receive training in the Geisha art.

Arthur receives Lancelot after his victory in the tournament.

Arthur (Duane Huff) discovers that Lancelot (Alan Ord) and Guenevere (Holly Gudmundson) are in love.

CAMELOT

The romantic adventures and wondrous delights of medieval England's King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table were told as Brigham Young University staged the famous Broadway musical Camelot by Lerner and Loewe. Under the direction of Dr. Harold I. Hansen, the play was presented March 3-6 and 8 in the Concert Hall of the Fine Arts Center. Central figure in the musical was King Arthur (Duane Huff), the son of a duchess, raised as an orphan ignorant of his royal birth, and educated by the wizard Merlyn (Charles Curtis.) Arthur made good his inheritance to knightship when he drew the sword Excalibur from the stone and became a wise ruler with dreams of creating a utopia in Camelot. Arthur's dream was shattered with the tragic overthrow of his kingdom due to the misconduct of his wife Guenevere (Holly Gudmundson) and Lancelot (Alan Ord), and by Arthur's unworthy son Mordred (Kay Smith).

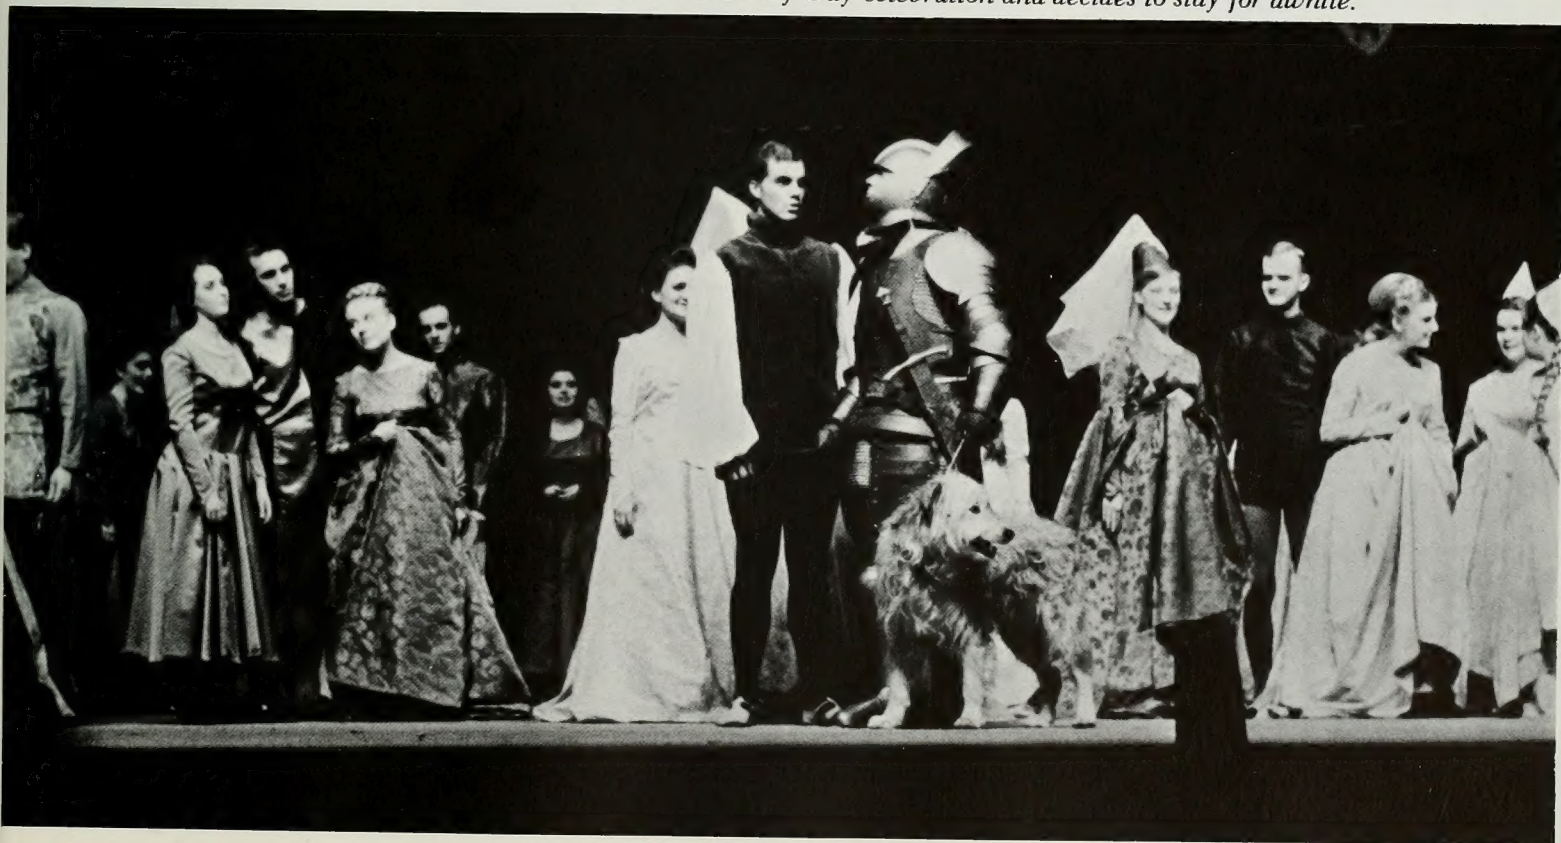

Others in the cast were Neal Barth, Jed Nolan, Charles Soelberg, Gary Allen, Blaine Lee, Gordon L. Ridd, Patsy Christian, Stan Christensen, Dean Mitchell, Rod Anderson, Dean A. Davis, Randall Lund, Frances Anne Smeath, Sheryl Jamison, Charles Brown, David Henson and more than 50 singers and dancers who composed the lords, ladies and knights of the Court of Camelot.

Choral director was Brandt Curtis with Richard Ballou as conductor of the orchestra. Nine sets for the musical were designed by Charles Henson. The technical director was Robert Struthers and Linda Hatch supervised the choreography.

The tumblers provide entertainment for the Court at the celebration before the tournament.

In his search for the Questing Beast, Pellinore (Neal Barth) stumbles upon Camelot's May Day celebration and decides to stay for awhile.

MIRACLE WORKER

Annie Sullivan (Joyce Tolman) struggles with the child Helen Keller (Ann Bramall) to teach her a much needed lesson in manners and discipline that her parents have failed to teach her because they feel sorry for her.

One of the most magnificent people to come out of our time was Helen Keller, who overcame the inhibiting forces of blindness and deafness to become an influential personality of humanity. William Gibson captured the early part of Helen's dramatic struggle in The Miracle Worker. Annie Sullivan, played by Joyce Tolman, was the instrumental person who brought light into Helen's world of darkness and silence. Her desperate battle was vividly portrayed in the play, leaving one questioning who really was the heroine of the story, Helen, played by Ann Bramall, or her teacher, Miss Sullivan.

The Miracle Worker, under the direction of Preston Gledhill, brought Brigham Young University's theatre season to a climatic close May 12 to May 16.

Helen discovers for the first time that her doll has eyes just like her own.

The Mädchen Kammerchor and Gemischter Kammerchor were formed in September of 1964 for the purpose of acquainting the American public with German vocal music and to serve as ward choirs for those participating in the Semester in Salsburg program. Concerts were given by the choirs throughout Europe in an effort to familiarize the people with American folksongs as well as singing the native songs of the country. Before leaving for Salsburg, the groups performed at various functions in the Provo area.

OPERA WORKSHOP

Brandt Curtis, Director

Opera, a kind of highbrow variety show, is a sign of a community's cultural maturity because of the complexity of its production. This cultural status was brought to the BYU campus by the Opera Workshop which was designed to give students a greater appreciation and experience in the field of opera.

Under the direction of Brandt Curtis, the Workshop produced four operas this year. Of the four, Tosca was the major production which combined student and faculty efforts. Other presentations of the season were Ameila Goes to the Ball and A Game of Chance, two one act operas, and The Bartered Bride which ended the season.

The move to the Harris Fine Arts Center expanded the potential for better productions because of the new facilities which were specifically planned for the opera such as a large stage, dressing rooms, and an orchestra pit that can be raised or lowered to the desired height.

Cavardossi (Gary Fisher) and Tosca (Ariel Bybee) meet in the chapel.

Acclaimed as one of Puccini's greatest operas, Tosca, Sardou's tragedy of passion and revenge, was presented by the BYU Opera Workshop from February 8 through February 13.

A favorite among opera lovers, the opera featured two separate casts, each performing two nights. On Monday and Friday nights the faculty cast included Margaret Woodward starring as Tosca, Brandt Curtis as Cavardossi, Maughan McMurdie as Scarpia, Ralph Woodward as Sacristan, and two students - Allan Ord as Angelotti and Daniel Knudson in the role of Spoletta.

Thursday and Saturday nights featured an all-student cast with senior Ariel Bybee as Tosca, Gary Fisher as Cavardossi, Noel Twitchell as Scarpia, Gordon Mills as Sacristan, Duane Huff as Angelotti, and Charles Shipp in the role of Spoletta.

The BYU Symphony Orchestra, which played for all performances, was conducted by Lawrence Sardoni, and both casts were directed by Brandt Curtis.

Cavardossi (Brandt Curtis) is taken to the torture chamber.

The 74-voice Women's Chorus, jokingly called the "pink ladies" because of their full length pink dresses, made appearances at two General Conferences, firesides, concerts and devotional assemblies. The chorus, under the direction of Maughan McMurdie, performed a wide variety of musical selections ranging from Negro Spirituals to works of the masters. Accompanists for the group were Mary Beth Reynolds and Ema Jo Bascom.

MEN'S CHORUS

Composed of enthusiastic and dedicated men interested in fine musical literature, the Men's Chorus is one of the chief agencies for developing school spirit among music lovers. Included in the repertoire of the talented group were the masterworks of this voice medium from the past 500 years, sung in the languages for which they were written.

The first of many varied performances for the approximately 50 members was with the Cougar Marching Band at the dedication of the new football stadium. Where they presented the "Western Athletic Conference March," composed by Professor Ralph Laycock, director. The highlight of the year was the joint concert in March with the 20-voice Male Glee Club from the University of Denver.

WHEN THE SAINTS GO

During the trip to El Paso, Texas, band members visited Juarez, Mexico. Here Professor Ballou attired in "typical" Mexican outfit poses for the students' cameras to the amusement of his group.

Sophomore Ron Marriot, who has held the Baton Twirling National Championship the last five years awaits for a clue from the director to lead the band.

Professor Richard E. Ballou conducts the band during the Homecoming half-time show. This was his eleventh year as director of the 108-member band.

The precise marching movements of the Cougar Band are illustrated in this photograph. Members came from every state in the Union, and represented all classes, from freshmen to graduates.

MARCHING

Rated among the top bands of the nation, the Cougar Marching Band, under the direction of Professor Richard Ballou performed before an estimated 130,000 fans during the 1964 season.

Band members demonstrated their ability to play quality music while executing precision maneuvers, in their impressive performance at the inauguration of the new football stadium. Along with high school bands representing all parts of Utah, the Cougar Marching Band saluted President David O. McKay and premiered Professor Ralph Laycock's "Western Athletic Conference March."

The band's colorful performances were not confined to BYU audiences. The weekend of October 24 saw the Cougar marchers travel to El Paso, Texas, where they participated in Texas Western's annual Band Day. Two weeks latter the band presented a half-time show for the fans attending the BYU-University of Utah football game in Salt Lake City.

The final performance of the season will not be easily forgotten by the members of the band; they presented the half-time show for the BYU-Western Michigan football game in the middle of a snowstorm.

The identity of Cosmo the Cougar has just been revealed to the studentbody as Kent Stevens, a BYU math teacher during the week.

During the year a bigger emphasis in pep activities was promoted by members of the Pep Committee, Songleaders, Flag-Twirlers, Clearleaders, and Cosmo the Cougar. Starting with a big new bang this year was the Card Stunt section headed by Seila Hatch and George Cobabe. Cards of blue and white, red, and gold metallic were used in clever designs of the United States, Cougars, and the name of Judy Green, Homecoming Queen. To add more enthusiasm for the Homecoming games, Cosmo parachuted from an airplane onto the football field. In order to create spirit for all athletic events, the publicity included banners, inter-hall contests, and bonfire rallies. Later in the year new traditions were established in the basketball games. A permanent welcome sign rallied in the opponents with their school name below it.

For many of the home basketball games, a closed-circuit TV was hooked up for those students who were unable to obtain seats in the fieldhouse. These viewing centers were in the Wilkinson Center and the Joseph Smith auditorium. Perhaps Sports Illustrated's comment sums up the new pep activities: whether the teams won or lost, the fans were at least entertained by the half-time and pep activities.

THE COUGARS PLAY THE ROLE OF THE SPOILER

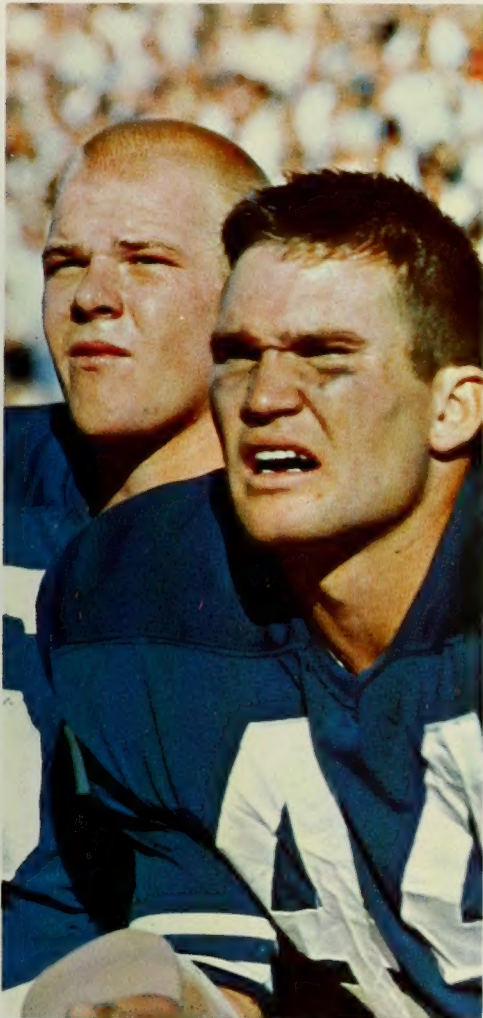

Coach Hudspeth learns opponent's weaknesses from Press Box "spotter" before planning offensive strategy with quarterback Virgil Carter.

Once again BYU's football team ended at the bottom of the list in the records of the Western Athletic Conference. This did not come as a surprise to anybody, Cougar fans knew from the beginning that their team, at best, would have to be content with the role of the spoiler. At the season's opening the polls named the Cougars equal in power to only one of their opponents for the season (Colorado State), and picked them to win only one game (Western Michigan).

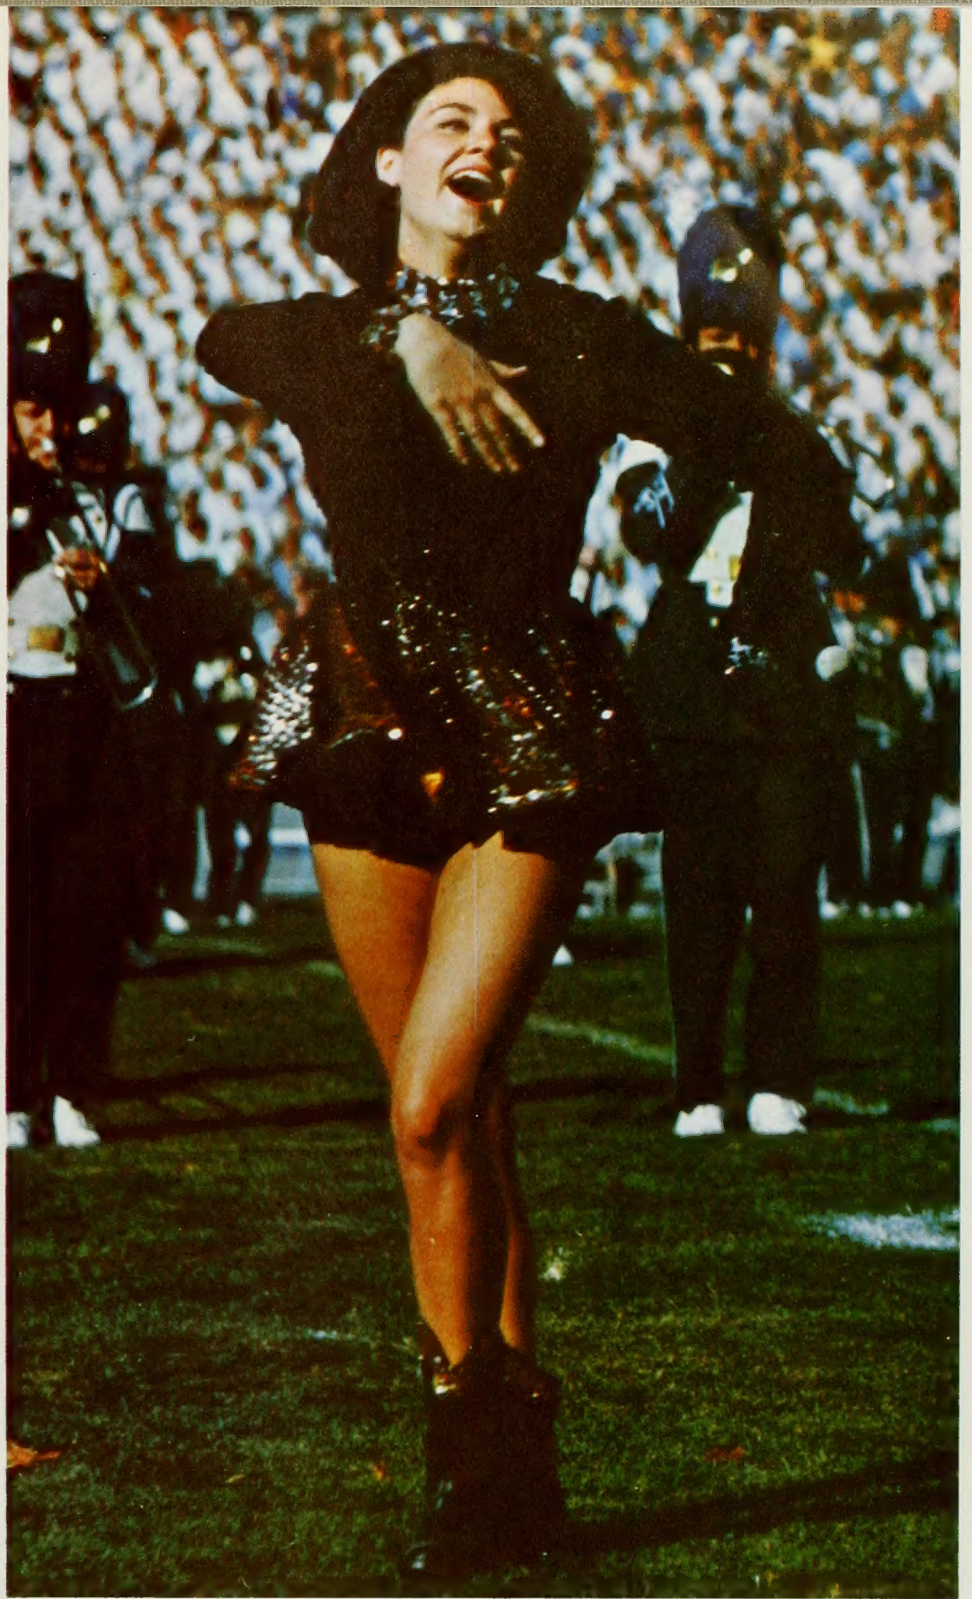

These meager predictions were not without backing. Indeed, a single win during the season would have been enough of a feat for a team suffering such ailments as a change of coaches, reorganization, inexperience, and lack in numbers. The Cougars, however, managed to do much more than was expected of them, and even if they had lost every game, except for their dramatic win over Utah State, the season would still be considered a success.

Sue Davis, Cougar Marching Band's Solo Majorette was one of the many pretty girls in the football spectacle.

The "Y" block, formed by members of the new card section, was only one of their many stunts that added color to games.

The snow was falling, the cold wind was blowing, but loyal Cougar fans came to see their team become warm with a victory over Western Michigan.

Beginning of the New Look

The very-good-considering season marked the beginning of The New Look, an unwritten program designed to make BYU a football power in future years. Two important elements of the program were introduced this year.

The first was new Head Coach Tom Hudspeth, an aggressive but personable young man who comes to BYU from his hometown of Cherrydale, Kansas, via Oklahoma and the Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian pro circuit. Coach Hudspeth has assumed an enormous task, but he seems to know what he wants to do and how to do it. His official comment on the job—"I'm here to stay," reveals his positive outlook for it is no secret that he is the third head coach the Cougars have had in the last five years.

The second was the new stadium, a modern 26,812-seat structure with expansion provision to about 45,000 seats. The Cougars' new home should do much to promote interest in football and other outdoor sports in the area. As an indication, attendance records were broken from the beginning when 33,610 fans (the largest sporting audience in Utah history) managed to crowd into the new stadium to watch the inaugural game against New Mexico.

Snow flies as Alan Robinson (20) crushes to the ground after being hit by a Western Michigan tackler. The play was good for another first down.

When the season opened, coach Hudspeth modestly said: "We may not bury anybody this fall, but we'll bruise a few." As it turned out, the Thin Blue Line (as sportswriters came to call the Cougars) managed to bury some and bruise many. They won three games, lost six, and tied one. But the scores do not tell the whole story. The Cougars' offense which was only 150 yards short of the best ever recorded by a BYU team (1962) made them runners-up in the Western Athletic Conference. They posted no less than fourteen records, most of them in offense and also ranked third in rushing and passing.

On the field the Cougars were led by quarterback Virgil Carter, a sophomore from Provo, Utah. Carter set three passing records and accounted for 1542 yards in total offense, an amazing feat for a sophomore in his first season of varsity play. He was also one of the few sophomores to rank among the top 25 offensive stars in the nation.

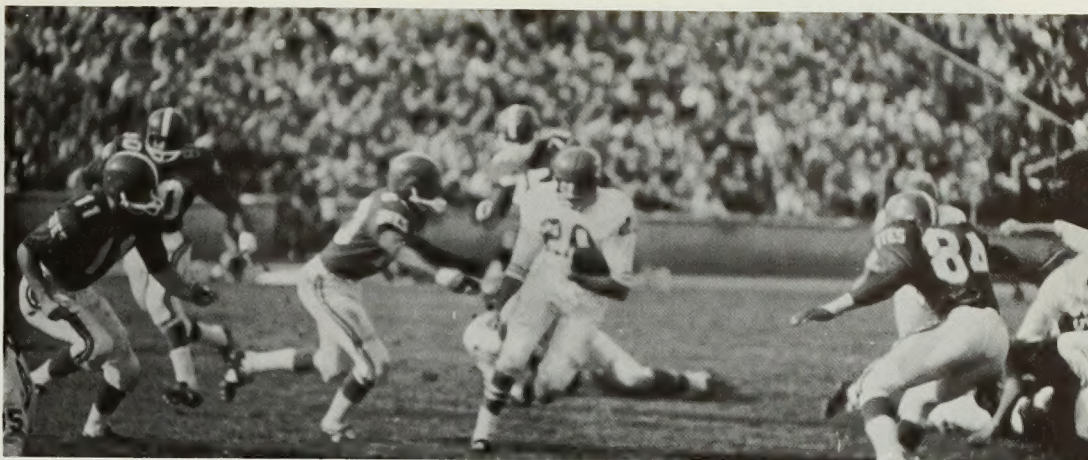

In the dressing room, jubilant players and coach (right) celebrate their victory over Utah State University.

John Ogden carries the ball for a first down against Utah State Aggies.

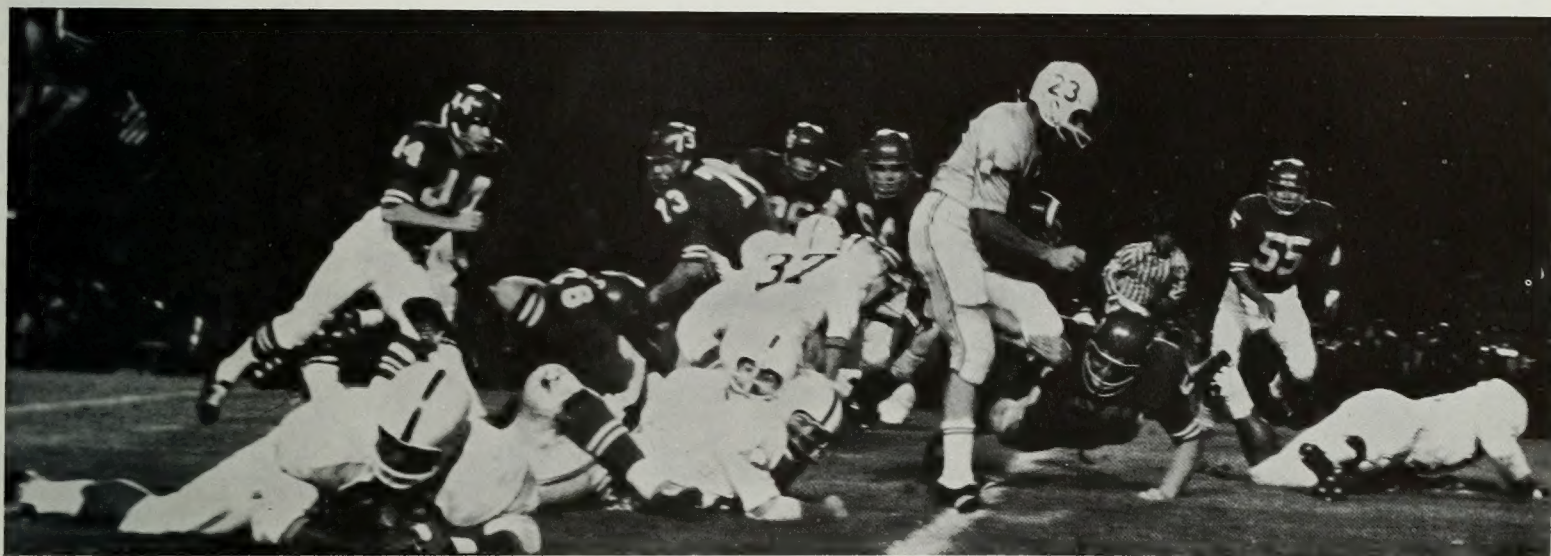

Wait 'till Next Year!

Although Coach Hudspeth will be losing the services of some valuable senior players, the outlook for the future is still good. This year's sophomores will be tested and ready to go in the fall, and reinforcements from the freshman team, as well as some promising transfers make the picture brighter for next year. In the mean time, back to the drawing board it is for Coach Hudspeth and his staff. And for the fans, back to that well-known phrase from which they draw consolation season after season: "Wait 'til next year!"

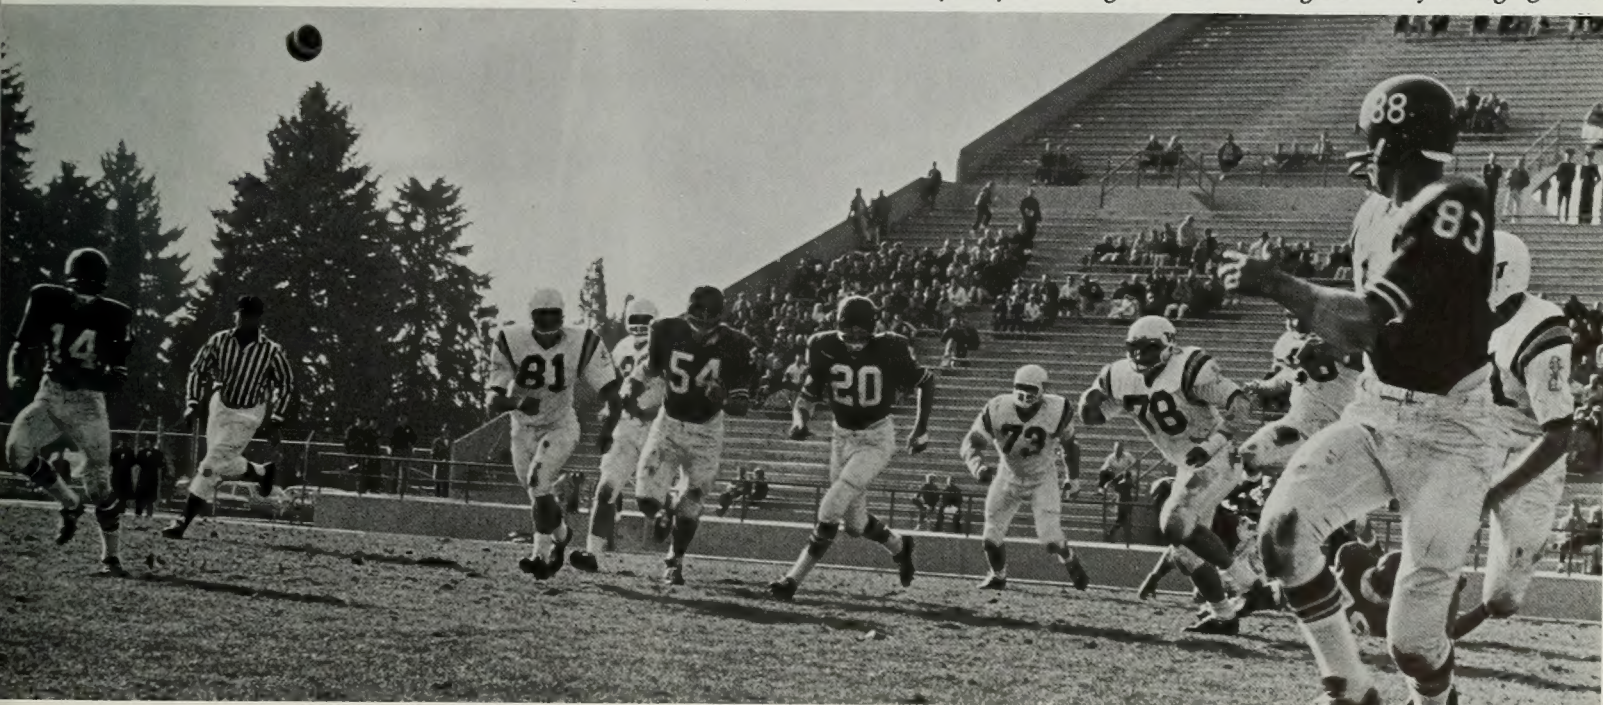

Veteran Alan Robinson tries to elude University of Utah's tackles and does well.

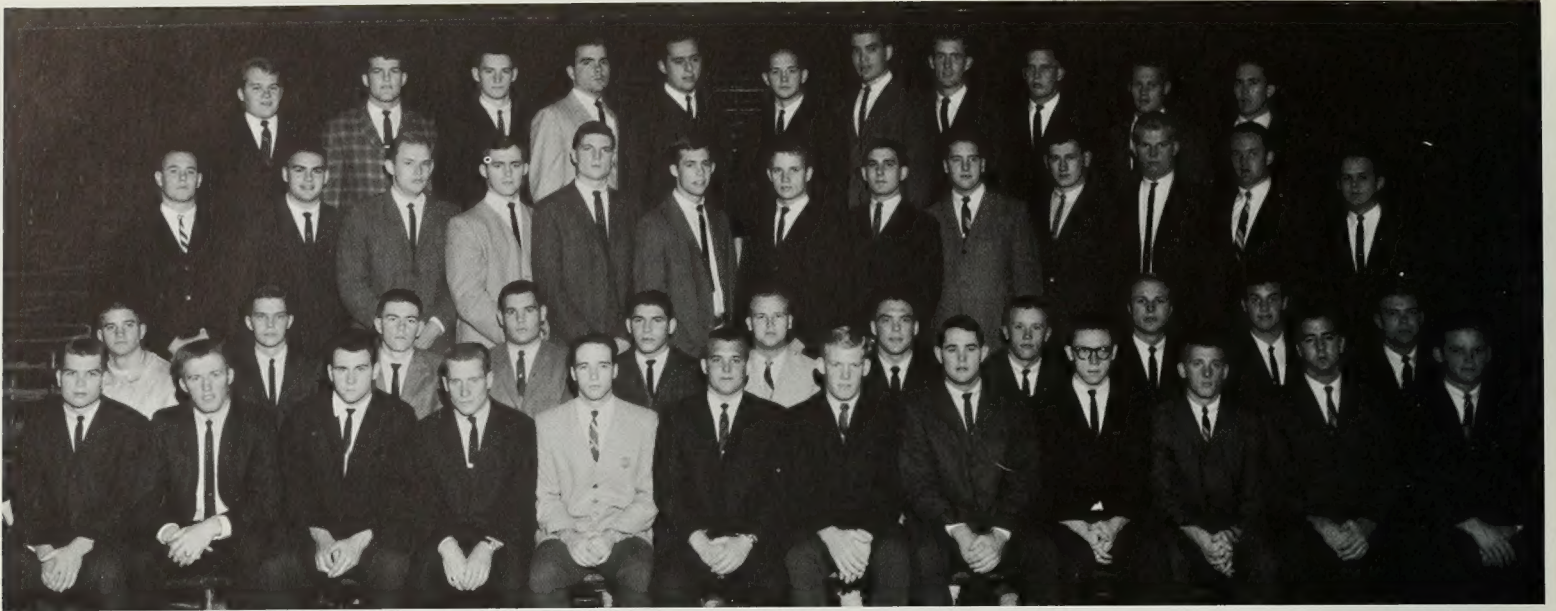

New Mexico's Orvey Hampton high-steps for open ground through the Cougar line, but BYU's Mel Olson brings him down with a driving hand tackle.

KITTENS' HOPES SMASHED

LE VERN SWANSON, Cougar tailback, carries ball for a large yardage against Air Force frosh.

Brigham Young University's freshman football team started out quite well by beating the University of Utah, but lost their next three games in a row to end the season on a dismal note.

The Kittens opened with a 7-0 victory over the University of Utah. Wally Hawkins, frosh tailback, hurdled a Utah tackler and sprinted 64 yards for the winning touchdown.

A weak pass defense was at fault as Utah State stifled the Kittens with passes for a 29-6 victory. Rambler passing made victory look easy.

The Kittens worked hard to break even in the win-loss column, but were thwarted by a devastating ground attack put on by the Air Force Academy. BYU lost 28-14. Even though the Cadets dominated play, Lloyd Jacobson, thrilled BYU fans with a 93-yard touchdown return of an intercepted Cadet pass.

It then remained for Utah's Pa-poses to revenge an early season loss to the Kittens by winning 20-6. Biting cold, interceptions, fumbles, injuries to key players plagued the Kittens as they ended their season with a poor, one win-three-loss record.

Stamina, courage, and dedication are only some of the requirements that make long distance running a difficult sport. Mile after mile participants must endure without encouragement, for the sport has little, if any, spectator appeal. When the contest is over, the victors are even denied recognition in the form of publicity, for news media usually give meager coverage to the sport.

Competing under these conditions makes victory not only harder to achieve, but also more meaningful when achieved. BYU's cross country team accomplished such a victory this year by capturing the Western Athletic Conference championship and qualifying as the fifth best cross country team in the nation.

After winning the WAC crown, BYU's long distance runners Dick Krenzer, Bob Delaney, Martin Cooley, Darryl Beardall, Ray Barrus, Ron Morgan, and Gene Cummings traveled to East Lansing, Michigan where they put on a display of team depth that gave them fifth place in the NCAA contest.

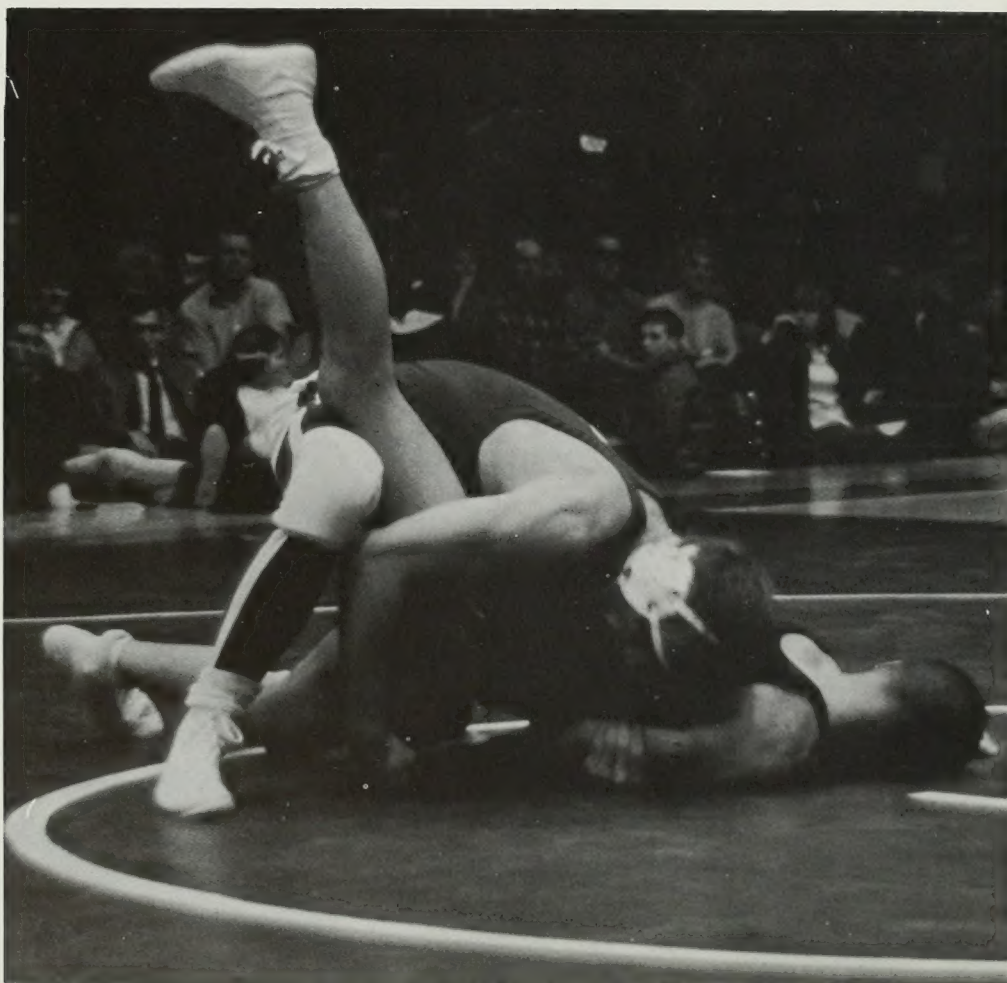

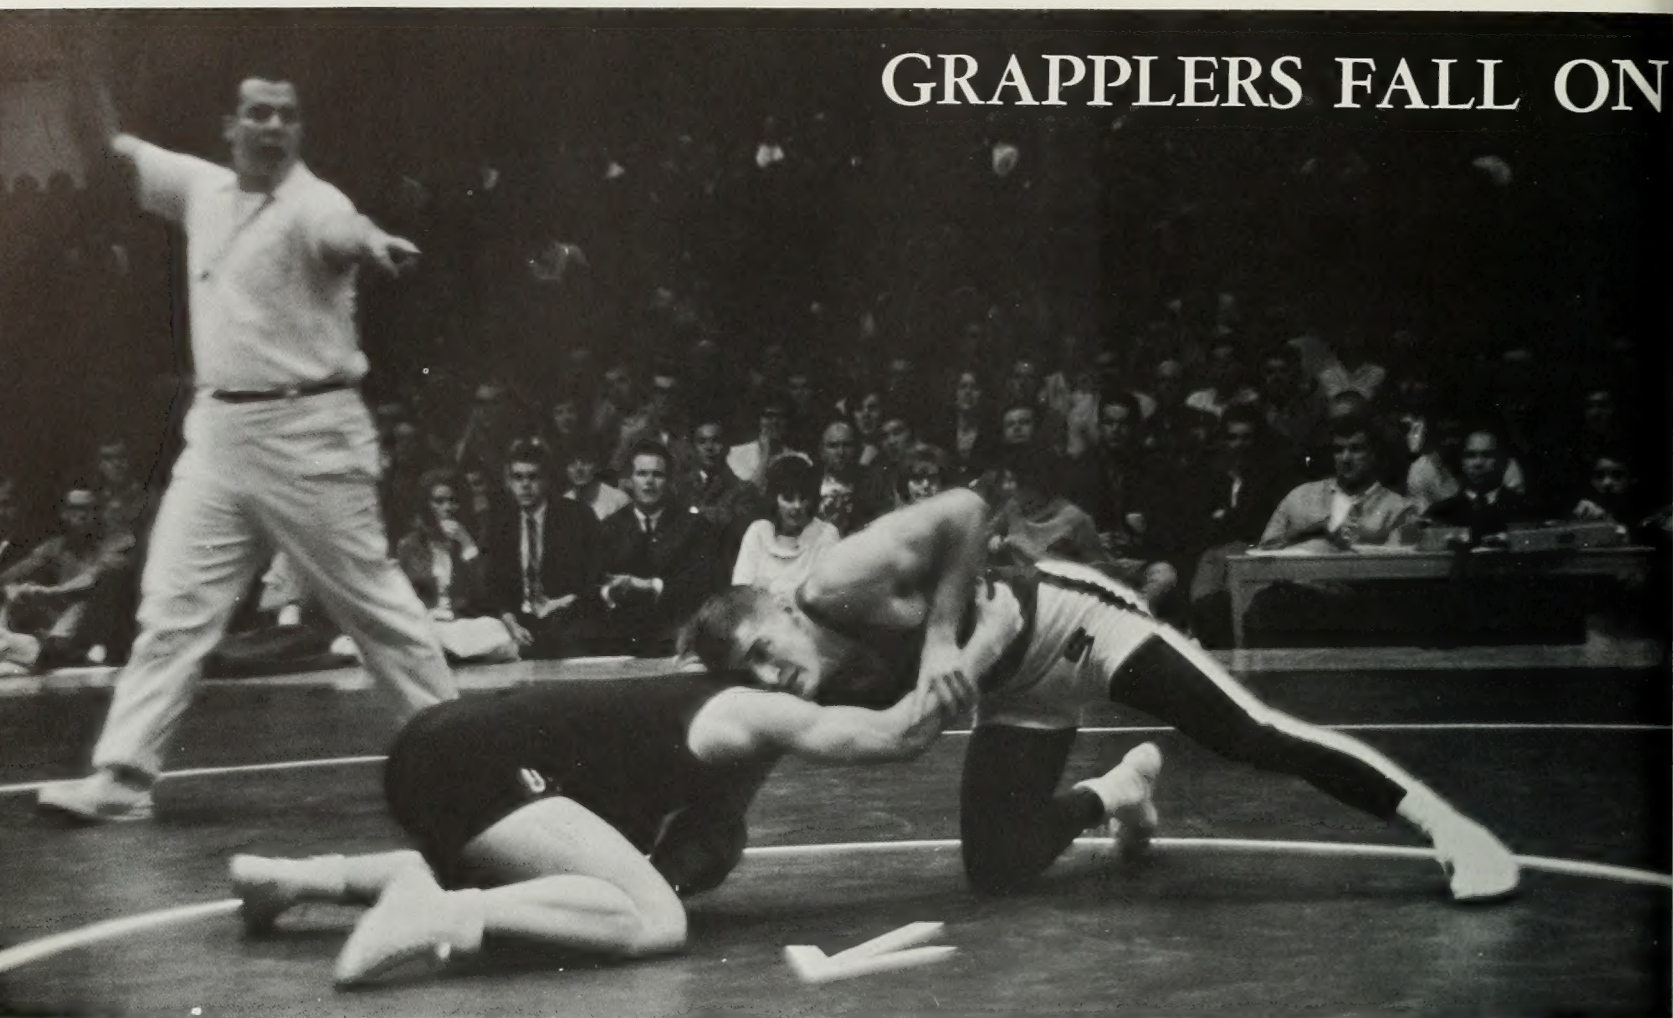

Dick Krenzer brings the torch that lighted the Y block fire during the stadium inagural ceremonies. Cross country team members carried the torch from Salt Lake City to the stadium.

WAY TO CHAMPIONSHIP

Three unbroken winning streaks and one broken hand spelled both success and defeat for Coach Fred Davis' wrestling team this year.

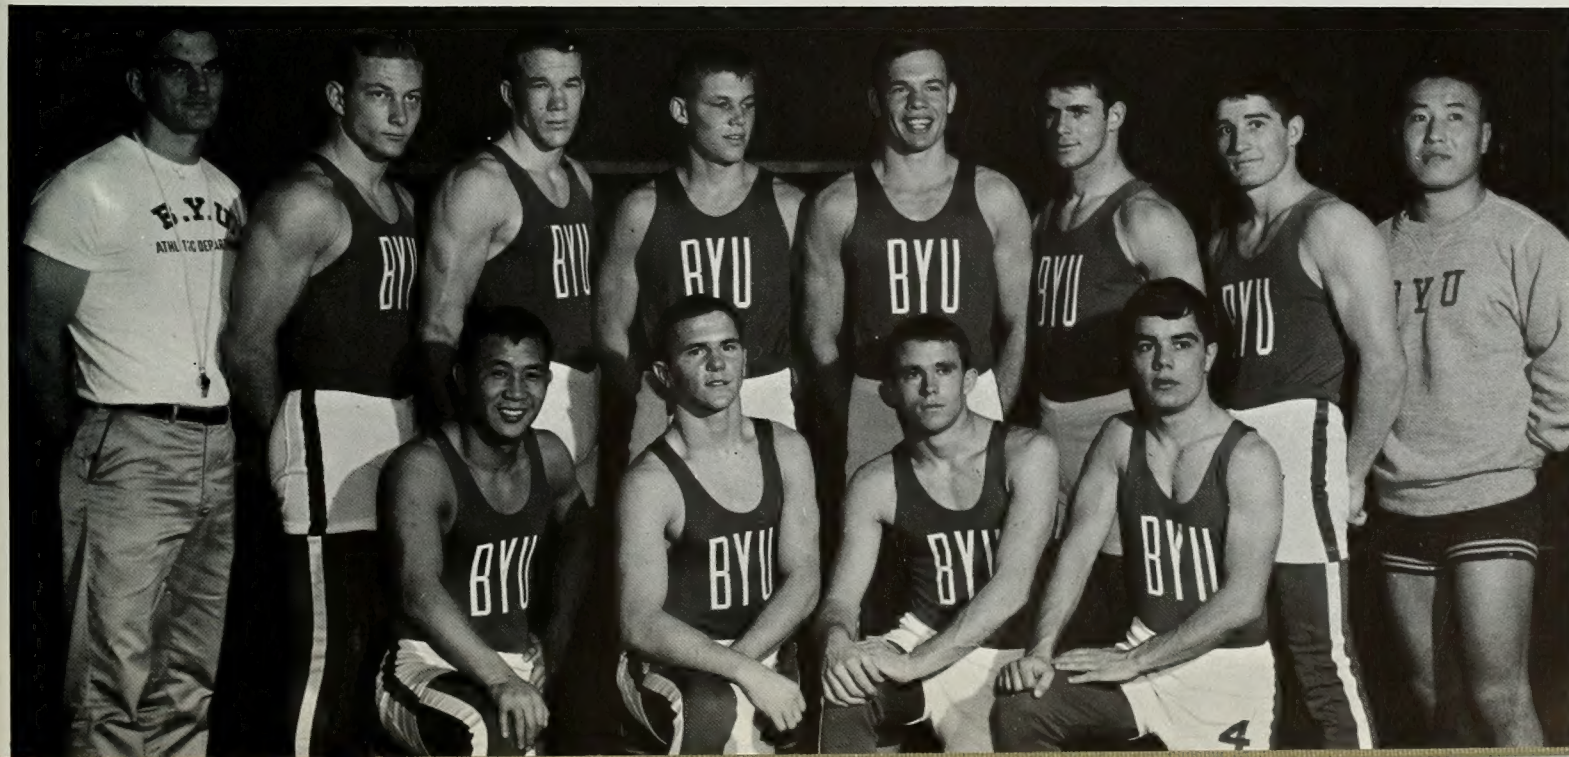

The Cougars, wrestling like no other team in BYU history, were tagged as favorites to win the WAC championship. With only one meet to go before traveling to Tucson to meet Colorado, they boasted an 11-1 record. Three Cougar grapplers held unbroken winning streaks at this time, they were: Mac Motokawa, 137-pound class; Mike Young, 147-pound class and Dan Groski, 167-pound class. These three key performers, along with Monte Jones and Darold Henry who also held impressive records, made the Cougars top contenders for the WAC trophy.

The fall came when the Cougars met Colorado at Boulder. Actually, they beat Colorado, but in the process Mike Young broke his hand while winning a decision against Colorado's Joe Arroyo. The loss of Young not only reduced the team's strength and depth, but also affected its morale and was the factor that kept the team to fourth place in the WAC tournament.

Powerful Mac Motokawa gets "riding time" against a Wyoming grappler. Mac ended the WAC season undefeated, he wrestled in the 137-pound division.

UPI RATES SKIERS FIFTH

Team captain Gary Andrus makes a tight slalom turn at Timp Haven.

With the nod of approval, and some financial aid from the Athletic Department, the ski team represented BYU in five meets during the season.

United Press International rated the Cougar skiers as the fifth best team in the nation at the beginning of the season. However, because much of the team's strength depended upon freshman talent, and because regulations prevented freshmen from entering varsity competition, the Cougars were not able to hang onto the rating for long.

One of the better contests of the year for the skiers was their own BYU Invitational held at Timp Haven. The heavily favored Utah team, as well as Idaho State and Ricks College fell to the Cougars. BYU scored 95.3 points in the giant slalom for a total winning score of 189. Idaho State was second with 182.9, Utah and Ricks followed with 182.3 and 172.3 respectively.

Other meets of the year were the Christmas Meet at Aspen, Colorado, the University of Utah Invitational at Park City, the Ricks College Invitational, at Jackson Hole, Wyoming, and the Weber State College Invitational.

Made up entirely of Canadian BYU students, the Cougar Hockey Club finished its first year of competition and proved to have the potential to become one of the best collegiate hockey teams in the nation.

During the year the club was sponsored by Provo businessmen, and it did not actually compete officially for BYU. However, now that it has proven to have such great potential, coach, players, and sponsors alike are hoping that the university will recognize the club as its official team.

According to Coach Dick Witcomb, the club's record of 15 wins and 8 defeats could have been better if instead of eleven men, the club had consisted of sixteen or seventeen. Commonly the style of play in the rugged three-period hockey game is to shuffle a number of different line-ups in and out of the action. When the Cougars met the toughest competition of the year, the NCAA champions from Denver, the lack of players to follow this strategy was a big factor that kept them from upsetting the Denver group.

SOCCER ADDED INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR

Against Ogden's top soccer team, a BYU player (with towel around neck) has just attempted to kick the ball past the goalie. He was challenged in attempt by opposing player.

Boasting players from such foreign countries as Norway, Sweden, Russia, Germany, Great Britain, and Central and South America, the Cougar soccer team adds much to the BYU feeling of international good will. The team brings to campus a sport that is a world-wide favorite.

Cougar soccermen play a split season, with half of their games in the fall and the other half in the spring. Major competition is in the tough Utah Soccer Division, that consists of eight teams. In 1964 the BYU soccer team walked off, undefeated, with the Utah Soccer Football League Championship. In 1965, the team dropped to third place after losses to Hollandia and Alemannia, both close contests and the first Cougar losses in two seasons.

The soccer team made plans to use BYU's indoor facilities during the winter, and indoor practice might be the key to BYU supremacy in Utah soccer. With players in condition year around, the Cougars could make their presence known against all foes.

Skip Smith performs a "moore" on the parallel bars at the annual Western Athletic Conference Gymnastic Championships.

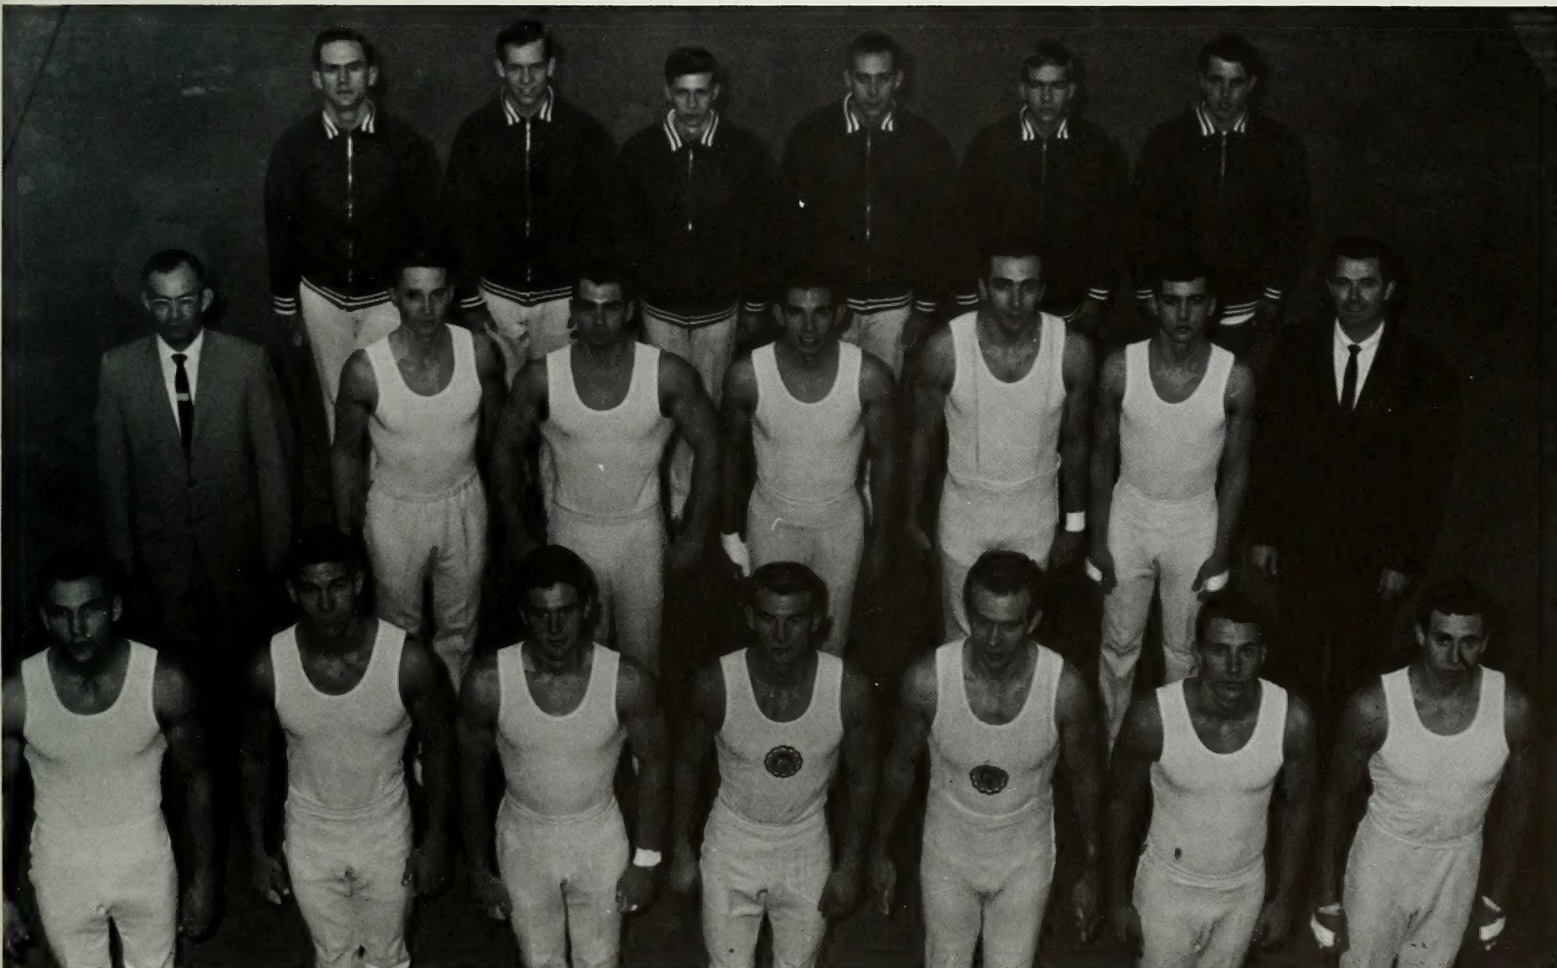

Coach Rudy Moe's gymnastics team finished the year with a remarkable record for a frosh centered group. The BYU squad, with twelve of the nineteen members still freshmen, came up with an excellent 12-6 mark for the year and a second place in the WAC Championship meet.

BYU hosted the third annual Western Athletic Conference Gymnastic Championships, March 5-6, Arizona, with 172½ points, easily took first place for the third straight year. The Cougar team, with 92 points, edged out Arizona State for second place. Utah placed fourth in the meet.

Heading the list of talented BYU freshmen was Skip Smith. In WAC finals he took third in the all-around event, tied for second in the floor exercise, and he took fourth on the parallel bars. Others who did well during the regular season were Team Captain Ron Newson on the high bar, Dan Davis on trampoline, and Fred Gagon.

COWBOYS SEEK NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

BYU's Tom Buxton, regional bareback and bull dogging champion, holds leather strap tightly and keeps right hand free (in accordance with rules) while trying to stay atop "Paddle Foot."

Brigham Young University's 1964 rodeo team was an unquestionable success. The team has consistently been close to becoming national champions a number of times and in 1964 they finished fourth.

The Cougars had an excellent chance during the summer rodeo season of 1965 to take the national title. Last year the team won seven straight rodeos in Montana, Idaho, and Utah, as well as winning the Rocky Mountain Rodeo Championship.

John Fincher and Tom Buxton accounted for much of the team's success. John is the world champion collegiate calf roper. Tom is the regional bull dogging and bareback riding champion.

Outside of a meet at home early in May, the team's schedule called for meets outside of the state of Utah for 1965. Included in the competition were Montana State, Boise Jr. College, Utah State, Idaho State, and Weber Jr.

THE BEST YET

Brigham Young University's golf coach Karl Tucker believes that the only way to test a golf team is to send it against the best competition available.

This year, the best competition available was in the Northern California Inter-collegiate Tournament in Santa Cruz, California. Thirty-two of the best teams in the West were available, including teams from Stanford, USC, UCLA, and defending tournament champion, Fresno State.

BYU golfers refused to wilt under the pressure from all sides and walked away with the second place trophy. San Jose took the championship.

The brightest spot for the Mountain Cats in the California tournament was Bud Allin. He finished second in the individual competition, losing in a sudden death playoff.

The Cougars were leading for the WAC Championship at this time, having beaten defending WAC Champion, New Mexico, Arizona, and Arizona State in the California tournament, and Nevada Southern, Montana, and Utah in the BYU links.

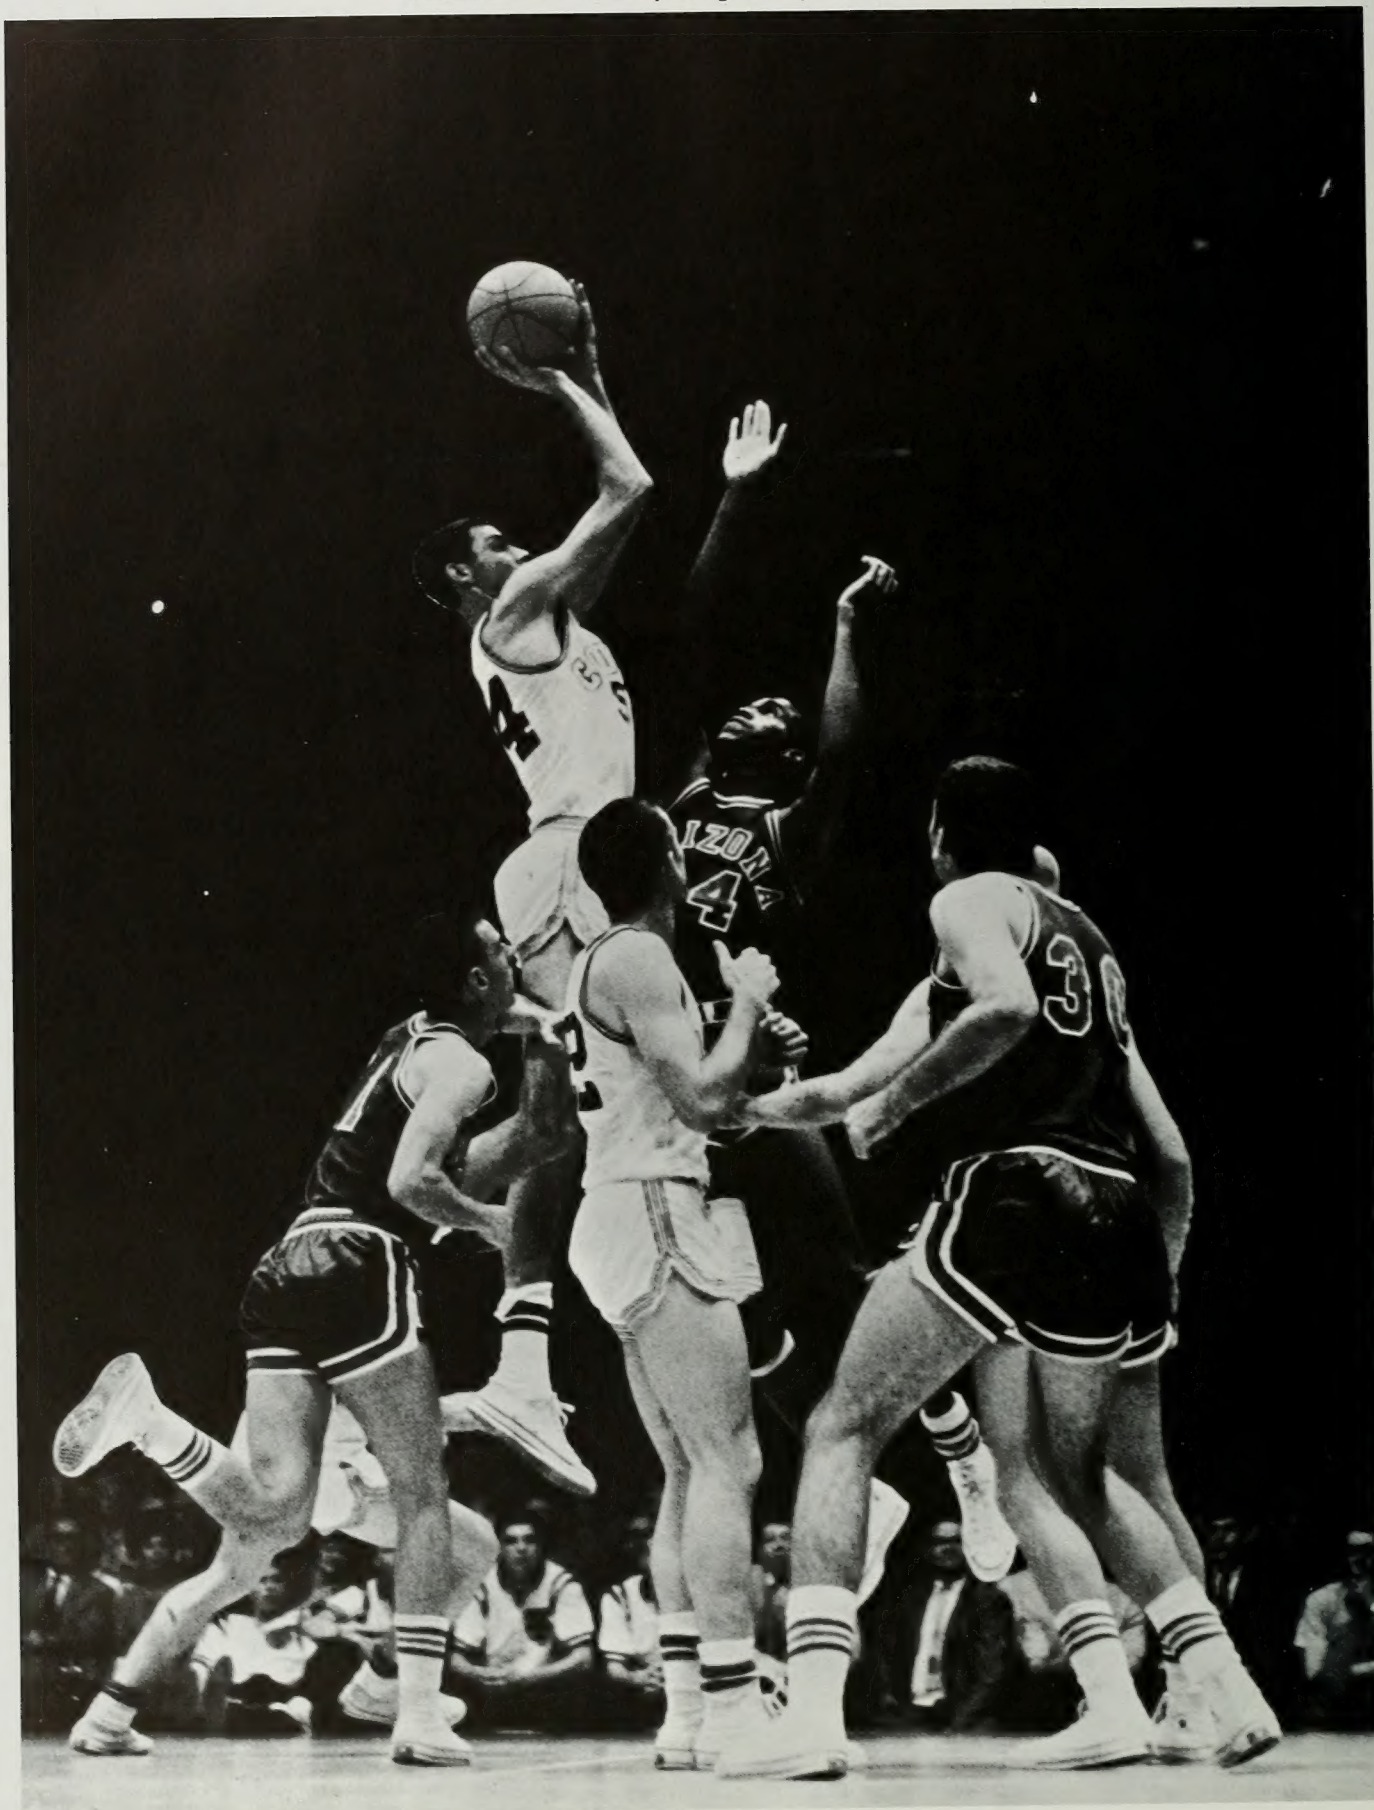

Bud Allin tees off at the Provo Greens in quest of another BYU win.

THE YEAR OF THE COUGAR

Source of power of the Cougar team, John Fairchild (below) towers high above teammates and Arizona opponents to sink another jumper. Triumphant Cougars (right) carry Coach Watts toward the dressing room after defeating New Mexico 70-67 in the final game of the Western Athletic Conference.

It started with pre-season articles in Sports Illustrated and it never let up until the end of the season. It was the largest amount of publicity a BYU team had received in many years. To listen to the radio and television stations, and to read the newspapers and magazines was to believe that indeed, this was the Year of the Cougar.

Perhaps other coaches would have been happy to be the beneficiaries of the huge amount of publicity; not Coach Watts. He didn't like it at all, and justly so. It wasn't that he lacked confidence in his team; he had plenty of that. It wasn't that the team lacked talent; there was plenty of that too. So much in fact, that as Sports Illustrated put it, "Coach Watts is almost embarrassed." What he didn't like was that the publicity put too much pressure on his boys; and on the other hand, could make them over-confident.

But that same pressure brought by publicity might well have been the thing that tied those "Twelve Tall Cougars" into a team and inspired them to play the kind of ball that earned them the Western Athletic Conference Championship and gave them a place in the NCAA Far West Regional Playoffs.

Forward Steve Kramer goes up for two points against the University of Utah. Game was in Salt Lake City. Score: 108-99, BYU.

The pep groups' contribution to the success of the Cougars was impossible to determine, but certainly could not be ignored. Songleaders, Cosmo and fans (right) cheer and rejoice over the Cougars' victory against the University of Utah. The score: 67-98. Flagtwirler Sue Larson, cheerleaders, Cosmo and other pep groups put on a show almost as exciting as the game.

Dick Nemelka and Steve Kramer (above) show some of the team work that earned them a 92-88 victory over Arizona. Nemelka was the highest scoring Cougar next to John Fairchild.

In spite of a heavy schedule Cougar players did not neglect studies. Here, Jon Stanley and Jeff Congdon (left) hit the books while flying to Laramie, Wyo. Stanley was the top Cougar athlete-scholar with a 3.54 grade-point average.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

Brigham Young University's freshman basketball team finished the season with a record-shattering scoring against their final opponent. Jim Eakins, 6-11 center, led the Kittens to a 131-59 win over Dugway Proving Grounds.

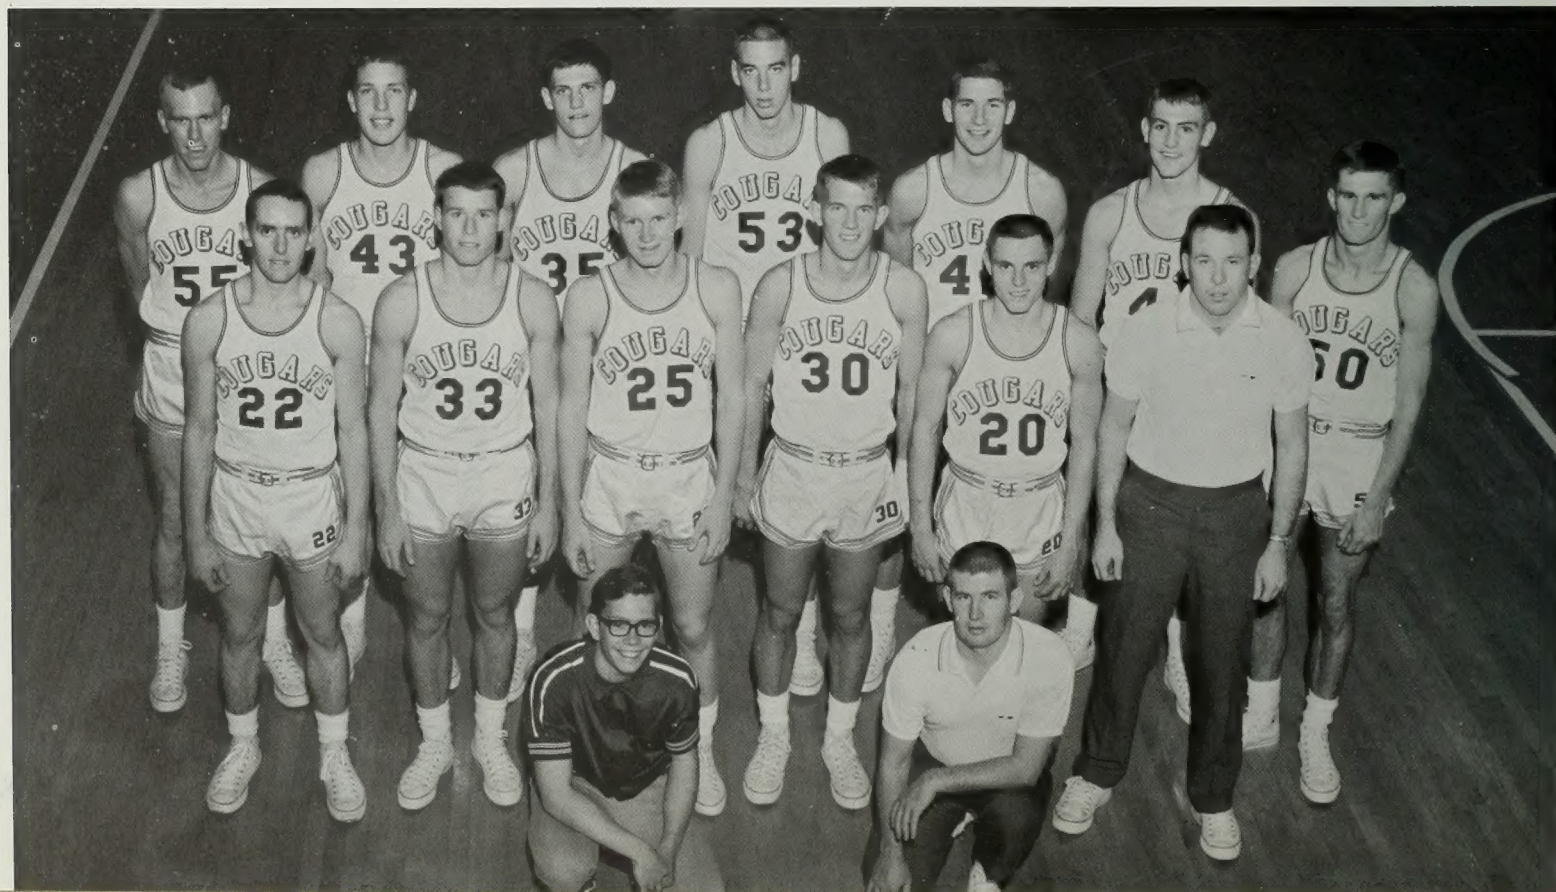

Coach Gary Earnest's frosh team ended the season with a successful 10-3 record. They lost to Utah twice and once to the ICAC champion, College of Eastern Utah.

Coach Earnest didn't always use flowery language in explaining how a team wins, but he got results. The team got better as the season progressed, and players jelled into a solid outfit. They ran, passed, and shot, over-powering their opponents with the greatest offensive weapon in basketball: the fast break—thus preparing for a future with the run-and-shoot varsity team.

One outstanding player, Jim Eakin, 6-11 frosh center, broke Gary Hill's season scoring average of a year ago (22.9) raising that record to 23.4. On the boards he was strong, taking rebounds at an average of 17 a game. Eakin, along with other frosh players should be a great help to the Cougar varsity team. Time will tell.

Center Jim Eakins goes up for a rebound against Papooses.

Kittens try a fast break of their own.

Forward Clark Jenkins prepares to pass to Eakins.

Tom Weir hits a home run against Los Angeles State. The ball (arrow) went clear over the left field's fence.

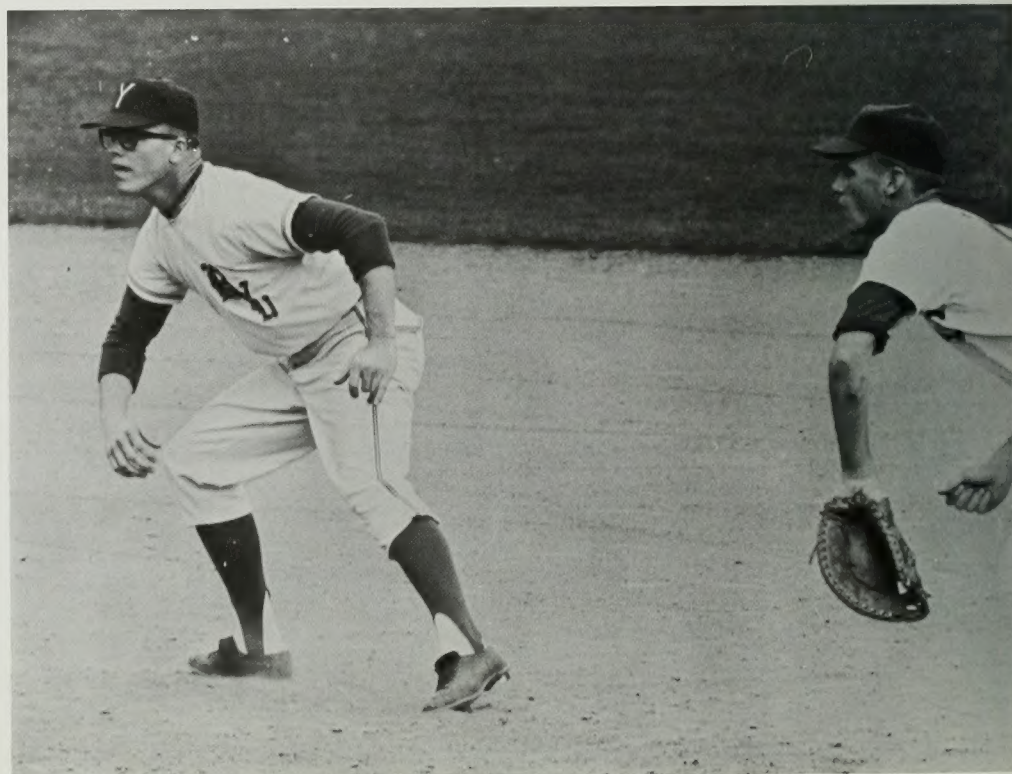

In the 1965 baseball season, the BYU team made an uneven showing for the record. On the high end of the scale, Coach Tuckett and his club fared better than expected on their annual California trip this spring. After facing some of the best competition in the California area, they returned home with four wins and three defeats. The Cougars also showed signs of brilliance in preparing for the start of the WAC race when they defeated the Big Sky Conference contenders from Weber State in two games.

The bottom of the scale was seen when the Pumas opened their home stand with a loss to the Diablos of Los Angeles State; they were clouted with one of the finest hitting attacks ever seen on the BYU diamond. Cougar hopes, raised by a pre-season record of 10-6, were shaken when BYU opened the Western Athletic Conference season as victims of two victories for the Utes, defending Northern Division Champions.

Uneven performance was the main problems for BYU. Often playing well, the Cougar nine failed to gain that sharp edge of consistency that makes a championship team. However, there is good potential for the future. "Lots of talent," was what Coach Frank Snyder said about this year's Freshman baseball team. They could make the varsity club one of the sharpest, hard-hitting teams next year.

THINCLADS TRY OUT NEW STADIUM

Ralph Brinkerhoff, Al Rockwell, and Mike Douglas try out the new rubberized-asphalt track as they run the 330-yard intermediate hurdles against UCLA. Douglas and UCLA's Roger Johnson tied for first place.

UCLA's Ray Wilson and BYU's Tim Russell begin the 440 relay.

Jim Russell finishes first in the 440 relay. Just behind him is UCLA's Len Dodson.

By the end of April, Coach Clarence Robison's track-and-field men were well into another successful season. At this time, the squad had won five meets in a row, including three in unofficial indoor competition.

As a portent of things to come, the Cougars downed Oregon State and California in an early triangular meet. Even this early in the season, one record in the 330-yard hurdles went by the boards. With Mike Douglas running a 37.5 to break the Edwards Stadium record in Berkley.

One of the biggest—if not the biggest—triumphs of the year came at the expense of UCLA. The Cougar tracksters, lead by Mike Bianco and Greg Cramm, easily won with a final score of 96-49. They racked up victories in 11 of the 17 events, including 6 of 7 field events and sweeps in 4. It was no wonder that UCLA's coach Jim Bush should comment: "BYU has one of the strongest teams in the country."

Don Lowe played the number one singles position. Here he hits a forehand volley.

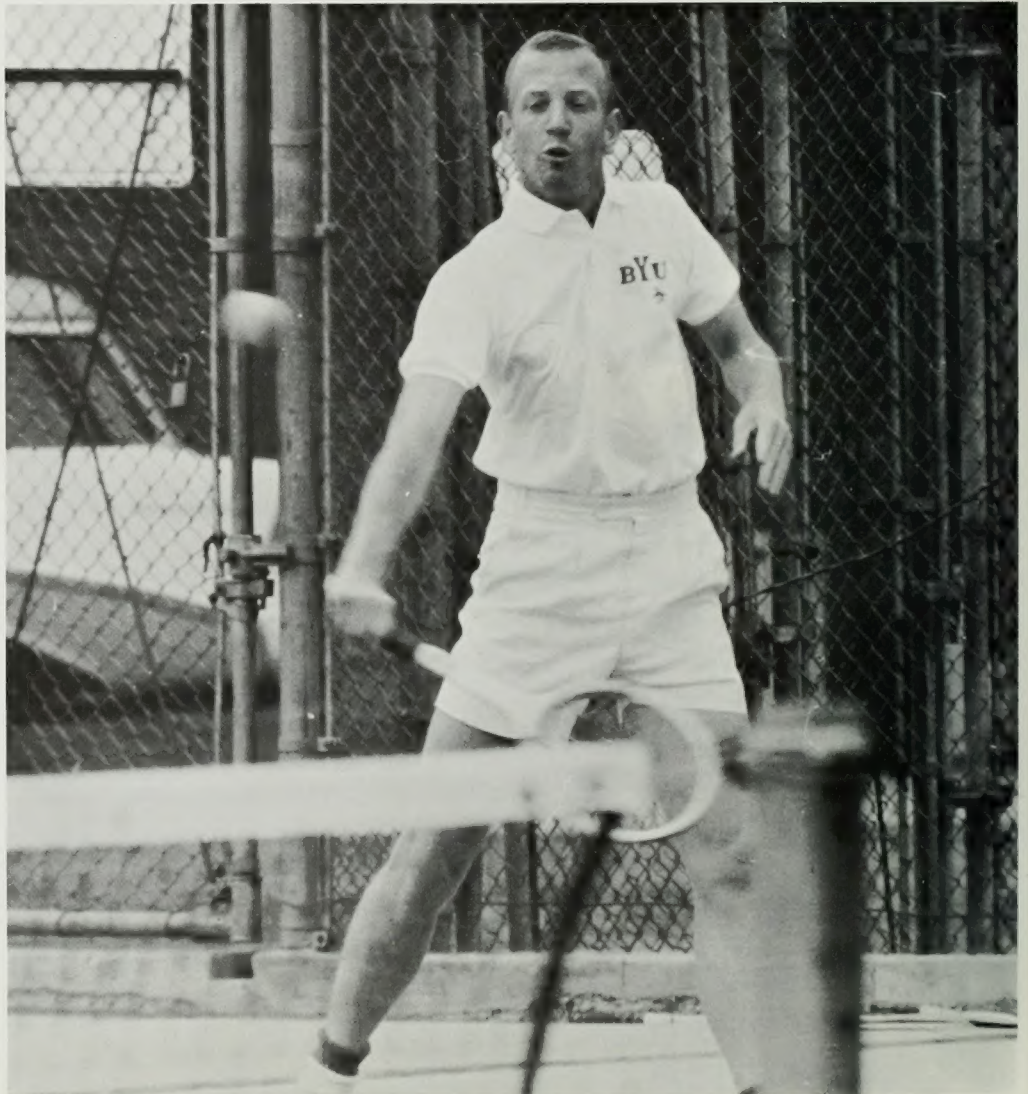

The 1965 tennis team was one of the best arrays of talent that the Cougars had ever had. Besides some good new men, including Terry Ehlers and Bill Grimm, the team had all but one of the players who captured second place in the 1964 WAC finals.

The first competition of the year for the team was the California trip. There the netters defeated Redlands 6-2 to win the third annual Long Beach Spring Classic. The tournament victory gave the Cougars a 4-2 record for the week on the coast, with wins over Long Beach, Los Angeles, and Redlands (twice) after losing to UCLA and USC. Later, in the Utah Invitational, BYU's doubles team of Don Lowe and Bill Fort defeated Utah's best in a marathon match that went two hours and thirty minutes.

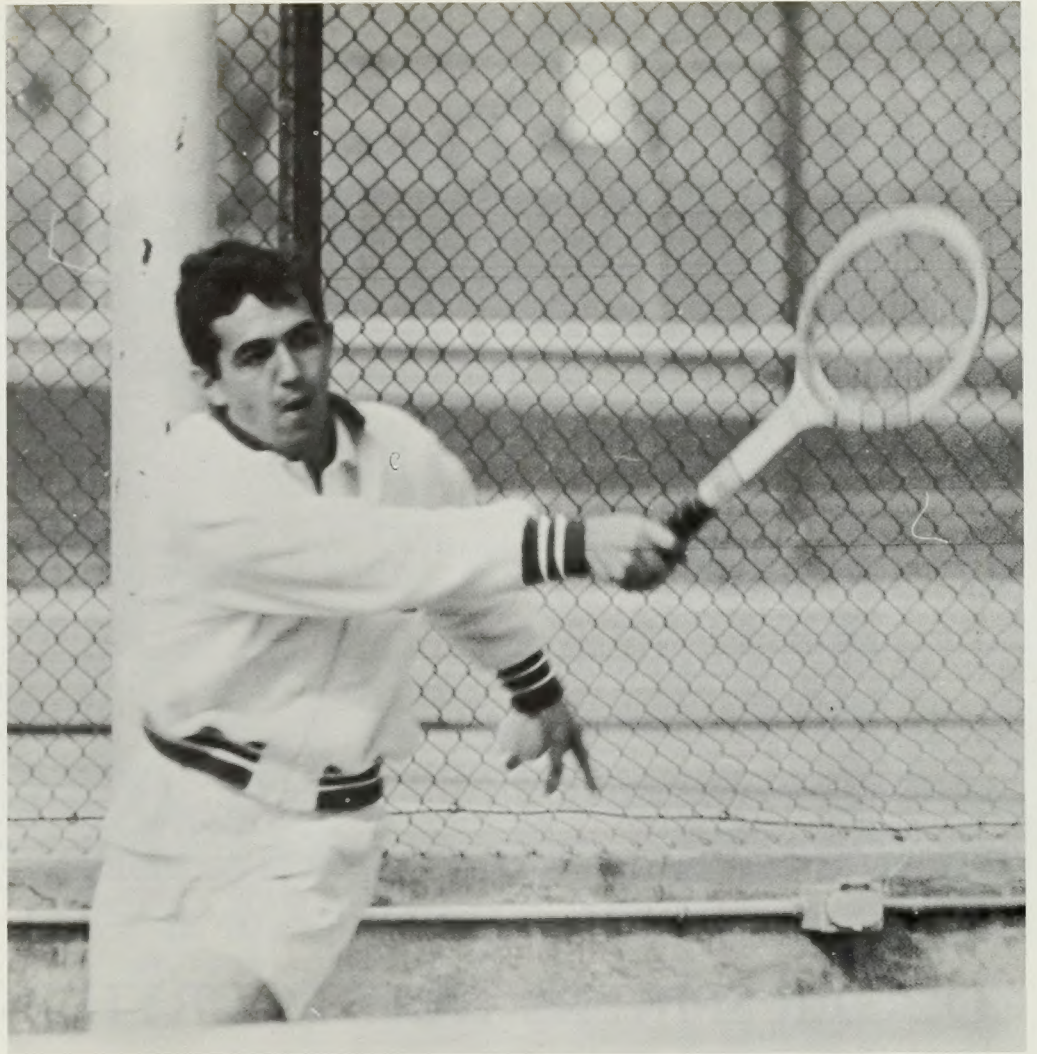

The first weekend in May, BYU hosted WAC play-offs and racked up another victory. The action began with BYU winning 6-3 over Arizona, the defending Western Athletic Conference Champions. Don Lowe upset the number-one Wildcat netter, nationally ranked Fred Drilling, and the Cougars had other singles victories; but strangely, two of BYU's three losses come in doubles matches, where Cougars were accustomed to winning. On Saturday, BYU defeated Utah State and Utah defeated Arizona. The weekend triumphs of Utah and the Cougars set the stage for the meet between the Beehive rivals at the Provo Invitational, which took place the following week.

COUGAR SPIKERS TAKE FOURTH IN TOURNAMENT

In the past, American collegiate volleyball has been dominated by California, but now a strong challenge is coming from the BYU Cougars. Under the direction of Coach John Lowell, an All-American himself, the team placed fourth in the 1964 NCAA meet, and came through with an All-American in Karl McCowan.

The 1965 team, including Jon Stanley (an honorable mention for 1964 All-American) and John Alstrom (a second year player and potential All-American), continued to show spirit and determination. In the AAU meet, BYU was the only non-California team to get into the semi-finals, and finally placed fourth. In the April Far West Invitational at San Francisco, the Cougars lost in the total event, but not before pulling an upset by beating Los Angeles Valley College 3-2 and winning over UCLA in the first game of the set in open division. Later in April at the Phoenix Open Tournament, the BYU spikers came through with a resounding victory. The Cougars wound up another notable year of volleyball with a trip to the NCAA tournament in Omaha, Nebraska, in May.

BYU BOWLERS JOIN RMBC

Men and women bowlers from BYU became highly respected in their first year of competition in the new Rocky Mountain Bowling Conference. They faced stiff competition from Utah, Utah State, Weber State and Idaho State.

The women's bowling team did exceptionally well in their first year. Led by captain Kathleen Vaughn, they participated in the Associated College Unions Tournament in Albuquerque, New Mexico, placing high in all events.

The women played a leading role in the newly organized RMBC, in contention for first place right into the final match. They also won the BYU Invitational Tournament, on the new BYU lanes.

BYU's men's bowling team made their newly organized group a real threat in the RMBC. In Albuquerque, they took first place in team, doubles. All events were against stiff college teams.

The men's team was led by Blake Napper, who represented BYU in St. Paul, Minnesota in the National Collegiate bowling roll offs. He competed against bowlers from 75 other colleges in the U.S.

Slow-moving chess attracted the intellectual sort.

Men and women students who could not make the varsity teams did not need to bury their athletic ambitions and talents. The intramural program at BYU, with a variety of events from wrestling to chess, provided something for everyone.

The program offers opportunity for participation in approximately thirty different sports, and students may enter some forty different tournaments. Players may either participate as independents, or represent wards, organizations, or housing units. Competition at the beginning is generally light, but the finals in some divisions can be top-flight quality.

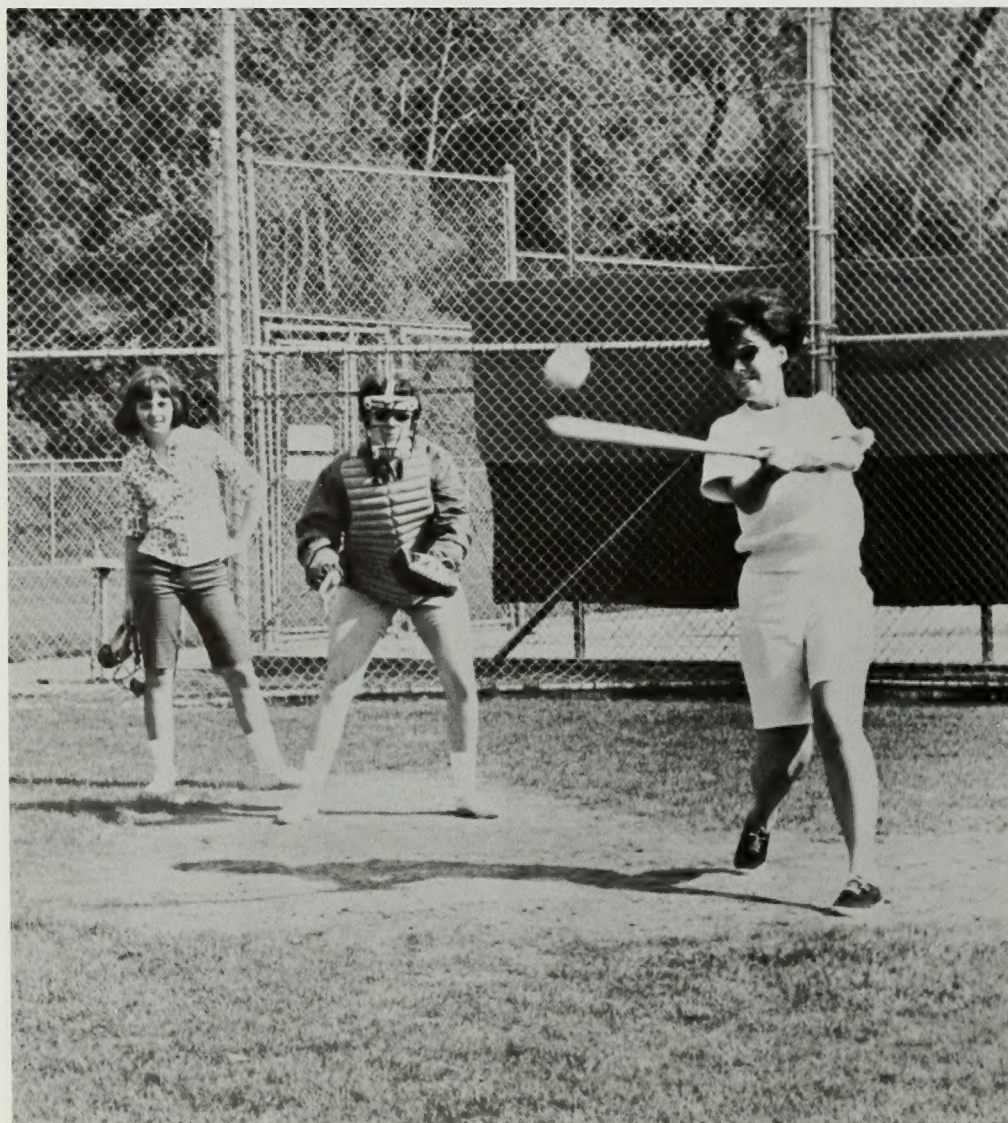

This year the program attracted over 10,000 participants. Basketball was by far the most popular sport with more than 100 teams entering.

A watered down version of real hockey, broom hockey retains much of the danger, and the basic rules of the parent sport.

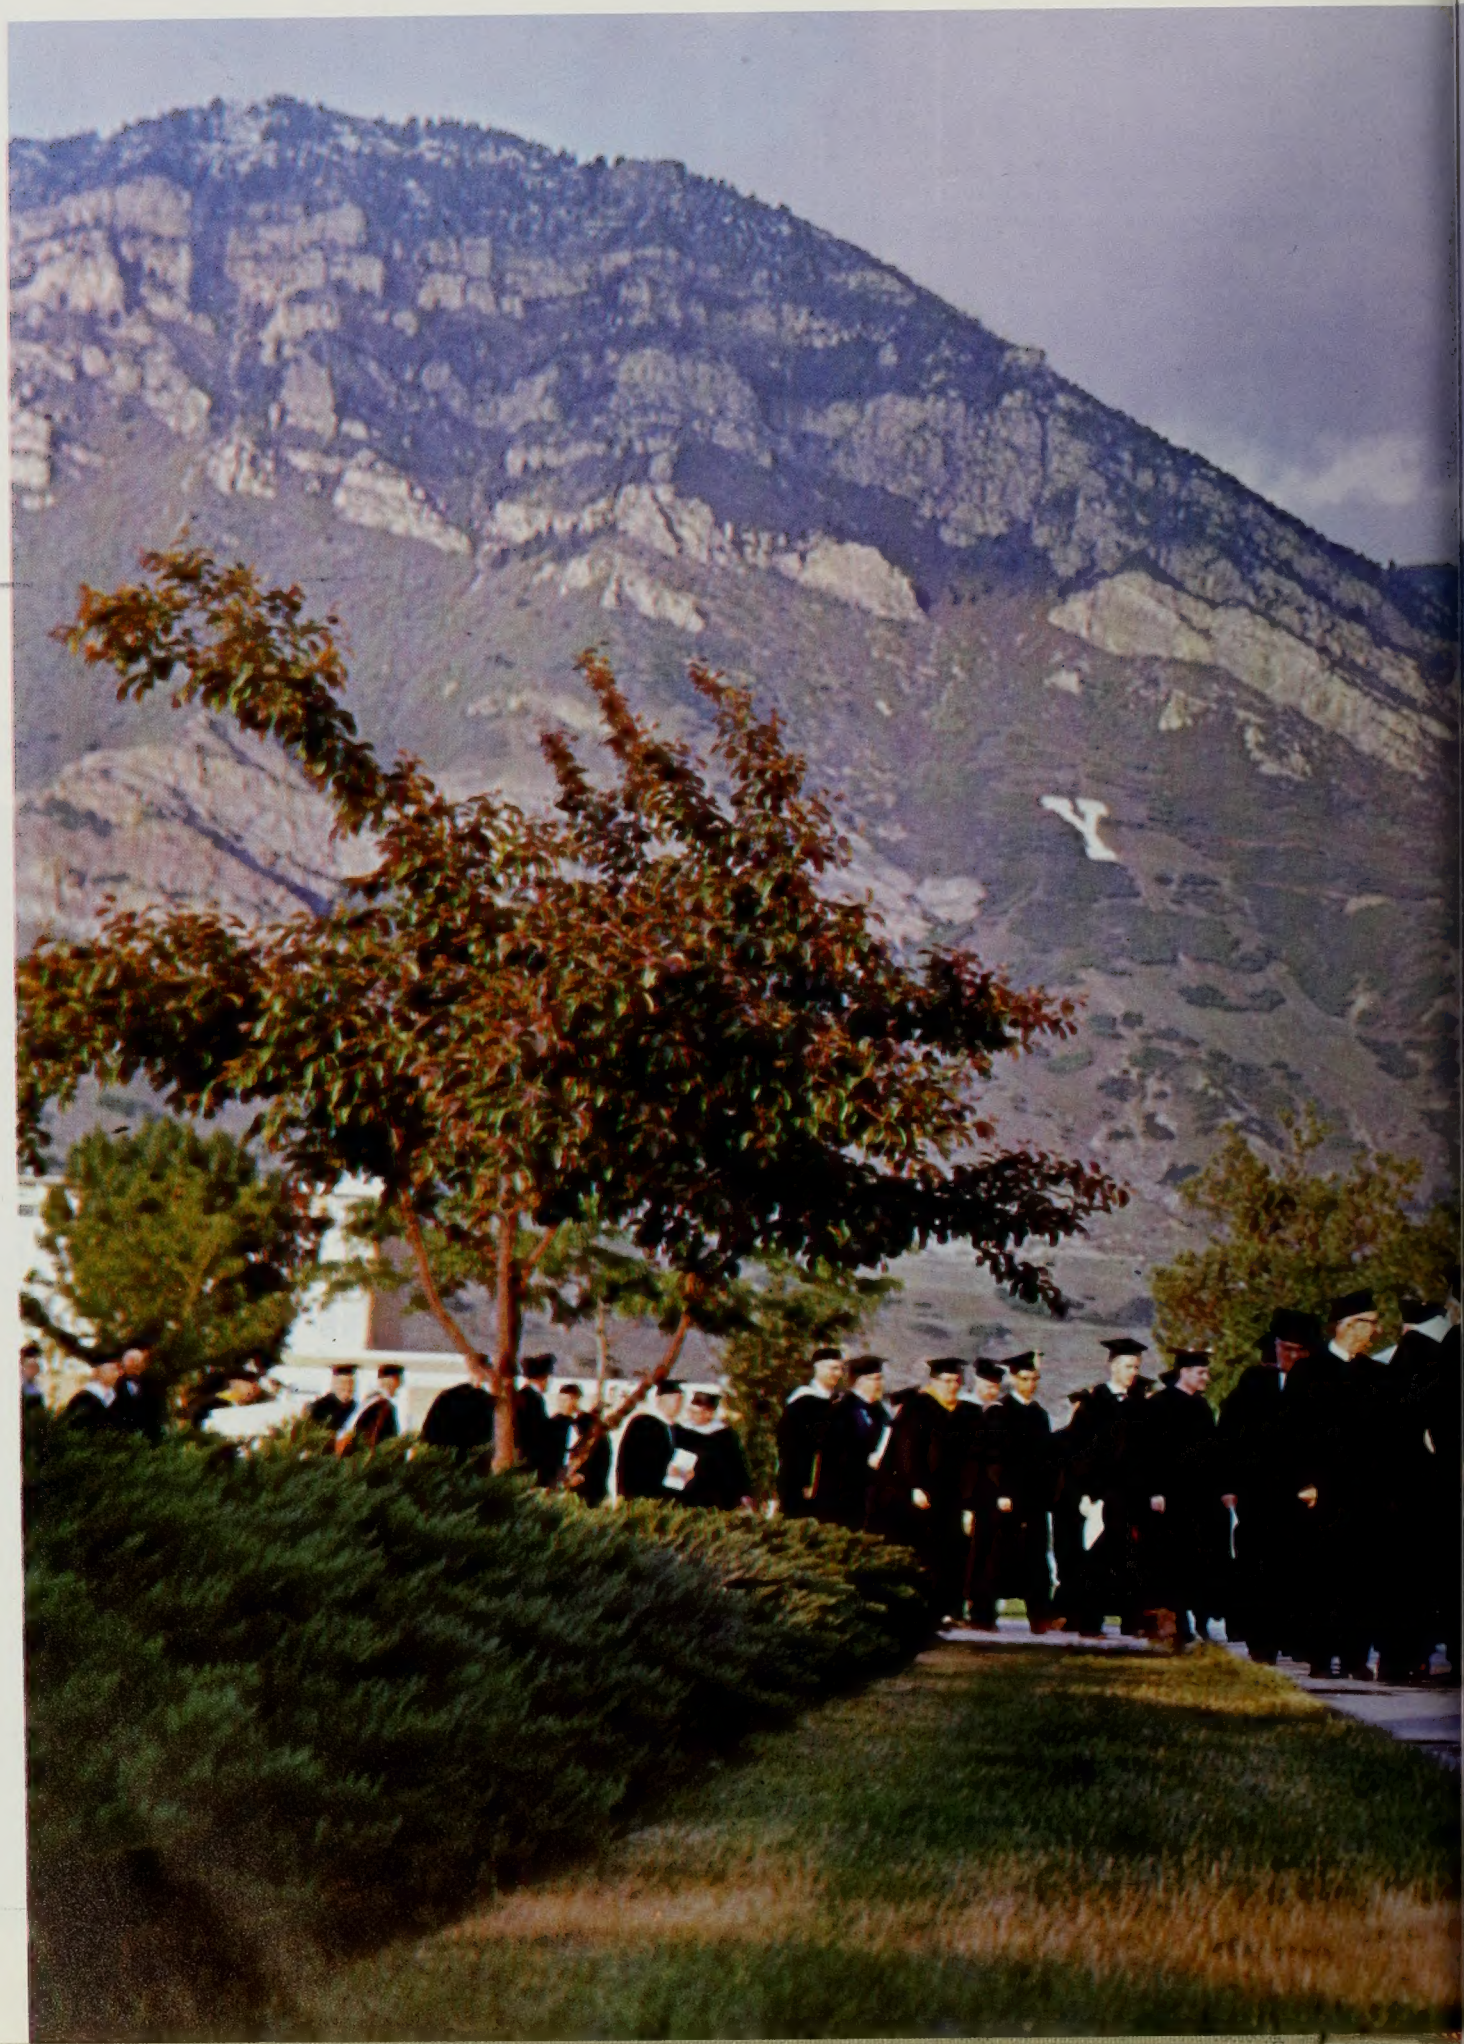

When the snow finally stopped falling, tennis enthusiasts took to the courts to play the short-termed but popular sport.

Another winter sport, figure skating, attracted a lesser number of competitors for it requires great skill.

FRESHMAN CLASS

For the first time in 17 years a Freshman Class at BYU participated in the Homecoming activities and even had a float in the parade. In the Cougar Days celebrations, the frosh entered into competition with the Sophomore Class and came out on top in the bonfire building category. Receiving national recognition, the class sponsored I.B.M. match dance, even though it made some rather unusual mistakes, was judged a success.

During Competition Week, the spirit of the freshmen earned them second place. They also sponsored the Welcome Back dance after Christmas Vacation and a belated New Year's Eve dance. Although their entry in "Highbrow Humbug," the yearly Skits-o-frantic, was not included among the winners, the participation proved to be a fun and a learning experience for those concerned. Other events during the year included the partial sponsorship of Winter Carnival, a freshman talent show accompanying the Inaugural Ball, a fireside with Paul Dunn as speaker, the Frosh Formal, and an awards banquet honoring all deserving members of the Freshman Class.

OFFICERS: Jeanne Sorensen, secretary; Bill Lawrence, president; Rainer Munns, vice president.

"The wind came, the rain came, and the hail came; and then we all began to wonder why we came," was the cry of persevering Freshmen who entered a homecoming float for the first time in seventeen years.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

A powder blue "Moonlight Carousel" with stately, silhouetted horses transformed the Wilkinson Center Ballroom into the setting for the first Autumn Ball of the school year at the annual Sophomore Cotillion. Another sophomore sponsored activity was a class party where bright yellow tags telling the theme for the evening "Meet a Sophomore," were passports to enjoyment as members of the class took over the Wilkinson Center for games, movies, dancing, and making acquaintances during the stag evening.

For the week of Homecoming, the sophomores entered a float in the parade, walking away with fourth place, and also sponsored the popular hootenanny one evening during the five days of excitement. Support by the members of the active class was so great during Competition Week that the second year students copped the coveted first prize. A Welcome Back Dance and an entry in the Skits-o-frantic competition came later in the year, but perhaps the crowning glory for the group arrived as a result of the effort and talent of Marie Peterson in composing the song "Home is Where the Heart Is," for Songfest. The sophomores won the sweepstakes with trophies for audience appeal and the best mixed group.

JUNIOR CLASS

Besides taking English Proficiency Examinations, feeling the pressure of graduation requirements, and cultivating what is commonly known as "that haggard junior look," members of the Junior Class at BYU participated in quite a few class activities. For instance, there was the Junior Prom; before the evening of elegant dancing at the Wilkinson Center, couples were entertained by the popular recording Folk singing group, the Brothers Four. Hard work and organized leadership were the prime ingredients which combined to make the biggest dance of the year into a time of fun and unaccustomed graciousness. The week prior to the prom, the class organized an assembly along the dance theme.

In the Homecoming parade, the juniors emerged from the excitement and color with second place in the float entries. A class fireside, a booth in the Cougar Days carnival, partial sponsorship for the Welcome Back Dance, and an Awards Banquet for deserving juniors aided during the year to bring the class members closer together. In the middle of February the third-year group gathered together to participate in a hootenanny in the afternoon and the dance, "Charlie Brown's Night Out."

OFFICERS: Cheri Jensen, secretary; Richard Hart, president; Cynthia Whiting, vice-president.

Hundreds of students provided the audience for the Junior Class sponsored Hootenanny on the main floor of the Wilkinson Center.

Perhaps the most unusual activity of Senior Class during the school year 1964-65 was their conducting heating tunnel tours underground all over (and under) campus. These tours gave interested students an opportunity to see the under-pinnings of a university, heating pipes, water spouts and the like. Other projects were preparing and distributing graduate scholarship information; selling Y beanies to incoming freshmen, the proceeds of which helped to pay for the class project; building and entering a homecoming float; sponsoring a Cougar Days booth; and coordinating the Class Competition activities.

Besides capturing second place in Skits-o-frantic, the class still had enough time and energy to guide their Songfest entry into the finals. In addition, they sold and distributed graduation announcements, and planned the Senior Breakfast. The successful Senior Week activities, under the theme of "Truth—the Eternal Flame," included: Wilkinson Center doings and displays, Senior Honors Banquet, Senior Ball, Farewell trek to the block Y, and the unveiling of the Senior Class gift to the University—a bronze Cougar, to be located in front of the football stadium.

OFFICERS: Gary Browing, president; Nancy Wilcox, secretary; Neil Nelson, vice-president.

ASSOCIATED GRADUATE STUDENTS

OFFICERS: Robert Routsong, vice-president; Jackson Pemberton, president; Lynne Baxter, secretary.

Early in the Fall of the year, the Graduate class became officially known as "Associated Graduate Students." Dean Wesley P. Lloyd not only served as head of the Graduate College, but also acted as adviser and presented various ideas on graduate education, some of which resulted in the organization of the Symposium Committee. This Committee grew partly out of the necessity for a broader approach to graduate education in which students would have contact with a multiplicity of ideas and backgrounds. One of the things the Symposium Committee accomplished was the sponsorship of several inter-departmental meetings between graduates to discuss how each discipline could contribute more to the solution of man's problems. This was especially important because many graduates are highly specialized in their own fields and have infrequent contact with outside departments, thus causing their education to become too narrow.

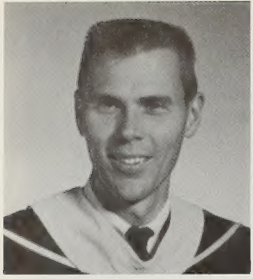

Wives of graduates students in several departments formed groups on a departmental basis for the purpose of attaining a better understanding of their husband's careers.

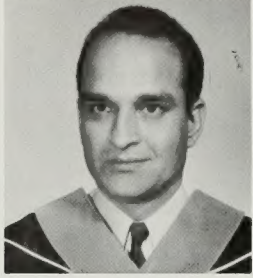

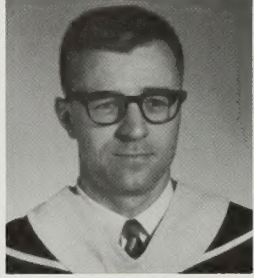

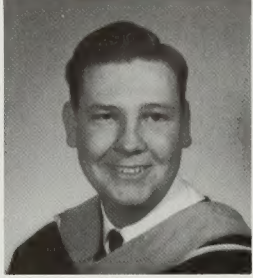

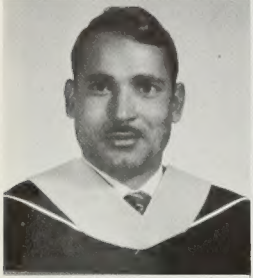

Wives of graduate students met throughout the year to gain an understanding of their husband's careers.
